BEDTIME STORIES

Just Wants It

Desire may be born of need. A warning that the wise will heed.

—Old Mother Nature.

Blacky the Crow was watching Reddy Fox. And if Blacky could believe his own eyes Reddy was eating sand or gravel. He must have a funny appetite to eat anything like that. Blacky told Reddy so.

"Come on down and get some. Try it yourself. Perhaps it will be good for you," said Reddy.

Blacky paid no attention to this. "Does it taste good?" he wanted to know.

"There isn't much taste to it," replied Reddy, and picked up some more of the gravel and swallowed it.

"Then why in the world are you eating it?" Blacky asked.

"Because I want it," replied Reddy.

"How am I wrong?" Blacky wanted to know.

"Why do you want it if you don't like it?" demanded Blacky.

"I don't know why I want it. All I know is, I just want it," replied Reddy.

"Of all the silly things I've ever heard that is the silliest," declared Blacky. "How can anyone want a thing and not know why they want it?"

"Don't ask me," retorted Reddy. "It doesn't taste good. I don't like it. But every so often I just have to have some. Yes, sir, I just have to have some. So that's why I am over here now." He picked up some more gravel and swallowed it.

"Did you have to come way over here to get it? Seems to me you might get it anywhere. Sand is sand and stones are stones," declared Blacky.

"Wrong," retorted Reddy.

"Who's wrong?" snapped Blacky.

"You are," retorted Reddy, and grinned up at Blacky.

"How am I wrong?" Blacky wanted to know.

"You are wrong in thinking that sand is always the same and that all stones are alike. If you had used your eyes you should know that there is a great difference in sand and stones. Some sand is white. Some sand is black. Some sand is gray. Some sand is coarse. Some sand is fine. Don't try to tell me that sand is sand. It is just the same way with stones," retorted Reddy.

What Reddy was picking up was gravel. And gravel is teeny, weeny stones. Sometimes there is sand mixed in with the gravel.

Reddy suddenly looked up at Blacky. "It seems to me," said he. "I've seen you picking up something of this kind. What were you doing it for?"

It was true, Blacky, like a lot of birds, needs gravel in his crop just as the chickens in the henyard do. He looked a little foolish now when he was reminded of this. Of course Reddy does not have a crop. There were certain minerals in that gravel that he needed in his own body. It was that need that made him want the gravel. It was Old Mother Nature's way of making sure that Reddy Fox should get what he needed to be perfectly well.

Still No Solution Found To Surplus-Starvation Problem

By DON PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — An age-old irony keeps creeping into sight whenever the Commons discusses the problem of disposing Canada's wheat and other agricultural surpluses.

It has been referred to by several members in recent weeks, although no new ideas for solutions have been suggested.

The irony is that while more food than Canada can eat or sell is creating a growing problem in this country, other countries have not—and in some cases cannot afford—enough to eat.

"That we cannot dispose of our surpluses in a hungry world is a disgrace to our intelligence," said Jake Schulz, former head of the Interprovincial Farm Union Council who now si CCF MP for Springfield, Man.

BURDEN OF FARMERS

He referred to the "crushing burden" surplus wheat has become to the Western Canada farmer "in spite of the fact that over half of the world's population is going to bed hungry every night."

On another day, Victor Quelch, MP for Acadia, Alta., and the Social Credit agricultural spokesman, rejected a suggestion that wheat acreage be reduced as a means of solving the surplus problem.

"In the light of the world situation today, with 50 per cent of the population of the world undernourished, our problem is to find ways and means of getting the wheat to the people who are hungry."

Both Mr. Schultz and Mr. Quelch discussed the U.S. program of disposing of its surpluses by dollar sales, barter, sales for local currencies and, in some cases, outright gift.

MUST HELP NEEDY

Mr. Schulz suggested that while Canada might not be able to adopt this program in full, "we should—indeed we must—find means to distribute our surplus wheat to those who need it, even if they cannot pay for it in dollars."

Mr. Quelch said:

"Let the government explore every means of getting our surplus wheat to nations who are unable to obtain it through normal channels of trade.

"Let the government make that wheat available to them for their own currency or by barter or—in the case of absolute distress—by gift.

WON'T HURT ANYONE

"If letting these people have our wheat meant that somebody in this county had to go without I would not make the suggestion. But there is no suggestion that anyone would be penalized as the result of making such a gift."

These sentiments and suggestions have been expressed in slight variations by other members.

But still to be suggested is how the producer is to be paid for any surplus products that might be given away.

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany says it hopes to finish its first jet airliner by May 1, 1958. An announcement said it would be a four-jet craft carrying 50 to 70 passengers with a range of 1,500 miles.

Expect Unemployment At Highest Peak Since The War

By DAVE OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian unemployment this winter will hit the highest peak since the Second World War, qualified informants agree.

Estimates by government officials Friday ran as high as those of labor spokesmen, who have been predicting around 500,000 out of work and looking for jobs and 750,000 registered for work—not all jobless—with the federal government's national employment service.

One qualified goverament official predicted unemployment would hit 750,000 by February, 1958, compared with the post-war record total of 619,000 in the corresponding month of 1955.

This estimate was described as "inflated" by a labor department spokesman who said unemployment, as measured by the number of persons without jobs and seeking work, should be no more than 475,000 by February.

Recently Donald MacDonald, secretary - treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, predicted that if the same trend continues at least 500,000 persons will be without jobs and seeking work by March and 750,000 will be registered as unplaced applicants at national employment service offices.

ECONOMY SOFTENING

Sources Friday said factors which will boost the jobless total to post-war record levels include an increase in the size of the labor force, caused partly by immigration, and softening of certain segments of the economy.

EMERGENCY LANDING

LONDON (Reuters)—A British Overseas Airways Britannia turbo - prop airliner from Aden with 27 passengers aboard made a safe emergency landing at London Airport Saturday night. The pilot reported that "a loss of hydraulic power" had affected the airliner's braking system.
