

YOUR COUNTRY GIVES YOU A PRESCRIPTION

Keep Well!

Your Country means it, too, when it says that sound health has become a patriotic duty—the first contribution of a citizen who seeks to further the program of national preparedness. That's logical, isn't it? No nation, ailing and low-spirited ever put up an effective defense. What we need now is energy and optimism resulting from sound health and physical fitness. So, may we suggest that you go and see your Doctor without further delay. And, of course, we are well prepared to expertly compound his prescriptions.

HEALTH IS A NATIONAL DUTY

Happy Landings
BY BASIL HAYE

1 MAY NOT BE ABLE TO STAY

Actually, Delma, through the Place Marce incident, and Anna because of her father's death, both are meshed in the network, not making things easier for him. Meantime, it was clear his duty lay towards Anna, and he could allow no room for sentiment.

Delma was helpful in that during the day. He had not really so far seen sufficient of her to form a judgment on her. He had come down to breakfast wondering to himself, even a little satirically, how she would face the contrast with Delma—and still more—the austere and dominating personality of his grand-aunt.

Gradually, as the day passed to evening, he found himself wondering rather at his own temerity in expecting to find ample room for criticism. He was rather astounded to realize that Delma seemed not only to belong to Sunningholme, but actually to be Sunningholme.

The whole incident old place radiated her personality without any jarring effect. The staff worshipped her, and that fact was reflected in the smooth-running of the household, the completely happy atmosphere (so very different in his grand-aunt's days, and even those of his aunt), which, with the least suggestion of effort, it did not in fact seem as if Delma herself had any guiding hand in what went forward—the seemed serenely unconscious of it herself, although Bond recognized everywhere her magic touch of government.

He was much surprised at this, knowing as he did at least something of her previous history. The girl was a visitor to the city on the Continent. The girl involved in that house of drama in the Place Marce. The same girl, miraculously, and Delma was rather astounded to find from a string of snops somewhere in America. These were no apparent assets in a mistress of Sunningholme.

Yet there, it seemed, they were no bar to success, as Bond had to admit to himself. In fact, round about the time when he was alone with Delma on the terrace where some visitors had been choosing between tea and cocktails, and now were to be confessed, and her more than he had expected to do.

"I must say you run Sunningholme quite magnificently," he said to her suddenly, and rather awkwardly.

At the moment she had been gazing out over the grounds towards the main gates, watching the last of the departing cars out of sight. She turned, looking at him with amused interest.

"You think so?" she asked.

"I know it. I should do, don't you think? I've known Sunningholme since I was a child, watched the running of it."

"I know!" she nodded. "I got the history of this place from Mr. Deering before I took it. And that was more or less your history too." She laughed just a little quizzically.

"Don't put it that way!" she frowned. "I don't really suffer from any snobs standards. I'm just saying—quite sensibly, I hope—that I'm glad Sunningholme is in such good hands as yours."

"I'm afraid I may not be that for long," she said suddenly. He interested. "Why, only the other day at Deering's office, there was trouble because I didn't propose to extend the lease."

She nodded. "I know. And I did hope to have it renewed then. But—since I had news which—if it's as serious as I fear—won't allow me to think of that."

"What sort of news?" he asked.

"I may not have the money to run it," she said.

"I've had a letter from the United States by this morning's mail," she explained. "It's from my lawyer there. He tells me that some people are disputing the will under which

BOND MAKES A "COME-BACK"

The crowds of visitors had clearly been influenced by the rumor of Bond's dramatic return to the neighbourhood, and a curious desire to see and meet him had brought many along who otherwise might not have come.

Among these was General Tankerton, one of whose daughters was a regular visitor, and who frankly admitted to Bond that he was his main interest here. Tankerton, a comparatively young man for his high rank and standing in the army, had rather embarrassed Bond by his approaches that the other had not been around before, why had he been hiding himself away in town? Why hadn't he realized that, even if his old home was in other hands, the doors of Dale House were open to him as an old friend?

The fact that Maurice Lethbridge was standing by had amused Bond. Such a public expression of friendship and confidence from the most influential person in the neighbourhood was bound to be anathema to the other.

Lethbridge could scarcely hide his chagrin, and left early, making great play with official duties as his excuse. Bond, striding up and down the terrace with the General at the time, had noticed that a discussion

In Memoriam
MRS. PATRICK MOONEY

There passed away at the Sacred Heart Home on January 25th, Mrs. May A. Mooney, beloved wife of Patrick Mooney, Peakes Station.

The late Mrs. Mooney was born on Sparrow's Road, the daughter of the late Michael Evens and May Byrne, where she spent her girlhood days until her marriage to Patrick Mooney, of Peakes Station, St. Teresa's.

Here she lived happily and contented until the death of her husband fifteen years ago. Since her widowhood she led a comparatively retired life, devoting herself to her home and quietly contributing her share to every good work and to the many calls made in the interests of public welfare.

About three years ago, Mrs. Mooney was stricken with sciatica, which confined her to her bed for seven long weeks, calling on her youngest sister, Mrs. Helen Kelly, Iona, who faithfully nursed and attended her and was ever ready at her bedside at every call.

She was advised by her pastor and physician to move to the Sacred Heart Home, which she did in hopes that she might return to her home, but her hopes were not realized, and she spent the last three years of her life in the Home and on January 24th she took sick, and the zealous pastor, Rev. B. Gillis, administered to her the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church of which she was a devoted member and on the following night, January 25th, she died, fortified and comforted by all the consolation of Holy Mother Church.

The serene expression of peace and repose that overspread her features in death might well be an indication of the kindly reception accorded by a Good God to one who always, as best she could, obeyed the divine commands and

Card of Thanks

Mrs. Helen Kelly wishes to thank the Sisters of the Sacred Heart Home for their many acts of kindness and hospitality shown towards her sister in her location there, and also Rev. B. Gillis, who paid so many kind visits to her sister.

In Memoriam
MISS SARA-K. MACLEOD

The people of Cumberland Hill and the surrounding districts were greatly saddened when they learned of the sudden passing on December 4th, 1941 of Sara MacLeod at the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. MacLeod, and two and a half years ago she became ill and was taken to the P. E. I. Hospital where she remained for her forty-eight months, where all that medical skill was done for her and she returned home and her many friends thought she was well on the road to recovery but two weeks before her passing she became critically ill and on the above date her gentle spirit took its flight to her God who gave it.

She was tenderly nursed by Miss Judith MacLeod, R. N. assisted by her mother and aunt, Mrs. C. A. Acorn of Boston, Sara always resided at home where her gentle disposition won for her a place in the community which will leave a memory not only to those near and dear to her but also to a large circle of friends who will always cherish her memory. For none knew her but to love her or named her but in praise. She leaves to lovingly cherish her memory her grief-stricken father and mother, also two brothers J. H. of the staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Montague and Lawrence at home, also two uncles D. J. MacLeod, Alliston, Mass., and J. M. MacLeod, Mt. Hope, P. E. I. also three aunts, Miss Mary MacLeod, Plymouth, Mass., Mrs. C. A. Acorn, Boston, Mass., Mrs. Eimer Hale, Middleton, Mass. The funeral which was very largely attended was held on Saturday, December 6th at the Dundas United Church, was conducted at the home and church by her pastor Rev. Mr. Green, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Horton of the Dundas Baptist Church. The floral tributes were many and beautiful consisting of Pillow from family, Pillow, Miss Eva MacLeod, Victoria, Wreath, Staff of Bank of Nova Scotia, Montague, Wreath, Young People, Montague, Roses, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Poole, Montague, Spray, Dr. T. A. and Mrs. Johnston, Montague, Spray Mr. T. S. Hunter, Bridgeport, Spray, Miss Milla and Clara Burns, Bay Fortune, Crescent, Cumberland Hill Woman's Institute.

The pall bearers were: Walton Campbell, Joseph Campbell, Waldo MacLeod, Farquhar Campbell, Lloyd MacLeod, Alex MacLeod.

Why does sister grow faster than me?

This little fox knows that her sister and she were the same size at birth. But her sister was included in half of the litter that were fed "Miracle" Fox and Mink Ration as a test.

Many ranchers have proven definitely that pups or kits fed on "Miracle" All-Cereal Ration grow faster, are huskier and have thicker, sleeker furs than those fed on regular rations.

"Miracle" All-Cereal Ration not only contains vitamin-rich cereals that promote healthy growth, but also Rex Wheat Germ Oil and a new, secret growth factor that has proven of inestimable value in adding strength and weight to growing animals.

Try "Miracle" yourself and you'll soon be convinced. It costs no more.
