The House of Mr. John Livingston, Smelt Creek Road, near Bonshaw, was consumed by Fire on the morning of 23d ult., between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock, and his Household Furniture, Bedding and Clothes were destroyed. The fire had got such headway before it was discovered, that it was with difficulty he got his wife and children out through the windows, the doors being inaccessible; he threw his children, in a state of nudity, from their beds into the snow, the thermometer being at the time, five degrees below the cipher. Livingston is an industrious man, and has by this calamity been rendered houseless, and without clothes, or provisions for his family. Any relief to this poor man, either in money or clothes, could not be better bestowed.

Cape Traverse, January 19, 1852.

Sir—I have to inform you that Mr. Archibald Cameron, of Lot 27, came across the Strait from Cape Tormentine without a boat—the like never was known before. There were about twenty passengers waiting to cross. Capt. Mavor and others bought a boat, and as Cameron was an experienced hand, he was to have had his passage free. They proceeded on Friday, and had to put back owing to the roughness of the ice. The wind got across that evening. It was agreed that all hands should start again early on Saturday morning. Cameron boarded about a mile from the others, and when he came down in the morning the two boats were gone. The able and brave Scotsman walked about till between 12 and 1 o'clock, when he took a fence pole in his hand, and started on foot to cross the Gulf, which he succeeded in doing safely, having reached the opposite shore at dusk. The next morning he started for his home.

Yours truly,
Mr. John Ings. WILLIAM CARUTHERS.

The Temperance Bazaar Committee thankfully acknowledge the receipt of the handsome donation of £22 7s. from Mr. Watson Duchemin and Family, that sum—erroneously estimated at £40 in the Islander of the 9th inst.—being the entire proceeds of their recent Concert.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE; or How to Live and What to live for; with ample rules for Diet, Regimen, and Self-Management; together with Instructions for securing Perfect Health, Longevity, and that sterling state of Happiness only attainable through the judicious observance of a well-regulated course of life. By a PHYSICIAN.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"There is a vast deal of good sense in this little volume. The rules relating to the 'important operation of eating' are admirable. The moral rules are as good as the physical, and the writer is well entitled to be heard."—Atlas.

"The work before us is written in a plain homely style, and the information which it contains in connection with all matters relating to health and diet, is of an extremely valuable and useful kind."—Sunday Times.

"A little book abounding in sound, sensible, and practicable advice for the management of health from infancy to old age. The writer's instructions are eminently practical. This is a manual which every household should possess, and which young and old will read with profit."—Critic.

"A little work which appears to us to possess much merit, and to be suited to the capacities of all who can read. On such a subject it is often difficult to avoid the use of language which is offensive to delicate ears; but in the volume before us, the author has treated in the most familiar way, and yet without ever being led into the commission of an unguarded expression."—Mining Journal.

"A book written in the spirit of the nineteenth century by a man of the world, with a keen eye to all the "comforts and conveniences of this life," and on his guard against its material and disconcerting issues. We have rules for eating, drinking, and sleeping; but it strikes us that a man must have at least £500 a-year, before he can practise them, for which class, we believe, the author intended his labors."—Tablet.

"The book abounds with admirable maxims for the preservation of health, as dependent upon the choice of food, abstinence from excess of all kinds, the control of the passions, air, exercise, and other matters which form the usual staple of sanitary admonition."—Emigrant.
