Mesabi Range Planning Could Be Blow To Canada

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—A bid to breathe new life in the United States' iron-rich Mesabi Range could have important implications for Canada.

Voters in Minnesota have overwhelmingly approved a proposed amendment to their state constitution that in effect will assure a tax break for companies which come in to develop the abundant reserves of low-grade ore.

The amendment means, Canadian observers say, U.S. companies could turn their interests from the rich iron-ore deposits in the lower St. Lawrence area back to the Mesabi Range.

If so, it could mean a slowdown in further development of the Quebec and Labrador ore bodies until other markets are found and, more immediately, could cost Canadian shippers operating in the St. Lawrence Seaway a portion of what has proved to be a lucrative piece of business.

Last year about 5,000,000 tons of iron ore were shipped through the seaway from Septiles, Que., alone. Shipments this year are running much heavier, sources say.

USE CANADIAN SHIPS

Most iron-ore shipments from Canadian ports to the U.S. are carried in Canadian vessels.

Lawson Kaake, vice-president and general manager of Upper Lakes Shipping Co. Ltd., says it is too early to have a firm assessment of effects of the Minnesota amendment.

But indications are lost business is certainly a possibility—either because of lower shipping volumes in U.S. mills once the Mesabi developments start operating, or because future cargo increases that had been anticipated now may not appear.

"We have not yet been in touch with our customers to discuss the matter, but we are very much aware of it," Mr. Kaake says.

The Mesabi Range, for half a century and more the key supplier of rich ore to U.S. steel mills, has been depressed in recent years as the rich ore was depleted. Thousands of miners have been laid off as 32 mines in the area closed.

CANADIAN ORE AVAILABLE

Development of huge reserves of low-grade taconite was considered economically feasible—especially with good-quality Canadian ore readily available—until Minnesota voters approved the proposed amendment.

It promises for the next 25 years taxes on taconite production will not be higher than the corporate tax level in the state. Previously, some taxes on mining have been well above the corporate levy.

Approval of the amendment a week ago had immediate results.

U.S. Steel Corp. announced it will build a large taconite plant at Iron Mountain, Minn., to cost between $120,000,000 and $150,000,000. It will produce 4,500,000 tons of concentrated taconite pellets a year.

Other pelletizing mills are expected to move into the area.

CONTAINS IRON

Taconite is a hard rock containing about 25 per cent iron. A pelletizing mill crushes the rock, removes the ore and concentrates it into small pellets containing about 60 per cent iron.

Iron ore pellets have become increasingly favored in recent years by steel mills because they are more economical to use and because they make possible closer quality control.

Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. has a 10-per-cent interest in one pioneering pelletizing project in Minnesota, Erie Mining Co., which has a capacity of 8,000,000 tons a year.

A Stelco official says, however, the company has no plans to go shopping for more iron ore pellets in Minnesota or to change its development program for the Lower St. Lawrence.

British Firm Turns Down Chinese Bid For Aircraft

LONDON (AP)—The makers of a famed British airliner striving for more American sales have rejected a tentative Chinese bid to buy their long-range jet airplanes.

China's inquiry about the possible purchase of VC-10 airliners — with a range long enough for a Peking - Havana link-up — was made last spring, a spokesman for the British Aircraft Corporation said.

But the spokesman added, BAC is not considering any such deal and the Chinese have been so advised.

"The very tentative inquiry from the Chinese came to us through our agents," the spokesman said. "But the agents were instructed to advise the Chinese that the corporation would not consider any such sale."

BAC some time ago sold six, short - range Vickers Viscount planes to China for use on internal routes.

WOULD RAISE STORM

But the sale of any British long - range modern jets to Peking's civil aviation administration undoubtedly would touch off a political storm among the Allies. The Americans protested when the Vickers Viscounts were supplied to the Chinese.

Another firm of British airliner manufacturers, the Hawker Siddeley group, has been discussing the possible sale of their Comets and Trident to the Chinese. A spokesman reported the group has a stand, with models of their long-range jet planes, at the current exhibition of British traders and industrialists in Peking.

Skeptical Look Is Taken At Hall Report

TORONTO (CP) — Doctors, pharmacists and drug manufacturers took a sceptical look at the report of the Hall royal commission on health services here at the 50th annual meeting of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

Dr. Frank Turnbull, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said there would be strong reaction from doctors if governments were to adopt recommendations of the commission's report entailing radical changes in the economics of medical practice

"We are a conservative profession, and this conservatism often involves not only resistance to change, but acceptance of change after it has been made," he said.

Dr. Turnbull suggested building on existing provincial medical schemes rather than what he called the extremely rigid position of the Hall report.

Professor J. L. Summers, president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, said the commission's report reflects public opinion and cannot be ignored. However, he added that he disagreed with a number of its provisions.

H. D. Cook, president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, said that the Hall commission had not understood the nature of the drug industry. The report had ignored the costs of distributing drugs, he said.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	6♥ (!)	7♣
Dble.	Pass	?

Opening lead— six of clubs.

I don't know whether anything like this ever happened to you, but this incident occurred in a game that I played in many years ago.

At the time I had been playing bridge for a year or so, and my knowledge of the game was of course very limited. I had been invited to attend a semi-serious four-table progressive bridge party at the home of a friend of mine in Philadelphia.

It was late in the evening when the hand shown was dealt. My partner, sitting North, was the hostess, and she was in a mild state of alarm because it was time for the refreshments to be served.

So when I opened the bidding with a heart and West passed, my partner jumped directly to six hearts. Of course she didn't have the values for this bid, and might easily have used some other means to sound out the posribility of a slam, but she was very anxious to get away from the table and to be the kitchen to prepare some snacks

East, no blushing violet, came in with seven clubs at this point. Perhaps I should have made a forcing pass over seven clubs and thus invited North to bid a grand slam if she was so minded— but I doubt, first of all, that I was then familiar with this specialized bid, and, furthermore, I don't know whether I would have made a forcing pass even if I had understood its meaning.

Instead, I doubled.

West passed, and my partner, looking at me anxiously, said: "I'm terribly, sorry, partner, but I simply must make the tea. Seven hearts!"

That was the end of the bidding and West made the normal lead of a club. The spade finesse worked and so did the diamond finesse, and with the diamonds fortunately being divided 3-3 also, I was able to discard my last spade on dummy's fourth diamond. As a result, I made the grand slam.

The tea was delicious!

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
