Mortgage Sale

To be sold by public auction in front of the Law Courts Building in Charlottetown on Thursday, the 7th day of June, 1934, at 12 o'clock noon all the estate, right, title and interest of Ivan R. Clow in and to all that tract piece and parcel of land situate lying and being on Lot 1 or township number thirty-one in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, bounded and described as follows, that is to say: Commencing on the west side of the Colville Road at the northeast angle of a farm in possession of Neil McKinnon, thence west fifty-seven chains or to the east boundary line of farms fronting on the road leading to Lot Thirty, thence north ten chains to land formerly in possession of Allan McSwain, now in possession of Judson H. Clow, thence east along the boundary of the last mentioned land to the Colville Road aforesaid, thence southerly along said road to the place of commencement, containing sixty acres of land little more or less.

The above sale will be made under and by virtue of and pursuant to a power of sale contained in a certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date the fifth day of August, A.D. 1930, and made between Ivan R. Clow of New Haven in Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, farmer, and Edsel Clow, his wife of the first part, and W. Chester S. McLure of Charlottetown in said County and Island, trader, of the other part, (Mortgagee), and which said Mortgage by reason of certain indentures of Assignment of Mortgage is now duly vested in the undersigned; and because of default having been made in payment of the principal money and interest secured thereby.

For further particulars apply to G. R. Holmes, Solicitor, Cameron Block, Charlottetown.

Dated this 14th day of May, A.D. 1934.

MABEL R. CLOW,
Assignee of Mortgage.

"GLIMPSES OF PARADISE"

Tuesday, December 26th.

With the way I've been dawdling I'm not at all sure I'll have my social service credits for the Junior League.

I wonder if marrying Jonathan wouldn't serve as one? Surely that is a social service, and my family are awfully bright and healthy. I'm doing the service for. That ought to make me a life member with an honorary place on every entertainment staff and a stellar role in every play!

I've got to make the League and be in the play just this one year before I'm married because I must have this one last chance to gallop around without the ball and chain Jonathan playfully threatened!

After that I'll have long trains on my gowns and will trail around looking even slimmer than I am and as I pass, I'll hear people whisper "Isn't she young and beautiful? Of course she married him for his money!"

Perhaps, sometime, when I get the moral courage of Mrs. Larry, I'll wonder if I should have married Jonathan playfully threatened!

"Ah—yes. You're quite right about it. This frock cost me four hours of boredom and this necklace I paid for with exactly three quarters and four grudgingly given kisses."

I wonder if Jonathan will ever try to kiss me? Strange thing to conjecture about one's fiancé—but I wonder.

It hurts to think that sometime his ugly lips may touch mine where those other lips have touched them! I have the feeling that I want to keep my lips as they are—un-kissed by any save My Stranger! Even if I never see him again.

LATER

Once more I have glimpsed Paradise!

Jonathan took me to the theatre this evening. A woman sitting back of us discussed us quite frankly with her companion.

"Is he father and daughter, or are they married?" I hear her whisper.

Then she added:

"Get sight of her left hand if you can and see if she's wearing a wedding ring."

I kept my left hand under the fur scarf in my lap.

A theatre with Jonathan really isn't bad. All one can do is sit in one's seat and if the play is in the evening, one doesn't even talk. Of course there's the program to read between the acts.

But all of this is incidental!

After the show Jonathan suggested supper at a restaurant. As far as I had deked myself for the sacrifice, I was willing to be seen as much as possible.

So we went from the theatre to an eating place. As we were climbing out of Jonathan's car I noticed a number of men coming toward us. My senses caught a subtle something in the atmosphere. I looked toward them. And there his eyes, shining, bright and looking at me—My Stranger!

I stopped suddenly, my arms half outstretched. A cry half escaped my lips.

He pushed through the crowd toward me. Jonathan had my arm and was taking me on.

I half turned and held out my hand to the restaurant.

"Ah—Madamoiselle!" His voice was velvet soft. He caught my fingers, and kissed them lightly.

"THE SALE BEGINS"

Wednesday, Dec. 27th.

The light touch of My Stranger's lips lined on my fingers for the fraction of a second, then he was gone! And Jonathan dragged me on.

"What kind of fool business is that!" he growled as we moved into the vestibule.

"A school friend of mine," I murmured and looked away to hide the lie.

One more moment of Paradise has been accorded me. I feel ready to drop down on my knees and give thanks for it! He loves me still in that sweet way, for no man can kiss the hand of a woman who holds lightly or scornfully! He might kiss her lips—but not her hand!

So, even though I am a pawn of luxury, I am happy this night!

Jonathan and I talked of dates at supper. We decided that February is not too soon—rather Mama decided it. Of course he wasn't there with us but she dominated me from where she was so that I made it impossible for Jonathan to do other than suggest an early date.

That, with a kiss of my lovely Stranger still warm on my fingers! Oh, if this night I could walk down the hall to Mother's room and tell her of this kiss, this place on my fingers which I have kissed a thousand times! If I could tell her of the intonation of his, "Ah—Madamoiselle!" and it's ability to warm this heart of mine!

But mother would laugh. And some day when the fancy struck her, she'd mimic it. It would serve only to increase my dislike for her, instead of cementing a confidence, an understanding and a love between us.

So I shall be the keeper of my own counsel.

Jonathan is paying in advance for a soul to be delivered upon demand! Mother had borrowed money of him!

I picked up my room extension this morning to call Rita Warren and was startled to hear Jonathan's voice. Naturally I expected to hear him ask for me. But she didn't. He was conversing with mother and I had no part in the thing.

"Certainly—I can let you have almost any amount you need," I heard him say.

And Mama cooed, "That's so sweet of you. Now I'm going to ask you to come for this evening."

"Thank you, I'll be glad to," Jonathan said and that ended the conversation.

Of course I said nothing to mama about it, I don't know that I have any right to criticize her means of getting money. Anyhow if she needs it, and evidently the family coffers are about wiped out, I'm glad she's able to get it somehow.

Jonathan came to tea. And I learned that he takes three lumps and as much cream as can be poured in on top of the tea.

While we were nibbling our cakes and drinking our tea the telephone rang. I rushed to answer it! And then nearly fainted when I heard the voice coming over the wire.

"I had to call you—had to hear your voice!" My Stranger was saying those wonderful tones I loved.

"I'm so glad," I almost whispered it, fearing the others might hear.

"Can I see you ever—again?" he asked.

"Yes—yes! Anytime you want to see me!"

In Memoriam

MR. A. J. NICHOLSON

It was with feelings of deep regret that the many friends of A. J. Nicholson learned of his death at his home at the early age of 58 years. Although he had been ailing for three weeks his death came suddenly.

Angus Joe as he was familiarly called had been to the Yukon when the gold rush was on and he related many hair raising incidents which occurred during his stay in the land of the midnight sun.

He was a man of sterling character and his word was his bond. He leaves to mourn besides a loving and dutiful wife (Annie Nicholson) four children, Daniel J. Christie, Muriel and Myrtle, all at home, and an brother Alexander of Charlottetown, three sisters, Mrs. Katherine MacQueen of Boston, Sadie, Mrs. A. Newman Furness of Vancouver, Anna, Mrs. J. M. Furness of Vernon, P. E. I. Fredrick presided at the funeral which was held at the St. John Cemetery, Belfast to await the glorious resurrection morn. Services at the home were conducted by Rev. D. J. Griffith, pastor of Belfast Church. A large concourse of people were in attendance to pay their respect to one who had been most highly respected by all. The pall bearers were William MacLeod, J. Rooney, Umpire—R. McClintock. (Patriot please copy)

FRUIT-A-TIVES GAVE USE OF HANDS AND LEGS... SWORN STATEMENT BY RHEUMATISM VICTIM!

In order that other sufferers may benefit and be sure of the facts, Mr. Love writes from a sworn statement of the relief Fruit-a-tives brought him.

"I do solemnly declare that four years ago I was stricken with Rheumatism very badly. I couldn't move my arms or legs and I was in bed for many months. I started taking Fruit-a-tives. Soon afterwards I was able to get up again. I feel fine now and have full use of my hands and legs."

A sworn statement to the above effect was made before a Notary Public at Toronto, October 24th, 1933. Original on file.

AFTER AN ILLNESS you need the "VITAL 3"

THE VITAL 3

IT is the slow recovery from an illness that is so discouraging. But with the help of the "Vital 3" (calcium, phosphorus and iron) contained in Fellows' Syrup, the three vital substances of the body—the bony foundation, the nerve force directing all energy, and the blood which carries nourishment to every cell of the body—are strengthened so rapidly that recovery occurs in a much shorter time.

For more than 60 years, physicians in 52 countries have prescribed Fellows' Syrup to convalescents, run-down people, undernourished children, maternity cases, and to bronchial patients. Long experience has shown that the "Vital 3" are needed when weakened systems have to be rebuilt.

Your druggist has FELLOWS' SYRUP in two sizes. Make sure that you get the SYRUP with the "Vital 3" by looking for the word "FELLOWS" on the label.

well as ordinary grocers' and dry-goods stores. Mr. Donnelly's clerks and salesmen have had the joy of smoking smuggled cigarettes here, or rather, for cigarettes that people had tried to smuggle, for the cigarettes were honestly bought by the grocer at the regular Custom-house sale of seized goods. It was the sort of shop that Mr. Donnelly's clerks and salesmen carried a proud and constant renewal of this dynamic, powerful element is necessary to build energy and strength and to maintain life. A severe illness always depletes the store of iron. If enough iron is not supplied every day the blood will take what it needs from the small reserve stores in the liver, spleen and bone marrow, thus weakening the entire body structure. Anemia and thin blood simply mean insufficient iron in the system.

Penn. Oarsmen Win Three Races

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Pennsylvania oarsmen carried a proud gleam in their eyes today after all but sweeping the annual Regatta of the American Rowing Association here Saturday.

Clipping a day in which the Varsity 150-pound crew and the freshmen won their respective events, the Penn Varsity boatload won the historic Adams Cup race after leading almost from the start. The Varsitymen pulled over the Henley course in six minutes, 18 seconds to lead Navy home by more than a length with Harvard another length back.

Navy took the junior varsity race to score the only interruption to the Penn sweep toward a memorable day of victory.

RANGERS DOWN BEAVERS

The King-Square Rangers defeated the St. Avards Beavers Saturday by a score of 22 to 20. Heavy hitting by Davis and Gallant, Hooper and Gallant pitched good ball for the winners.

The lineup follows:
Rangers—Catcher, Art Cantwell; pitcher, B. Hooper; 1st base, E. Gallant; 2nd base, J. Davis; 3rd base, W. Dingwell; short stop, J. Herald; fielders, J. McKinnon, E. Carroll and T. Flanagan.

Beavers—Catcher, Blaquiere; pitcher, Dooley; 1st base, McIntyre; 2nd base, Lewis; 3rd base, Gregory; short stop, Down; fielders, Mahar, Hudson.

ANCIENT SHOP DICKENS LIKE TO DISAPPEAR

LONDON, May 27 (CP). That shy little grocer's shop in Bell Yard, off Cornhill, one of the oddities of the City of London, is about to vanish from the spot it has occupied for more than 300 years. For many years it has looked more like a shrine of a piece of the old city projected among the monumental banks and insurance offices than a real business shop.

It is not quite like any other shop. It has candles in case of electric lights failure, brushes for bank messengers' tall hats, wineglasses for offices that run short on Lord Mayor's Show day, expensive tinned foods for emergencies, feather brushes to dust high pictures, irons for ironing bootlaces of governing directors for special occasions, as
