Dutch Princess Irene Plans To Wed Outside Netherlands

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Princess Irene, who gave up her right of accession to the Dutch throne for love of Prince Carlos of Bourbon - Parma has disclosed she is joining in the political campaign he wages as a pretender to the throne of Spain.

The decision complicated further the position of the pretty, 24-year-old princess as a member of the Netherlands royal family and as a consequence she:

Cancelled a scheduled flight with her parents, Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard, and her sister, Crown Princess Beatrix, for a 10-day state visit to Mexico.

Made known through her secretary she and her 33-year-old fiance will be married outside the Netherlands, though neither the place nor the date were specified.

There was speculation that the couple might marry in Paris, where Carlos' parents have a home, or in Lisbon or Madrid.

Queen Juliana's secretary, Dr. J. Van Der Heeven, told reporters she and her husband learned of Irene's decision with regret.

The blonde girl said she will join her future husband immediately in his work, with all the ensuing consequences, and wanted to avoid any political difficulties for her mother.

She is a convert to Roman Catholicism, the faith of her fiance, from the Dutch Reformed faith traditional in the reigning house of the Netherlands for four centuries. That and her engagement to a man from Spain, against which the Dutch once fought an 80-year war for religious liberty, created a constitutional stir last winter.

Carlos is a leader of the Carlist movement which is trying to build him up for the Spanish throne. His rights are disputed by Juan Carlos, son of the pretender on the other side of the royal family, who is given far more chance of winning if the monarchy is restored in the land Generalissimo Francisco Franco has ruled for 25 years.

Queen Juliana and her ministers decided in conference after announcement of the engagement Feb. 9 that Irene and Carlos would live outside the Netherlands after their marriage. The political ambitions of Carlos constitutionally prevented Irene from keeping her second - in - line rights to the throne. The government said the fact she had turned Roman Catholic would not have barred her.

DEMONSTRATION FEARED

The government, respecting the wish of Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard agreed both civil and church weddings would be performed in the Netherlands. Fearing Carlist demonstrations, however, the government wanted them to be quiet affairs in a village or rural area.

This apparently was not what Carlos had in mind. It is known that the queen and government tried to find a suitable place near the royal palace.

Irene and Carlos made big headlines in Dutch newspapers when they were received Monday in private audience by Pope Paul VI at the Vatican.

They flew to Holland with Prince Xavier, father of Carlos. It was expected that the date and place of the wedding would be announced at any moment.

2 Miami Detectives Testify In Coffin Case Investigation

By STRUAN MATHESON

MONTREAL (CP)—Two Miami detectives have testified they were convinced Mohawk Indian Francis Thompson was telling the truth when he repudiated a confession in which he said he killed two United States hunters in the Gaspe Peninsula.

Detective Lieutenant James Minix and Sergeant Milton Chesser were the first witnesses to testify at the three-week Montreal hearings of the Coffin inquiry.

Both witnesses said Thompson told them he made up the story to get out of jail in Miami, where he was being held in connection with thefts from a yacht. Thompson was subsequently freed on the charges and ordered deported.

The Quebec royal commission hearings were set up after Montreal author Jacques Hebert published a book j'Accuse les Assassins de Coffin in which he claimed Wilbert Coffin was railroaded to the gallows in 1954 for the rifle-slaying of one of three American hunters in the Gaspe Penninsula three years earlier.

Much of the cross-examination Tuesday dwelt on the number of persons allowed to see Thompson in jail at the time of his confession at the end of November, 1958, and his retraction a few days later.

ENGINEERING CHARGE

Mr. Hebert's book contends Thompson's retraction was engineered by Quebec political authorities and that the Quebec government sent lawyer Conrad Moreau to Miami to buy Thompson's silence.

Both detectives denied any Mr. Moreau had been to the jail to see Thompson, picked up a few days before his confession.

They said the only Quebecer to see Thompson at the jail was author Hebert himself, and then only in company with the detectives.

Thompson signed a confession saying he and a Johnny Green hitch-hiked from Montreal to the Gaspe, stole a Jeep in the village of Gaspe, then sought out hunters they had heard were in the nearby bush.

The confession said the head hunters' guide had left and that Thompson and Green held them up at gunpoint. However, the confession said the elder hunter went for his gun and was shot by Thompson. Green shot the other but didn't kill him and Thompson finished him off. The pair then stole $600.

JEEP DUMPED

The confession said the pair dumped the Jeep in the St. Lawrence River.

The witnesses said Thompson made the confession during questioning on the theft count. The confession was later recorded in a room bugged with a microphone but the tapes were not useable.

Detective Minix said Thompson retracted the confession after smashing the camera of a photographer who tried to take a picture of him leaving Miami' prison.

"Right after that, he said he didn't commit any murder our had made up the story," the witness said.

He added Thompson said he lied originally to convince Miami policemen to let him go back to Canada where he would not stay in jail.

The detective said Thompson told police he knew so much about the Coffin case because he had been following it closely.

The hearing is continuing.

There are some game contracts you reach where, after you've seen dummy, you start to wonder how your side got that high.

Granting that it's all your partner's fault, which it has to be if you ever expect to attain any real stature in bridge, you're still supposed to try to make the contract even if it looks only vaguely possible.

For example, suppose you're South and become declarer in four hearts. You see that your scalp belongs to the Indians — because obviously you have to lose the A - K of trumps, a spade and a club.

There are two ways to approach this type of situation. First, you look for a legitimate way to make the hand. In doing so you try to imagine some way the opponents' cards can be laid out so that the hand can be made on its merits.

Second, if you can't find any distribution of the cards that would allow the contract to be made, you try to dig up a scheme whereby you can legitimately do the opponents out of what is their proper due.

For example, you could enter dummy and lead the queen of hearts hoping that the player on your right has the K x and will cover with the king, catching his partner's lone ace.

But when you think about it some more you realize that East wasn't born yesterday, so you go back to your first thought to see if there isn't a straight-up-and-down method of making four hearts.

And then it hits you. If the diamonds are divided 3-3, the opponents may not be able to beat you at all. So you take three rounds of diamonds, congratulate yourself after everybody follows suit, and lead your last diamond.

Regardless of what either defender does, you discard a spade. You lose this trick, you lose a club, and you also lose one trump trick.

So you make four hearts all right, and, what's more, there was nothing your right honorable opponents could do about it.

Rusk Reviews NATO Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk said here Western Europe, menaced by many more missiles than are aimed at the United States, should close ranks in support of collective action against Communist threats and aggression.

He said new patterns of action are needed to deal with a wide range of trouble spots from Viet Nam to Cuba.

In a major speech on U.S. NATO policy, Rusk indicated the Johnson administration will work with those allies who are willing to co-operate on specific problems, and simply by-pass those who refuse to do so.

He did not mention France in this respect, but the United States and France are split over several issues, including Southeast Asia and Cuban trade. On trade with Cuba, and the Communist bloc generally, the United States and Britain also disagree.

Rusk sharply reminded the European allies that they still need NATO, because massive Soviet ground and nuclear forces are still arrayed against Europe.

"In the absence of assured arrangements for the mutual reduction of arms, it would be foolhardy to dismantle the military strength of NATO," he said.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X N
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
