Mill Property and Farm For Sale In Suffolk

This property which consists of 140 acres of land and known as "Thompson's Mills and Farm" is situated in Suffolk, 9 miles from Charlottetown. There is on this property one of the best water powers on the Island, a large Grist Mill and Kiln and a Saw-Mill with space above which was formerly used as a Carding-Mill. There is also a good stand of lumber on the back of the farm. There is a large and comfortable dwelling house with wood house attached, machine house and two large barns on this property. It is conveniently situated to school, churches, butter factory and is 1 1/2 miles from Suffolk Station. The Mill pond is entirely on the land of the above property and the dam could be raised over one foot and not encroach on any other persons land. This would be an ideal site for an Electric Light Plant and well suited for muskrat farming. If not sold privately it will be advertised and offered for sale by auction later. For further particulars apply to the owner on the premises. ROBERT THOMPSON, Suffolk.

CURSE O' LOVE

A Story of Love and its Test
By MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 44 A KNIGHT TO THE RESCUE

"Mr. Carson!" gasped Norma, as King Carson, smiling, debonair, reached the table where she was dining with Ada Lind.
"Right!" he laughed, clasping her extended hand. "I was afraid you wouldn't remember me."
An expression of pain crossed her face momentarily as she recalled the last time she had seen him—directly after her honeymoon, when she was so happy with Philip.
"How do you happen to be here? I thought you were still in Europe?"

He glanced at Ada, hesitating. Norma presented him to her friend. "Mrs. Lind and I have become very good friends since I came here," she explained. "She understands about my husband."
"Then it's all right for me to say that I came back from Europe expressly to find out what has become of Phil," said Carson, as he seated himself.
Norma clasped her hands together nervously.
"Oh, how good you are!" she murmured.
"He shook his head.

"I'm merely very fond of Phil, and whatever happens to him concerns me more than anything else in the world. A prince of a chap, Mrs. Lind," he said to Ada. "This husband of Mrs. Kendall's has

She told him frankly what had happened at the bungalow the night Sydney Stokes had followed her and had been shot by an unidentified assailant, but she didn't tell him what Stokes had told her, namely, that Kendall had married her solely to get money from her father.

If she had been frank, subsequent events would have been very different, but she felt that she couldn't bring herself to say to Carson that his best friend had been a party to so sordid and dishonorable a bargain.

So, when King Carson, distinctly puzzled, asked: "But what made you cut loose and beat it for the beach in the middle of the night?" she replied evasively: "I was greatly troubled over—over something, been my best friend—even since I was in college."

"I say, what's this about Phil's disappearance?"

"Then I know you're anxious to hear everything that his wife can tell you about him," said Ada promptly. "So I'll just run along and have my coffee in the lounge. Momentarily, his thoughts flashed back to another girl who had done an inexplicable thing one May night. He tried to recall the picture that had remained with him so vividly for a time, but Cynthia Greer's veiled image and her crisp, imperious young voice that had so strangely attracted him were indistinct now in his memory. He knew nothing of the girl he had married and he had been commanded to forget that.

Norma was saying sorrowfully, in answer to his comment: "I'm afraid we women do very reckless things sometimes, but, when one is in love, deeply in love, one doesn't stop to think very clearly. And life has such a wretched way of twisting the simplest action and making it end in tragedy."

"Oh, well," Carson resumed his ready grin, brushing away serious considerations, "this episode won't end in tragedy. I'll guarantee that. It looks to me as though Phil were merely off sulking somewhere, because he is jealous of the Stokes chap. I told your father so when I stopped off to see him yesterday—by the way, that's how I came to find you here—and he agrees with me. He said Stokes was rather by way of being a rotter."

Norma made no comment. She looked down at her clasped hands, wishing that she dared tell Carson how much of a rotter Sydney Stokes was, without involving Philip.
Carson was studying her keenly. He felt certain that there was more to the story than she had admitted. For his friend's sake, he almost began to dislike Norma.

"BEST AND MOST OUTSTANDING"

The Manager of one of the foremost Upper Canadian ranches writes us as follows: "We would not think of using any other biscuit but IMPERIAL as we consider it the BEST AND MOST OUTSTANDING biscuit on the market today."

This is the consensus of opinion of our leading Canadian Fox Ranchers and accounts for the National use of IMPERIALS as an all-the-year-round Fox Food.

The cost of food is so small compared with the value of the Silver Foxes that ranchers consider it only a matter of good business common sense to feed the best which is always the most economical.

Do not experiment with cheaper foods. Feed IMPERIALS and get the best results in healthy foxes with highest quality pelts.
