ELLEN'S DIARY

'The Lady's Slipper' Takes One Away From Reality

"Gran'daddy" Alex called softly, at the door this morning, a bit hesitant to enter and see a loved one with a misery. "Which hand is the hurt one?"

"My right" James replied.

"Do you mean this one?" he indicated his own right hand.

"Yes."

Alex smiled.

"Then it's not so bad, is it Gran'daddy" he said, "because your left is the one you most use!"

Somewhat wearisome, James' day has been, in that it has been strangely inactive. We saw him stop in the yard to look off wistfully to the field in which weeding was being done, and then with slow steps, he returned soberly to the house.

Today, it so happened th this farmwife added another year to those in her collection. Sometimes this Anniversary has fallen on a day of the haying-when a haying-breeze blew and the sun blessed the workers in the field. We looked back to the highlights of happiness we had known on this day: the little things of childhood and later, that have a way of lasting through the years. There were many.

This Anniversary too brought its niceties. There was the fact that James' misfortune might have been worse; there were the smiles of the children to bless us Alex's obviously amazed to think that as he himself has his, so grandmothers too have a yearly Anniversary of birth.

There was too, in a delightful and unexpected happening, an excursion this evening in the company of a pair of sisters — interesting business ladies, these are — to town to attend the presentation of "The Lady's Slipper" the one-act play, written by Mrs. Adele Townsend, a lady of whom, we Islanders are justifiably proud. It has been said that if while attending a play, one is carried away from the present time and place, to live in mind with the players in the various scenes, then this is the proof of its charm. So this evening, we of the large audience were transported from ours, taken on the magic carpet and fascinating, that is Drama, to follow with much interest the unfolding of the play.

We also had another wish come true, when succeeding the play, we were privileged to hear an address by Dr. Helen Creighton, noted folklore writer of Dartmouth, N.S. Guest speaker at the same gathering, which was the 49th annual W.I. Convention, of interest to rural women Island-over. Delightful in the variety of its content, and presented so nicely, it was indeed a treat to be among the large number forgathered there.

"And how old are you — to be exact?" Mack questioned with a chuckle this morning.

"Oh, not much older than yourself" we grinned. Because after all, when reckoning age, years do not count. As someone has reminded us:

"Age is a quality of mind:
If you have left your dreams behind,
If hope is lost,
If you no longer look ahead,
If your ambition's fires are dead,
Then you are old.
But if from life, you take the best,
And if in life, you keep the jest,
If love you hold,
No matter how the years go by,
No matter how the birthdays fly,
You are not old!"

Until tomorrow ---- Diary ---- Good-night.....

MARY HAWORTH

Intelligent Man Is Tensely Untalkative With People

Dear Mary Haworth: What do you think of a young man, 30 years of age, who seems unable to make conversation? He simply can't or won't talk about anything to anybody, family included.

He is very intelligent, has a good education, was an honor student in college and won two scholarships to universities. He went abroad for two years of study, has an M.A. and Ph. D. degree; yet with it all he seems ill at ease in company.

He doesn't volunteer a word unless asked, then answers briefly and that will be all. When in a crowd, as in church or theater or any function, he seems tense, or on the alert, as if afraid to make a wrong move.

I always thought it was shyness, but now I fear it is something more. You see, six months ago he secretly married a much older woman. He told the family only a few weeks ago. When I went to see her, she said the same thing: he won't talk.

In his work he is supposed to attend discussion sessions, but he refuses to go. I am so afraid he will fail in his career unless he changes. Can he overcome this trait? Or is he emotionally sick? Except for this failing, he is a swell fellow. What can I do to help him? Please advise me. — F. V.

Dear F. V.: Within the format of human nature, surely the Creator deliberately included the so-called eccentric types — an idea that most civilizations prior to ours seem to have taken for granted.

I don't believe that all individuals, to be acceptable in the evolutionary scheme of things, are supposed to conform, unanimously, to one middle-range pattern of presumably norm or "average" behavior.

On the contrary, I think that one aspect of the overriding mass neurosis of our times is this popular assumption (false and unfounded) that if you are different from the "average," you are in need of remedial revision, per se.

So much for preamble. Now, about your eccentric kinsman—I would suppose that his peculiar aversion to conversation marked him as "sick, sick" only if he were acutely disturbed by (or aside from) his bias in this particular.

But in the event he doesn't mind being as he is — and objects only to criticism from narrow advocates of the "average" cult — then I would firmly endorse his freeborn right to be more silent than talkative. I would not conclude, automatically, that he ought to be "treated" into becoming a ready conversationalist.

To ease your anxious maladjustment to your kinsman's eccentric temperament, discuss your concern with a good psychologist or analyst. The specialist can determine, from the situation as seen through your eyes, whether your kinsman needs professional help; and if so, how to steer him towards it. — M. H.

Dear Mary Haworth: After 18 years of marriage, my wife has decided she doesn't love me any more. I've begged and pleaded for one final chance but she still insists she has no love for me.

We have two children and I would like the marriage to continue, even though she has filed for legal separation. Is there any possible way of regaining her love, even though we be separated? I will love her until I die. — A. J.

Dear A. J.: In the circumstances, the only way of regaining her love is to let her go freely, with your good wishes, and with your no-strings-attached promise to be helpful to her, however you can, if she ever needs help, in her new undertakings. — M. H.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

"Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) — the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.
