Chemicals Deciding Factor of Future Wars

Get a More Merciful Factor of War far than High Explosives—Allics Had Plenty of Mustard Gas in 1918

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.—Sir William Pott, president of the Society of Chemical Industry, in conversation here, who spoke today on "Gas Warfare," said that at the time of the Armistice materials had been found against the gas warfare were of no avail. This material would stop a man if it was present in the atmosphere in a proportion of about one part in volume in five millions. The air was made absolutely irrespirable when affected by this material. Sir William argued that from a humanitarian viewpoint gas was a more merciful factor of warfare than high explosives and its results had been shown to be far less destructive. As to mustard gas, a preparation which put a man out of the fighting strength

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. DAVID COBB

The sad death of Mrs. David Cobb of Fortune Bridge, in the 47th year of her age, took place at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Webster, Brudenell, on Tuesday last, Aug. 24th. She had gone on a visit to her daughter about a month ago.

Mrs. Cobb had suffered much in the last year of her life. She underwent two serious operations in the P. E. I. Hospital, but notwithstanding medical skill and kind nursing, her life was not to be spared.

The Christian patience and fortitude displayed during her illness were made possible only by her trust she put in her Saviour and the strength she obtained from him. The funeral took place to the Bay Fortune cemetery where services were conducted by the pastor, church and grave by her pastor, Rev. E. Lockhart. A husband and twelve children are left to mourn the loss of a devoted and cherished wife and mother, all of whom with other relatives have the sincere sympathy of the whole community in their bereavement.

for a period of six weeks, the Allics, he said, had enough at the time of the Armistice to have rendered the Germans to wading kneed. He concluded that chemical agencies would be the sole deciding factor of future wars.

At the opening of the sessions of the convention the incoming president, Professor R. P. Rutten, of McGill University, made his inaugural speech. He pointed out that Canada was not yet much advanced beyond the pioneer stage of industrial development, and said that the visit of the society to the Dominion and its choice of a Canadian president would have rich fruits if it led to the further introduction of scientific methods in Canadian industries.

At the afternoon at a special convocation of McGill University the vice-chancellor bestowed on Sir William Pott the L. L. D. degree. This concludes the visit of the convention in Canada, the delegates leaving this afternoon for a visit to Shawinigan Falls, and Grand Mere.

WELL SUPPLIED WITH FINGERS AND TOES

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—One of the finest specimens of physical manhood ever passed upon by the New York Municipal Civil Service Commission doctors is John M. Cope, who has six perfect fingers on each hand and six perfect toes on each foot. He failed to pass a physical test because of a slight deformity due to a missing finger or toe. But the doctors would like to have a record of six-fingered and six-toed men. John Cope, who lives in Brooklyn, has a daughter who has seven fingers on each hand, and seven toes on each foot, according to the civil service examiners, who are met in any great numbers growing thickly on the back and in the feather tracts running back from the breast, indicating that these men have started to molt. If their combs and general appearance indicate non-production of the pelvic bones are also helpful in making this test as the spread of the bones is not as wide as in the normal. If the spread between these bones measures two fingers or less the probability is that the men are not laying, while if the spread is greater, together with other indications mentioned, she is probably laying.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR STEAMSHIP

VANCOUVER, Aug. 30.—Practically all hope for the government steamer Canadian Importer has been given up. Captain Wingate, of the Canadian Importer, who has been searching since Saturday morning for a general importer, found none.

A second discouraging aspect of the tragic affair is that though wait her has swept that part of the Pacific during the last three days, if Captain Bissett and the thirty-two members of his crew remaining on the vessel actually succeeded in getting clear, in the ship's life boats, the heavy seas over the week-end would have given them a strenuous time.

CUJL POOR PRODUCING HENS

Work should be started in Summer and During Early Fall Months—Comb is Indicator

The hens should be culled out during the summer and early fall months, beginning to cull out the poor producers just as soon as the poor laying, which is usually in July and August. When a hen is laying her comb will be large, full of blood, and bright red in color. As she stops laying, the comb becomes the small and shrunken, pale or dull in color, and is usually rather hard. Another good indication to use in selecting those hens which start to molt early—usually the poorest producers. While a hen which has molted most of her feathers is very easy to pick out by sight without examination, the only way to ascertain accurately when the hens begin to molt is to handle them. Before the body and wing feathers are molting in any great numbers, they will find short pin feathers growing thickly on the back and in the feather tracts running back from the breast, indicating that these hens have started to molt. If their combs and general appearance indicate non-production of the pelvic bones are also helpful in making this test as the spread of the bones is not as wide as in the normal. If the spread between these bones measures two fingers or less the probability is that the men are not laying, while if the spread is greater, together with other indications mentioned, she is probably laying.

MOONLIGHT IN THE ALPS

Light, marvellously soft yet penetrating, everywhere diffused, everywhere reflected without a break, poured from the moon high above our heads in a sky tinted through all shades and modulations of blue, from turquoise on the horizon to opaque sapphire at the zenith—"doler color." (It is difficult to use the word "color" for this scene without suggesting an exaggeration. The blue is almost indefinable, yet felt. But if possible, the total effect of the night landscape should be rendered by careful exclusion of tints from the world-palette. The art of the etcher is more needed than that of the painter.) Heavily overhead is set with stars, showing intensely, smouldering with diamond-like in Sirius, changing from orange to crimson and green in the swart fire of yonder double star. On the snow this moonlight falls not in hard shadows, but in tones of cream and ivory, rounding the curves of drift. The mountain peaks alone glitter with white light and strong blue shadow, but in tones of cream and ivory, rounding the curves of drift. PROPER DRAINAGE ESSENTIAL

Heavy Application of Manure Will Go Long Way Toward Correcting Alkali Condition.

Drainage is the most important factor in alkaline soils in nearly all cases. Good drainage is an absolute necessity in alkali correction. When drainage is assured, a heavy application of horse manure will go a long way toward correcting the alkali condition. It may be necessary to apply some fertilizer carrying large amounts of potash. Corn is not the best crop to consider in handling alkaline soils and, on the other hand, better results are obtained if the soil is completely neutralized.
