General's Korean Charges Said Fantastic By British

NEW YORK (AP)—A 18-year-old secret interview, published here, quotes Gen. Douglas MacArthur as saying he could have crushed the Communists in Korea but for "the perfidy of the British and . . . constant harassment and interference from Washington."

The New York World-Telegram and Sun published the account by Scripps-Howard correspondent Jim G. Lucas of an interview with MacArthur here Jan. 20, 1954.

"Jim felt honor-bound not to report any of it as long as General MacArthur was alive," the newspaper said in a story copyrighted by the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Lucas wrote that MacArthur "said every message he sent to Washington and every message Washington sent to him was shown to the British by the State Department, and that, within 48 hours, was relayed by the British, either through India or through the Russian Embassy in London, to the Chinese Communists."

"Thus, he said, the Chinese Communists knew in advance every step he proposed to take. The Chinese Communists decided to come into the Korean War, he said, 'after being assured by the British that MacArthur would be hamstrung and could not effectively oppose them.'"

At Washington, a British Embassy spokesman described the reported charges against Britain as being "without foundation." He said it was "utterly fantastic" to suggest that Britain would "sell out" Commonwealth troops in Korea by tipping the Communist Chinese to MacArthur's plans.

WOULD BOMB BRIDGES

At the Wake Island conference with President Truman in October, 1950, MacArthur was reported as saying "he told President Truman that if the Chinese Communists intervened in Korea, he would let them cross the Yalu River and then bomb their bridges behind them, cutting their supply lines and causing them to starve a while before being destroyed."

"He insists this strategy was relayed by the British to the Chinese Communists, with assurances he (MacArthur) would not be permitted to do any such thing."

Lucas said MacArthur planned to follow the defeat of the Chinese by sowing "a five-mile-wide belt of radioactive cobalt—which he assured me 'we had in abundance'—along the Yalu, thus permanently sealing Korea off from China."

"Gen. MacArthur frequently expressed bitterness when he spoke of Truman, but he paid him grudging respect as 'a man of raw courage and guts . . . the little bastard honestly believes he is a patriot!'"

When North Korea invaded South Korea, MacArthur was quoted as saying Truman "reacted instinctively, like the gutter fighter he is—and you've got to admire him."

Lucas' report was in the form of a memorandum to his editors. The newspaper said it was publishing the account "believing it is an important historic document."

The report, dated Jan. 25, five days after the interview, quoted MacArthur as having issued orders to the air force to bomb the Yalu River bridges after the Chinese intervened. It continued:

"Four hours later—just as the planes were preparing to take off on this mission—he said his order was 'peremptorily' countermanded by Gen. George Marshall, then U.S. secretary of defence. Similarly, he said, plans to bomb the Yalu River power plants were vetoed by Marshall 'acting as the errand boy of the state department.'"

MacARTHUR'S VIEWS

Lucas' memo contained many points, the first dealing with the Chinese Communist matter and MacArthur's view of the role played by Washington and Britain.

Other points:

2. "Gen. MacArthur is convinced there will be no further fighting in Korea, though there will be no permanent peace . . ."

3. Having learned that infantry is not enough, the Chinese "sued for an armistice and embarked on a program to create a modern fighting machine. It may be five years or it may be 25, he said, but Red China will not again become an aggressor until she has a machine that can follow through . . ."

4. "Gen. MacArthur believes we have lost Asia—and bitterly blames this on the 'Anglo-Saxophiles' in the state department. He says time is on the Communists' side and they have only to wait and 'let this ripe apple drop in their laps'."

5. "Gen. MacArthur contended that President Dwight D. Eisenhower's order withdrawing two divisions from Korea after the war was 'part of the general plan to retreat to the Anglo-Saxon island fortress' . . . He charged the Eisenhower administration does not make decisions on the basis of 'is this right or wrong?' but purely on the basis of 're-electing Eisenhower and a Republican Congress'. . . ." MacArthur said he was never consulted about the Far East.

6. "Gen. MacArthur said Gen. Mark Clark, our Far East commander in 1952, 'initiated his own retirement' because he 'couldn't take it any more'.

"Gen. MacArthur expressed pity—tinged with contempt—for Gens. John E. Hull and Maxwell Taylor, successors of Clark. . . . He said Taylor is a 'careful and extremely ambitious young man with the peak of his career still ahead of him' and will never do anything to 'jeopardize his career. . . ."

RATES COMMANDERS

7. "Of all his field commanders, Gen. MacArthur rated Lt.-Gen. Walton Walker highest and Gen. Matthew Ridgway at the bottom.

"Gen. MacArthur referred to Ridgway as 'a chameleon'. Ridgway, he said, was in full accord with his (MacArthur's) plans for winning the war, until he discovered these plans were regarded with disfavor in Washington 'and then Ridgway did a complete flip-flop in 24 hours'.

"He said Ridgway was completely to blame for the prisoner-of-war riots on Koje Island but walked out and left Gen. Clark to solve the problem.

8. "Gen. MacArthur naturally longs to return to the Far East—an area he loves and understands and 'where I spent 20 years of my life'—but he would not consider it under present conditions. . . ."

9. "He spoke at great length about the present organization of the defence department, which he says has reduced the chiefs of staffs to the role of 'press agents' pretty boys, speechmakers and front men'. . . .

"As of now, he said, all major tactical and strategic policies are arrived at by committees of 'frequently brilliant but invariably inexperienced' junior officers in secondary echelons. . . .

"In event of another war, we will certainly lose the first battles because this system is too unwieldly', he said."

10. This set forth MacArthur's appraisal of Truman.

11. "Gen. MacArthur said the order to intervene in Korea was the biggest surprise of his life. . . ."

1♠	Pass	1NT	Pass
2♥	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♥	Pass	3♠	Pass
3NT	Pass	4♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	5♦	Pass

Opening lead — nine of diamonds.

The strangest things happen at the bridge table, even in the highest circles. For example, look at this hand played between France and Great Britain during the European championship of 1962.

When Bacherich and Ghestem held the North-South cards for France, they landed in five spades on the bidding shown. Obviously, this was not a desirable contract, but whether their highly artificial system was at fault, or whether they simply used bad judgment in getting so high, is more than I can say.

However, Ghestem luckily made the contract when the defense slipped in the course of the play. West led a diamond. Declarer took it in dummy and played the eight of spades, which was allowed to hold.

South now led a heart to the ace, catching the queen, and then, apparently changing his mind about how to play the hand, led another trump.

West could have defeated the contract by taking the A-K of spades and returning a diamond, but he returned a club instead and declarer wound up making eleven tricks for a score of 650 points.

There must have been something in the cards not visible to the naked eye, or something in the air that excited the North-South players unduly, because this is how the bidding went at the second table, where the British pair, Flint and Swimer, bid as follows:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♦	Pass
3♥	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♥	Pass	4♠	Pass

This contract was of course doubled, and declarer went down two to bring the French team a gain of 1,150 points on the deal. Why the British South bid again over four spades, after having shown his values in full previously, is somewhat of a mystery, but that's the way things sometimes go, even in championship events.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
