Canadian Colombo Plan Aid May Show Substantial Boost

By HAROLD MORRISON

LNDN (CP) — Herbert Moran, Canada's foreign aid chief, estimates that Canadian Colombo Plan contributions may total about $100,000,000 in grants and long-term loans this year, marking a substantial increase in Canadian assistance to the impoverished of Southeast Asia.

Spokesmen for 21 countries—all those involved except Cambodia—are arriving for the four-day annual Colombo Plan ministerial conference opening Tuesday with a speech by Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

Moran, representing Canada, said on his arrival Sunday he came to London with a sense of satisfaction. Two years ago, because of internal financial troubles, Canada had to announce a 20-per-cent reduction in Colombo Plan aid. Moran was placed in the uncomfortable position of having to explain how the reduction would affect the various recipient countries.

But since then, Canada not only has restored the slice taken away but added to the total contribution in a revised program that includes not only grants and 50-year loans but also an expanded program of food aid, originally Canada's annual contribution, mainly to India, Pakistan and Ceylon, amounted to $25,000,000. This gradually was increased to $50,000,000, to which has been added various soft loans running for many years at extremely low interest rates.

In all, total contributions by all donor countries including the United States and Britain amount to some $15,000,000,000 since 1951. The sum includes equipment, food, engineering advice and other technical assistance. Canada's total contribution in grants alone amount to some $500,000,000.

But since 1951, total populations in Southeast Asia have increased to 800,000,000 from 625,000,000. Living standards have increased slightly, but the Commonwealth office says much has to be done before any substantial improvement can be achieved.

Special Trains Rush Food To Kerala State

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP)—Special trains are speeding food south ward toward Kerala State, a Communist stronghold hard hit by the hunger that troubles much of India.

A food rationing scheme instituted in Kerala by Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri's government was in ruins and the orders for the special trains were intended to ward off a mounting crisis

Shastri sought to pacify roving mobs of looters who attacked government officials and raided storehouses for rice and wheat.

But food was not arriving fast enough for the mobs. For the second consecutive day they stoned policemen in Kerala's capital, Trivandrum, and — at times numbering 1,500 — marched through the streets shouting "we want rice."

The central government was forced to withdraw a promise it would airlift in rice when it discovered there were not enough transport planes available.

Shastri, speaking in nearby Madras state, ordered the government railway system to give top priority to food shipments to Kerala.

A 50-car train carrying 1,000 tons of rice left Andhra Pradesh state for Kerala. More trains were heading south from Orissa and other northern states.

Officials said it was hoped two ships carrying 12,500 tons of rice from the United States would reach port in Kerala sometime next week, and help relieve the shortages.

Shastri last week had ordered strict food rationing throughout Kerala and put his central government in charge. But the scheme broke down as the monumental task of feeding 20,000,000 people 1,100 miles south of the capital proved too much for Indian bureaucrats.

Threat Of Fire Mounts In N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Governor Nelson Rockefeller ordered an emergency survey of drought conditions in New York state as the woods of 25 more counties were closed to the public because of mountaining fire hazards.

The new closing order raised to 45 the number of counties where all recreational use of the woods and open land is forbidden.

Rockefeller ordered the survey as forests and fields in western and southern New York came under a ban prohibiting hunting and other recreational use of the woodlands.

A similar ban has been in effect in 20 eastern counties since Oct. 17. Ten northern counties were closed for 1½ days two weeks ago. All 10, except for a southern sector of Hamilton County, were reopened after rain dampened the area.

Manslaughter Charge Laid

STEWIACKE, N.S. (CP) — Donald MacNeil, a service station operator at the Halifax International Airport, has been charged with manslaughter in the shooting death of a Halifax youth.

RCMP said the charge was laid after Robert Charles Martin, 20, died in hospital from a gunshot wound received Thursday.

He was shot after an auto drove from a service station without paying.

MacNeil will appear in court in Windsor, N.S., Nov. 30.

Lake Bottom Mud Yields Antibiotic

ATLANTA (AP) — Mud on lake bottoms has yielded a new antibiotic which is dramtically reducing deaths among severely burned patients.

Two Atlanta surgeons, Dr. H. Harlan Stone and Dr. J. D. Martin Jr. of Emory University, administered the antibiotic gentamicin to 28 hospital patients who were expected to die. Twenty - four of them lived. Without gentamicin, Stone said, all would have died.

"A change in the appearance of the wound was consistently dramatic within 24 hours," the 34-year-old surgeon said in an interview. "In six days, all wounds were clear of dead tissue and presented a healthy granulating surface.

"We've been using gentamicin for more than a year now and we've saved 90 per cent of severely burned patients we thought would die."

Gentamicin comes from the fermentation of the organism micromonospora purpurea which is found in the mud of some lake bottoms and also in certain loam deposits.

Opening lead—king of spades.

Sacrifice bidding is a much neglected department of the game. Apparently a psychological barrier prevents most players from undertaking a contract which they know in advance is sure to be defeated.

Yet it is clearly demonstrable that sound sacrifice bidding pays in the long run. If you know that your side is about to suffer a substantial loss on a particular hand, it must surely be better to incur a lesser loss if possible, even if this means that you must take a beating at some doubled contract.

Let's say you're playing rubber bridge and have the South hand. If you and your partner submit quietly when the opponents reach six spades, the rubber will end and East-West will chalk up 700 for the rubber, 750 for the slam, 100 honors, and 180 for the trick score. This comes to a tidy 1,730 points.

But let's suppose that you and your partner are not the meek type, that you slug at times, and that you don't always let the opponents assume command of the bidding simply because they have the better cards.

Then in that case the bidding might go as shown, and while you would come out of the fracas somewhat bloodied, your head would still be unbowed. You would lose 700 points on the deal all right — going one four, but not 1,730 points. And this saving would be a real one, not just a theoretical one.

You could point with pride to North's double of one spade, preparing the way for the eventual sacrifice; to your own double of five hearts, encouraging partner to save in hearts if he was so minded; and to North's six notrump bid, asking you to sacrifice at seven clubs or hearts, depending on your hand.

Of course, you won't ever get rich losing 700 points a hand, but, just the same, you'll last longer if you avoid losing 1,730 points a hand.
