This Boy Is Justified In Protecting Himself

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 17, and for six months I have been going out with a boy, 19, whom I love dearly. And I know he loves me.

He has gone out with other girls before and I with other boys. We both know what we want and we talk occasionally about our future and marriage. However, I have a year of high school yet.

About two months ago Dave began to change. He used to call me two or three times a week. Now it is understood that we go out on Saturdays and I am lucky if he calls me in advance about that.

We used to date the whole weekend; now he has all sorts of excuses why not. It makes me cry to think he may be dating someone else while we are going steady. If I mention that, he scolds me for being ridiculous and says if he didn't love me he wouldn't be seeing me and thinking of marriage.

My second problem is that we go out alone. We double-date only occasionally with my sister or his sister or friends. After bowling we park some place... and I am afraid that sooner or later we may lose our heads entirely.

We come of good church-going families and wouldn't want to hurt them or maybe ruin our lives. Don't tell me not to see Dave any more; it just wouldn't work. We love each other so much we would die for each other.... Please help me before it is too late and give me your opinion of our relationship. P.F.

DEAR P.F.: Actually your problems, as you describe them, are in relation to what really amount to one problem, namely, the problem of yourself.

A certain weakness of character and lack of wisdom on your part — a lack of moral understanding, integrity and fortitude; a lack of social perspective and individual life purpose; an overall ignorance of how to become personally responsible for your fate or fortune in your growing - up years — a regrettable inventory of this sort sums up your romantic difficulty.

As of now, you are disposed to be a dependent, proprietary, parasitical sort of sweetheart to Dave. As if his love for you should make him somehow accountable to you for all his actions and for your unhappiness, if he disappoints you, or in the event you coast into a ruinous premature sex involvement with him.

In short, your problems with Dave are symptomatic. They clearly illustrate your primary unreadiness, Character - wise, to participate realistically, competently and self - reliantly in the give - and - take of healthy social interchange with contemporary - age persons you care about.

From your immature, unreasoning, self - centered view, it seems unfair and heart - breaking, no doubt, that the boy you love, who also loves you (though your both are too young to marry as yet) is easing away from a mutually exclusive dating routine and possibly seeing other girls.

Hower, from the objective view of fair play for all concerned, surely Dave is justified in protecting himself as best he can from your troubles one clinging variety tendency, which threatens to nail him down and stake him out before he feels fully ready or able for a total life - lasting commitment. As he says, indirectly, he's still in the stage of simply thinking about a future with you in it.

It might be better, of course, if he had the blunt courage to tell you he needs (or craves) a margin of space and time, freely granted, for working things out in his own mind and spirit. But perhaps he doesn't understand his own prudent motivation in backing away, even while liking (or loving) you a lot.

Now for a few pointers on how to help yourself: You must accept personal responsibility for your happiness in relation to Dave and generally. His interest in dating you occasionally, or once a week regularly, doesn't entitle you to feel he's your fate. When he's out of sight, put him out of mind by seeing other friends and wooing other dates to fill in your leisure. About the risky parking: it's your job to stop that. A boy won't insist on that sort of thing, if the girl he likes or loves says no. He expects her to set the pace and maintain the rule of how she's to be treated. So the only problem there is your own lack of standards, backbone and or gumption.

In short, my dear, the cure for your difficulties is to grow up — a road that leads uphill all the way, yes, to the very end, as the poet Christina Rossetti has said. M.H.

Turkey Imports Are Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hays disagreed Monday that imports of United States turkeys are hurting Canadian producers.

However, he told the Commons in reply to a series of questions by Conservative members his department is watching the situation closely. If it showed signs of becoming serious the government would initiate talks with turkey breeders.

Alfred D Hales (PC — Wellington South) complained that American turkeys come into Canada in wrappers of Canadian processors. He suggested this was confusing to consumers.

Report Given On Flag Flying

Mr. Lamontagne said 47 federal buildings in Montreal fly the ensign. Of the 11 which do not, four have no masts.

543 Pints Blood Needed To End Man's Bleeding

VANCOUVER (CP) — Raymond Perks, 21, owes his life to possibly more than 500 persons in British Columbia.

He hasn't met any of them. It's unlikely he ever will.

He is a victim of a rare type of blood condition with the incongruously cheery name of Christmas Disease.

The condition is similar to hemophilia in which the blood fails to clot properly because of lack of one or more of the components that promote and control coagulation.

Following an operation early this year, Mr. Perks returned to hospital when bending from the operation wound in his shoulder failed to stop.

A long, hard fight to control the bleeding began.

He was encased in a body cast to prevent movement. For weeks pint after pint of blood plasma was dripped back into his body as his wound lost it.

The bleeding stopped May 18.

It had taken 543 pints of blood, about one-tenth of all the type A positive blood collected by the Red Cross throughout B.C. in a three-month period.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Fisherman's Truck Has Wares For Farmwives

The fishman's smart little truck stopped between a parked car and our door this afternoon. He had scarcely blown that signal which hurries the farmwives to make their selections from his wares, when Peter the three - past lad appeared, a make - believe gun — a piece of grey stick, held in a threatening position in his hand.

"I've got you now!" he said, voice low, young jaw set sternly.

"You certainly have! I'm in a bottleneck here — that's for sure!" the fishman chuckled, falling in with the make-believe... He is not too busy to have a friendly word and an interest in the children along his route. Our small ones recognize the truck as it comes in over the road-hill, on its weekly trip, and always with a pleased smile.

"What will he say today?" Peter will wonder.

"Let's play a guessing game" Alex suggested when we sat on the verandah in the heat of the day, to catch there the shade and a bit of the passing breeze. "I'm thinking of a fruit. These grow on a tree, and are purple or yellow or blue."

"Plums!" we said.

"Plums!" Peter smiled.

"Right!" Alex nodded. "Now it's your turn" he said. Laden hay - wagons came down the farm-lane to the barn. And now Jamie and Gage and Mack, faces, shirts, sweat - stained came by in search of a cooling drink.

"It's a hot day" Jamie offered.

"But there's a nice breeze in the field" Gage remembered.

"And it's the right hay-day!" Mack smiled.

In a delightful surprise, and among the summer - guests to the Island who came by today, was a daughter of an Island - farm, who had been a classmate and good friend of ours at P.W.C. back in the years. There it was that a youthful company of maidens in a certain "Division" were prepared by excellent teachers for the role of schoolma'am, the majority were later to fill. Presently our friend's path and ours parted, she to feed that popular call of then to "Go West, Girl, go West!" and we to keep to Island ways. Only seldom since have we met, but always it has been to find that the interesting and clever girl of former days had not lost any of those kindly traits we knew.

She has recently returned from a leisurely trip through the British Isles. There she visited the ancestral Scottish castle of her name, as well as numbers of those historical places and scenes of which the Old Land is so full. She was privileged too to visit on The Continent, and altogether thoroughly enjoyed her several months overseas . . . Well loved by her one time friends, she is not so bound by ties of home as are we. A girlish, attractive lady, she enjoys that state of single blessedness which leaves no farmhouse behind, no husband to regard wistfully its cold chimney, no small ones like Alex and Peter to turn away from the rooms with a disappointed, "I can't fine her! She must be away." Nevertheless she too has a busy life, both interesting and full.

"But this will never do, Ellen" James offers of this late nighthour. "Not in the haying!" he reminds us.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good - night.....
