Money and Kisses.

A man living for the time being in Columbus and who is in the habit of giving his wife a generous roll of bills the first day of every month for her pin money complained the other day that she owed him $2.50 for acting as her caddy while on the golf links during a visit to the sunny south. She demurred, but asked if he would be willing to take the pay in kisses. Although a Benedict of long standing, he still adores his wife, and he agreed to this method of payment.

While they were at breakfast on the first day of the following month he drew out his pocketbook and began counting out various bills of large denomination, while she, with hand outstretched, waited eagerly for the roll, remarking that her last month's allowance was all spent.

"Wait a moment," he said. "I believe I'll give you kisses instead." And the money was stuffed back in his pocket, much to her dismay.

It is only fair to say, however, that later she received both money and kisses.—Columbus Dispatch.

Too Low!

A well known sportsman had become very tired of listening to a series of shooting yarns that some friends had been spinning. At last he launched his first and only story that night. "I went into a field one day to have a shot," he said. "The only game in sight was an immense flock of black-birds. I should say there were 10,000 in the flock. I fired both barrels, and how many do you think I killed? Different guesses were made, ranging from twenty to a hundred birds. "Not one," said the stranger, "but I went out to look for results and picked up thirty bushels of legs. I had shot a little too low."—Tattler.

Early Pottery.

One of the principal territories of the potters for centuries was King's Chin, the finest pieces being made during the Ming dynasty. It is stated that the fine specimens were made with so much care that out of 200 pieces they would sometimes destroy 100. It is recorded in 1615 that a titled man in Japan had one of his attendants of rank whipped for breaking a cup and then sent to China at his own expense to buy another.
