Are Top Winners At Royal In North Country Cheviots

Prince Edward Island took all the championship ribbons in North Country Cheviot sheep at the Royal Winter Fair.

Almon Boswall of Dunstaffanage showed the champion ram and the champion ewe. S. C. Stewart and son Dunstaffanage showed the reserve champion ewe and ram.

Mr. Boswall won with his aged ram and also won with his yearling ram. It was the yearling that won the championship ribbon for him.

Mr. Boswall won the female championship with his first prize yearling ewe. This animal sold at the Sale of Stars for $250.

The Stewarts won first and second with their ram lambs and with their ewe lambs. They had the best pen of four lambs and the best flock. They had second, third and fifth in yearling ewes, second in aged rams and third in yearling rams.

Both Mr. Boswall and the Stewarts said that the sheep show at the Royal was strong this year with heavy entry lists. There were a half dozen or more flocks entered in North Country Cheviots.

Universities In N.S. Ask Aid

HALIFAX (CP)—Heads of five Nova Scotia universities asked the provincial government Thursday for annual grants totalling about $300,000.

In a brief presented to Premier Stanfield and his cabinet the universities based their appeal on forecasts that enrolment will double in eight years, making necessary "drastic expansion in buildings and staff."

Dr Watson Kirkconnell, president of Acadia University, was spokesman for the group. Other members were President Dr. A. E. Kerr of Dalhousie, Rev. Hugh J. Somers of St. Francis Xavier, Canon H.L. Purley of King's and Rev. P. G. Malone of St. Mary's.

The proposed grants should be on the basis of $100 for each undergraduate student except those entering the freshman year from grade 11 and those in professional faculties already receiving provincial subsidies.

The college presidents also sought a special grant for the Dalhousie faculty of graduate studies and fellowships for graduate students.
