PARADISE

By COSMO HAMILTON Author of "Scandal" and the "Blindness of Virtue."

"From the fact," he said. The yacht's pennant was engraved in colours on the flap of the envelope. "It reads like a child from G. H. Q. dropped into a dugout surrounded by the enemy." He laughed and ripped it open. And together they read a letter from Pollock written in a hand that always though of politeness.

Around the S. Y. Isles. Three o'clock in the morning. My dear Tony: This letter, containing a dreadful piece of news, will be taken later on by Evans in the launch to your island and given by him to the first native that he can find to deliver to you at once. With this warning as to the reason of my writing I prefer to lead up to the thing itself with the elaboration of certain details which (once a journalist always a journalist) will give you a mental picture of what we have been through.

Last night, during dinner in this fascinating bay, Sherwood, not noticeably nervous and preoccupied. From the moment that we sat down to the reason of my writing I prefer to lead up to the thing itself with the elaboration of certain details which (once a journalist always a journalist) will give you a mental picture of what we have been through.

"Good morning," said Tony coolly. "If so happens that we have something else to discuss at this moment, be good enough to make yourself scarce, will you?" The wind went out of the gross creature for a moment. God's truth, there's a blinkin' bit of cheek, but it came back in a sufficient quantity to enable him to roar.

"You're hard on me, I ain't in no mood for messin' about to-day. Just get up and come on out, and we can get ter business quick." "I never conduct business before ten o'clock," said Tony. "You will let us have breakfast at once, please, and as soon after that as I feel like it, I will proceed to demonstrate to you your master's power."

The astonishment on Bill Quex's face was almost comic. "You'll be in about eight blessed pieces in five minutes, if you don't do what I tell yer, me swanky London lad."

"You brute, you coward," cried Christie, and with the flaming courage of a mother tigress began to kick the brown bodies in the struggling mass.

With an iron grip upon her arm Quex hauled her away and held her. "Now then, yer blinkin' toff, I'll tell yer something," he shouted. "This ere island is mine, o' ye see, with all that's on it. I tell yer so, and yer can take it from me that's right."

fiercely as he had hated. The man who had never once, throughout the whole of the war, flinched from duty or wavered in his loyalty to his friend in charge.

Dear Christie: I am writing this to you during a few hours of cold and cruel sun that may have been brought on by the astonishing beauty of this place tonight. I don't know. It was when I was standing alone on the deck before dinner, watching the sunset, that something went click in my brain like the turning on of a strong light.

Yours in death as in life, TEDDY SHERWOOD.

"If you dare," said Christie, "I'll call on every white man in Apsia to bring you to the law."

PETROL MAGNATE PUZZLES PUBLIC IN BIG DISPLAY. According to Ostend as a petrol magnate and race horse owner on a grand scale, an importer of Canadian, or Cassidy, has gone to prison for using a false name and running his horses under false colors.

Imports Horses. His appearance on the racecourse was in keeping with his appearance at the Casino. He imported from France and a number of horses, and with the addition of several bought on the spot, he proceeded to enter a dash in racing circles as the new Macomber who was going to do in Belgium what the other oil magnate was doing in France and aimed at doing in England.

The interest of racegoers in the newcomer did not stop with the crowd. Some of the biggest men in Belgian and French racing circles felt it their duty to honor the general and his charming wife. Arrangements were made even for the newcomer to be presented to King Albert.

Solemnly he accepted them all in his desire to become a general beneficiary of the Belgian public, and from that moment interest in the amazing career of the man reached fever heat. He told tales of his war achievements that left the hearers wondering whether the credit of winning the war had not gone to the wrong quarter because of the modesty of "General Corrigan" in standing aside when the limelight was turned on.

Then the petrol king was suddenly called to Brussels, and when he arrived in the Capital he was met by two distinguished officials, who thought it their duty to do honor to one of the great ones of the world. A dinner was given in his honor, and in his speech the general pleased everyone by telling of the vast scheme he had planned for the industrial movement in Belgium with the aid of unlimited supplies of cheap petrol from his great territories in Mexico.

By this time inquiries had been made of various circles as to the standing of Corrigan, and the results were so suspicious that the Belgian Government thought it well to abandon the idea of having the visitor honored by the king, and it was also suggested to him that he should curtail his stay in the country.

Index of Canadian Pacific Coastal Service Growth I. C. P. R.'s huge new pier at Vancouver. 2. J. J. Forster.

The appointment of J. J. Forster which has recently been announced to the position of Steamship General Passenger Agent at Vancouver marks another step in the wonderful growth of the Canadian Pacific service on the Pacific Ocean. Mr. Forster's advancement from the time he joined the Pacific Ocean service in 1913, has been coincident with the growth of the Port of Vancouver. Up until that time the Company's shipping business had come directly under the Railways department, but with Mr. Forster's appointment as General Agent at Vancouver, at the time when the Empress of Russia and the Empress of Asia were added to the Pacific fleet, a new department was formed. The Canadian Pacific Ocean Steamships. More recently the Empress Canada and the Empress of Australia began to run on the Pacific to meet the increasing traffic. A further indication of the tremendous growth of the port was the opening in 1925 of a new pier that has now put Vancouver on the level with the great port of the world.

Local Druggists Have Modern Remedy for Colds

A Vaporizing Salve which is Rubbed Over Throat and Chest for Colds. When Vicks VapoRub, the "external" method of treating sore throat, bronchitis, deep chest colds, or cough, applied over throat or chest, the ingredients are released as vapors by the body heat.

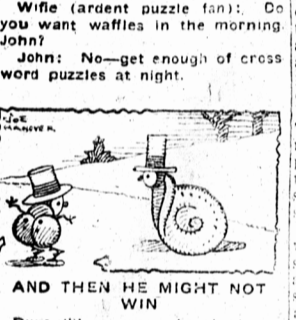

These vapors, inhaled with each breath carry the medication directly to the affected air passages, loosening the phlegm and relieving the congestion. At the same time Vicks acts as a counter-irritant, stimulating the skin, and thus helps the vapors inhaled to break up the inflammation.
