Jodoin Seeks Effort On Automation Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labor Congress has issued a new call for a national co-operative effort to deal with the impact of automation.

In a major policy speech here, the head of the 1,050,000-member congress said organized labor does not oppose automation, but is concerned about some of the deep-rooted problems stemming from technological change.

"We this scientific advances, such as those demonstrated by automation, are inevitable—and they can, in fact, bring great benefits to humanity," he told the Empire Club of Toronto.

But with them come new problems and challenges. We can only meet these challenges and we can only reap these benefits if we do it through the co-operative effort of all sections of society — and particularly through the co - operative effort of labor and management."

Canada's top - ranking labor leader warned of dangers in the complacent attitude that automation is merely an extension of the industrial changes of the past.

CHANGES RUN DEEP

There are significant differences in the changes we are experiencing today and they will be reflected upon the lives of individuals and upon society itself."

Mr. Jodoin said automation is not only affecting workers but management.

"I am sure some of the cartoons of employees being introduced to a robot as their new manager must have given management people some cause for reflection," he said.

Mr. Jodoin said it is only partially correct to suggest that the problems of automation are self-curing in that workers are required to produce the new machines.

Automation feeds on itself and automation can be used, and is being used, to produce new automatic machines."

COUNTERS ARGUMENT

He also replied to the argument that automation's impact, particularly in offices, will not be serious because there is a heavy turnover of employees.

According to this argument the introduction of machines simply means that new people will not be hired. This is surely an oversimplification. It means that instead of having the unemployed as a result of management, we will have the unhired."

The CLC leader noted a growing awareness in Canada of the pressing need for mature labor-management relations and said labor is hopeful of early face-to-face discussions with management on the problem of co-operation and consultation.

He said that Canadian employers, unlike their counterparts in Europe, have no central management-said organization which could meet with organized labor.

Mr. Jodoin offered the help of trade unionists, with their experience in organizing, to employers in setting up such a central body.

K Seen Moderating Soviet-Chinese Rift

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has avoided going as far as United States officials had thought he might in widening the rift between Russia and China over leadership of the Communist bloc.

That was the first reaction in official quarters here to the Kremlin chief's speech to the East German Communist party congress in East Berlin.

The thousands of words Khrushchev poured out on the China issue, the East - West Berlin dispute and other problems were immediately put under careful examination here for their significance as guides to future Communist bloc policy.

On a first reading two points stood out:

1. Khrushchev avoided a more open break with China than that which already exists. He did not mention the Chinese by name but struck the curious Communist device of denouncing the Albanians. It had been expected here that he might strike directly at Peking, which would have carried the Communist split to a new level of crisis.

2. Khrushchev presented the dispute with the West over the future of Berlin as a less pressing problem than it once was because of the existence of the Berlin wall. In U.S. eyes this is a cover for a real fact; he was making a major effort to force a Berlin showdown long after the wall went up in August, 1961. He has been backing away from the issue since President Kennedy forced him to pull his nuclear missiles out of Cuba last fall.

WANTS SETTLEMENT

Khrushchev said he wants a German settlement which will not bring special gains or losses to either side, East or West.

At the same time, he assured the East German Communists that Germany would be unified as a Communist state — which would mean a major and perhaps decisive loss to the West and which the Western powers would never accept. But much of what Khrushchev said about the Berlin issue was regarded here as a kind of Communist campaign oratory, especially since he was speaking before an East German party meeting.

State department officials did not appear to find any significant indication of concessions in his proposal that West Germany should be put under the United Nations with foreign troops remaining in the city for a period of time under the UN flag.

East German Communist Leader Walter Ulbricht put this proposal Tuesday. American officials said they did not consider it contained any concessions to the Western pledge to continue U.S. - British - French protection of West Berlin indefinitely.

FORECAST GROWTH

OTTAWA (CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimates that Canada's population will rise to more than 22,000,000 by June 1, 1971. The forecast was made in the first of a series of analytical reports of the 1961 census, which put the population June 1 at 18,238,247. At Oct. 1, 1962, the estimated population was 18,683,000.

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

Here is a hand once played by Helen Sobel. It is reported by Fred Karpin of Silver Spring, Md., in his newest book, enticingly called How to Play (and Misplay) Slam Contracts.

Mrs. Sobel was in seven spades and West led a club. It can be seen that if declarer cashes the high hearts after drawing trumps, in the hope the hearts are divided 3-2, declarer goes down. However, Mrs. Sobel made the contract (without seeing the opponents' hands), and in a perfectly reasonable manner.

She took the club with the king, cashed the A-Q of trumps, and led a diamond to the ace. After ruffing a diamond, she played a club to the ace (East discarding a diamond) and trumped another diamond.

Then she cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed her last club. When she now led a heart from dummy and East played low, she finessed the six. With the finesse succeeding, Mrs. Sobel was able to claim the balance and score up the grand slam.

Of course, anyone seeing all four hands could have done just as well. But the feat was performed in this case without that advantage, and moreover, was not just a shot in the dark.

On the contrary, Mrs. Sobel knew the finesse would surely succeed. It was a matter of simple arithmetic.

She knew West had started with seven clubs, East having shown out on the second lead of the suit. She knew West had started with two spades, since the trumps were divided 2-2.

She likewise knew West had started with three diamonds, having followed to three rounds of the suit, and also, that he had started with one heart, having played the eight on the ace.

All thirteen of Wests cards were therefore known at the point, Mrs. Sobel led the heart from dummy. Finessing the six was not a hazard at all—the six was bound to win the trick.
