Fishing Industry In B.C. Has Too Many Men, Boats

By ROGER STONEBANKS

VICTORIA (CP)—Production in British Columbia's fishing industry "might be doubled," says a provincial government report, but many serious obstacles make full achievement of this increase doubtful.

"Rising costs in the industry present a serious problem," says the 25,000-word report prepared by the bureau of economics and statistics for the trade and commerce department.

"And there is much evidence to indicate the primary industry has too many fishermen and too many boats in relation to the volume of the catch."

The report also concludes that fishing, an important contributor to the B.C. economy, could contribute more by reducing the number of fishermen and boats.

Preliminary figures for 1962 show the landed weight of fish at 686,700,000 pounds and the wholesale marketed value at $94,673,000.

WEIGHT SAME

Twenty-year figures up to 1962 show the wholesale marketed value has increased by $56,664,000 while the landed weight of fish has remained relatively unchanged.

The report noted the 1961 census classified 4,921 persons as fishermen and 4,412 as fish processing, packing and handling plant workers. But because the survey was taken in May, a relatively inactive month for fishing, "the census figures cannot be reconciled with other published employment statistics on fishing."

Other figures indicated the basic labor force was about 3,000 fishermen, 1,200 workers on packers and other auxiliary vessels and 4,000 employees in fish plants.

For these persons, fishing is the principal source of employment during the fishing season from June to October, says the report, drawing a distinction from numerous evening and weekend fishermen.

The number of fishing boats in 1962 was 9,143, most of them —5,690—of more than 20 feet in length.

The report says incomes range from "very low" to as high as $10,000 a year after deducting operating expenses. But "generally incomes are low."

"The large numbers of part-time salmon fishermen taking part in the British Columbia fishery reduce the possible returns to those who are dependent on fishing for an important part of their income.

"Since the size of the catch is regulated in total, the average catch per fisherman is reduced as the numbers fishing increase.

"If a means can be found to increase the landed volume of salmon, halibut and other species a great expansion in the real value of British Columbia's fisheries production appears reasonable."

Haggis-And-Chips New Dish Served As Demand Grows

By LIAM REGAN
Canadian Press Correspondent

GLASGOW — What would Robbie Burns have said?

Haggis-and-chips instead of fish-and-chips in some Glasgow restaurants. Even worse, the "Great Chieftain o' the Puddin' Race" reduced to a hagglisburger.

Perhaps the bard wouldn't have minded at all, on the grounds that the more there is of the haggis he loved, the better he would like it — whatever the form.

If so, he'd be pleased with the growing demand for the pudding cooked in the stomach bag of a sheep, particularly at this time of year when Scotsmen at home and all over the world prepare to celebrate Burns' Night Saturday.

Duncan McGrowther of Stirling, one of Scotland's major producers, says his firm alone is turning out between eight and 10 tons a week to fill orders from all parts of the globe.

But despite its continued popularity, says McGrowther, "there are still many misconceptions regarding haggis."

One recent visitor to Scotland, he says, thought seriously that the haggis was "a wingless bird of the Scottish Highlands — somewhat inferior to the grouse."

Slightly less credible is the story of a Gourock butcher with a sense of humor who advertised "Young Scottish haggis, house-trained, for sale."

FOR BREEDING PURPOSES

The butcher insists that a young sailor from the U.S. Polaris submarine base at Holy Loch came in and asked for a pair of haggis for breeding purposes.

The idea of haggisburgers is new and so far only one Edinburgh firm is supplying them to bakers and grocers.

Increased demand for haggis put a strain on the supply of haggis - stitchers earlier this month and one firm started using a sewing machine. One hard-hit Glasgow company now reports that it has succeeded in recruiting six more women to stitch the haggis and frowns on the idea of using a machine.

"There is no danger that automation will ever take over the haggis - stitching side of the business," said a spokesman indignantly. "One cannot beat the personal touch."

Haggis is a concoction of sheep's heart, liver and lungs, fat, onions and oatmeal chopped and seasoned and sewn into the sheep's stomach bag. Before it is cooked, the bag is pricked to prevent it from bursting and later it must be sewn up again.

A family haggis weighs from one pound up. But those reported for Burns' Night ceremonies range from 20 to 30 pounds.

McGrowther claims the world haggis record — an 82½-pound beauty he exported several years ago.

Opening lead — five of hearts.

Let's say you're declarer at three notrump and West leads the five of hearts on which East plays the queen. It is clearly right to play the six on the queen, but the fact is that most declarers would take the queen with the king and later go down after they took the diamond finesse. East would win with the king and return a heart to bring the defense to five tricks.

This problem of when to refuse a trick and when to take it is occasionally complicated, but most of the time the answer can be figured out logically. There is no general rule to tell you what to do in all cases, because the solution depends on the particular circumstances with which you are faced.

Thus, in this hand, ducking the queen is right because it assures the contract, while taking the queen is wrong because it jeopardizes the contract.

There is every reason to believe that West led his fourth best heart, and, after East plays the queen, that West has the A-10-8. The number of hearts West started with is unknown, but allowance must be made for the possibility that West had four, five or six hearts to start with.

In deciding whether to take the first heart, consideration must be given to all three possibilities. It is clear that if the heart is taken and it turns out that West has four or six hearts, the contract cannot be defeated regardless of whether or not the diamond finesse is successful.

The danger is that West may have started with five hearts, in which case the contract will be defeated if the first heart is taken and the diamond finesse loses to East.

Since ducking the queen of hearts insures the contract regardless of the number of hearts West started with, it becomes the proper play to make. Ducking the queen is simply a matter of self - preservation.
