Died Of Wounds

Mrs. Nellie Wilson, St. Peter's Bay, has received a telegram from the Minister of National Defence, that her son, Private James Gerard Wilson, was wounded in action on a date not yet available, and died of wounds the ninth of July, 1944.

Gerard was nineteen years of age. He enlisted in September, 1943, and was in France less than three weeks before receiving his fatal wounds.

His father, Sgt. J. J. Wilson, a veteran of the First World War, is again serving with a Veterans' Guard Company on the mainland. A brother, Opl. Daryle Wilson, enlisted in 1939 and went overseas in July, 1941.

Nelson Scores Hit On Car At 20 Miles Range

WASHINGTON, July 20—(AP)—The British battleship Nelson, firing at almost 20 miles range, blew an automobile load of Germans into atoms with a direct hit from a 16-inch shell.

The Nelson's commander, Capt. A. H. Maxwell-Hyslot, telling a press conference about it today, said the shot was "one of the extraordinary flukes" and then added with a grin:

"I once hit a rabbit with a .22 rifle, but I never thought I would hit a motor car with a 16-inch gun."

The incident occurred while the Nelson was bombarding a Nazi fortress perched atop a 300-foot cliff near La Havre during the early days of the invasion. Because of the fortress' high position, its eight-inch rifles could harass the landing operations far down the coast from the Seine Estuary.

The 33,950-ton Nelson fired 230 16-inch shells and 680 six-inch shells from her secondary batteries in 20 bombardments during her stay off the invasion coast.

Most of her targets were tank and troop concentrations well inland, with the firing directed by air observers.

Asked if the Nelson was damaged, the skipper replied:

"Yes, in a most amazing way. It was a frightful crash. I ran up on deck, thinking we had been hit. A landing craft full of newspapermen (I think one of them must have been steering it) had attempted to come alongside. Instead of that, they tore off our landing ladder and put a dent in the side of my ship."

Gov't Bonus For Exhibition Cattle

The cattle exhibitors of the Province are organizing to take every advantage of the very generous bonus offered by the Provincial Department of Agriculture in connection with the livestock exhibition to be held in Charlottetown during Old Home Week, August 15 to 18th. A very representative meeting was held in Secretary J. W. Boulter's office on Wednesday evening. All the cattle breeds were represented and consideration was given to the number of exhibitors of each breed who might take advantage of the bonus. Ways and means were considered by which to advise the various breeders of this generous offer held out to them. The breeders were unanimous regarding the great educational value of such exhibitions and said that the Exhibition Association itself was also doing a wonderful work at very considerable expense in the interests of the livestock breeders of the Province.

The meeting decided on the judges for the different classes and these parties have been asked if they will act on the judging dates of the fair. It was also agreed among the exhibitors the dates on which the breeds would be judged so that one class or breed would not always have the same day of the week but that they should alternate, consequently for this year the breeds of cattle judged on Wednesday, August 16th will be the Guernseys, Ayrshires and the class for any other beef breeds. On Thursday, August 17th the Jerseys, Holsteins and Shorthorns will be judged.

There will also be a change in the horse judging. On Wednesday, August 16th, the Clydesdales, Percherons and Draft Horse Classes will be judged. On Thursday, August 17th, the Standard Breeds and Roadsters. Swine will be judged on the 16th. Sheep on the 17th. The judging of poultry will begin on August 16th and will continue until completed. All judging will begin at 9 o'clock each morning.

The ring for judging the cattle has been nicely fitted up. Awnings have been provided to cover all the seating space provided. The ring for judging the horses was never in better condition and the spectators here will also be protected by awnings which have been provided to cover the entire seating capacity around this ring. Repairs have been made to all the stables which have been thoroughly sprayed with whitewash and passed by the inspector. The management of the Association is not sparing either time or expense to place at the disposal of the exhibitors a plant that will be in first class condition to receive their numerous exhibits.

Harvesting Swede Seed

(Experimental Farm News)

Losses at harvesting of swede seed reduce the yield, but they can be largely avoided by cutting the crop before it is fully ripe, and by preventing the cut stalks from being moved around by high winds.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton, says J. F. Mackenzie, the stalks are cut just above the crown when the pod begins to get papery, that is when slightly over 10 per cent of the seed is ripe. The stalks are then placed between stakes. This work is done in the early morning when the dew is on the plants.

Two stakes each about six feet long are driven firmly into the ground about 10 inches apart. They are tide together a foot or 15 inches above the ground with binder twine, which is wrapped around the stakes firmly so that it will not slip down.

The cut stalks are placed between the stakes and the binder twine keeps them from touching the ground. When the space between the stakes is filled, they are tied together at the top.

When the seed is ripe, cotton sheets are placed on the ground around the stakes, so as to avoid loss of seed. The swede stalks are then put into sacks, the sacks are then tied at the top and carried to a platform. A few blows with a flail loosens the seed from the hulls. The threshed stalks are then removed from the sack and the hulls and the seed are dumped into a screen placed on a cotton sheet. The screen is shaken a few times, which causes the seed to drop through the screen and fall on to the sheet, while nearly all the hulls remain on the screen. The seed can then be readily cleaned with an ordinary fanning mill.

The sheets used at Fredericton were made from extra heavy cotton and were 110 by 76 inches. The sacks were made by sowing two of these sheets together. The platform used for threshing was 8 by 7 feet and was made of light boards. Two men could easily carry it to a new location. The screen used was 5 feet long and 33 inches wide, had two handles at each end and covered with hardware grade wire eight meshes to the inch.

When a threshing machine is available, it can be used for threshing turnip seed. It is well to remove one of the concaves and reduce the speed of the thresher to avoid breaking up the seed. To avoid loss of seed, it would be necessary to cover the wagon with sheets when taking the seed from the field to the thresher.

In Memoriam

MRS. MOSES S. WOODSIDE

The death occurred on Monday, July 3rd 1944, of Mrs. Moses S. Woodside, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Lea at Victoria, P.E.I. Although 88 years of age, at the time of her death, she was in comparatively good health, and mentally alert, until September, 1942, when she suffered an illness, from which she never recovered.

She was the former Teresa Tuplin and was born in Margate, a daughter of the late John Tuplin and Mary Bentley. In early life she married the late M.S. Woodside, and the couple settled at Clinton; at that place was born their family of three girls and one boy. Later, the family disposed of the farm at Clinton, and moved to Tryon, where they lived until Mr. Woodside's death some years ago. The late Mrs. Woodside has, for the past few years, made her home with her daughter, Alice, Mrs. Lea. She was highly esteemed, by all who knew her and had a pleasant word for each, and all.

Three daughters are left to mourn the loss of a kind affectionate mother, Alice, Mrs. W.W. Lea, Victoria, P.E.I.; Pearl, Mrs. Brenton Lowther in Saskatchewan, and Grace, Mrs. John Rogerson, Hampton, P.E.I. Also surviving are four sisters, Mrs. George Profit Burlington, Mrs. Hattie Wicket, Kensington, Mrs. Bertha Lea, Victoria, and Mrs E.S. MacPhail, Ottawa, Ont., a number of grand-children and great-grand children, and other relatives.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, July 5th, from the home, where a short service was conducted by the Rev. Austin Jardine.

"I Will Sing You a Song of that Beautiful City," a favorite hymn of the late Mrs. Woodside, was sweetly rendered as a solo, by Mrs. Leigh Callbeck. The funeral then proceeded to Margate United Church, where the service was conducted by the Rev. E. J. C. Fraser, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Jardine. Many friends, relatives, and former neighbors were present. A mixed choir, led by Miss Selina Johnston, at the organ sang the following hymns, "Unto the Hills Around", "The Sands of Time", and "Abide With Me."

The Rev. Mr. Fraser spoke comfortingly to the bereaved from St. John 14:18. I will not leave you ccomfortless and reminded his hearers that she who has passed on, had comforted others, many times, in a long life time and so did One, greater than she, comfort his children.

The flower covered casket was carried to the adjoining cemetery, by relatives of the departed, and all that remained on earth, of a vibrant personality, was laid to rest beside her husband, and their only son, who passed away, more than a year ago.

TORONTO — for every 100 men drafted into the United States Army, 200 are tested for syphilis. It is estimated that at the beginning of this year 15,000,000 men had been examined. In Canada recruits are examined only after they join the armed forces and those medically rejected are not at all examined for syphilis.

CHICAGO, Ill. — The Journal of the American Medical Association has bitterly protested the drafting into the U. S. armed forces of pre-medical students. In a statement issued for publication after President Roosevelt had announced there would be no further deferments, the Journal said: "At a time when the whole world is confronted with a need for well-trained physicians as never before, American officialdom is apparently willing to cut off the supply at its very source by refusing to permit pre-medical and pre-dental students to be placed on inactive status in the enlisted reserve corps so they may continue their studies."

"No book can ever replace the emotional relief of a really well-planned talk between an adult and child. You cannot escape your educational duties by handing children a book instead of talking with them." — Fritz Redl in "The Technique of Sex Information."

SAFE MILK AND WATER

"Again summer is upon us and once more it becomes necessary to call attention to the importance of safe milk and water," the magazine Health, organ of the Health League of Canada, says editorially in its current issue.

"Everyone in Canada should know that milk which is not pasteurized is never completely safe. Those on vacation especially should realize that milk and water may be a source of disease. It is unnecessary to call attention to the types of disease which may be caused by raw milk or contaminated water. It is sufficient to know that disease may be carried by milk or water and to act accordingly.

"For those vacationing in parts of Canada where milk is not pasteurized, there is a simple method of home pasteurization which properly used is as effective in making milk safe as any more elaborate procedure. All that is necessary is to heat the milk to 145 degrees Fahrenheit in a double boiler, hold it at this temperature for half an hour, and rapidly chill it. The milk should then be kept in a cool place, preferably on ice. Ordinarily it is sufficient to heat the milk on the front of the stove until it reaches the required temperature and then move it to the back of the stove for half an hour before chilling. An ordinary dairy thermometer should be used to check the temperature.

"Where the purity of a water supply is in question, a very simple chlorinating process will ensure safety. Many departments of health supply the necessary materials either free or at a negligible cost.

It is better to be safe than sorry. When you go on your vacation remember that safe milk and safe water are equally important, and they are available to everyone everywhere.

Fashions for robot-raided London have taken a practical turn. Here's the last word in new creations, a tin helmet that has been be-ribboned, be-ruffled, and be-feathered. Felt V's and Morse code V-signs adorn the brim, and red-dotted black veiling ties coyly under the chin. A large bow and a curled feather add just the right feminine touch.

On a day off and visiting Canadian Army units in advance sectors of the Normandy battlefront, two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Squadron Leader T. P. Coyne of Ottawa, Roman Catholic padre, on the extreme left, and Flying Officer Tom Gamey, Spitfire pilot from Toronto, learn a few things about artillery shells from Sgt. Bill Rainsforth of Montreal, a member of the Royal Canadian Artillery. Later the 2 blue-clad visitors had a close view of one of these shells being fired into enemy territory near Caen, sitting in with the gun crew of a massive S P tank when it went to work.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo Through WIB).

How Nazi Misuse Red Cross

Photos above show how Germans used the Red Cross, international insigne of mercy, to shield a combat vehicle and its crew. The German truck seen in top photo, covered with tarpaulin bearing the Red Cross, was captured by Yanks who took Cherbourg. But instead of being equipped for transportation of wounded, the vehicle contained a miniature machine shop, with lathes and other apparatus for repairing machinery and small arms. Looking over the illegally shielded repair shop is Pvt. Gordon Conrey of Milford, Vt.

Missing for 14 years and declared legally dead for six years, John A. Commons, 53, former University of Wisconsin economist, "came to life" in Hartford, Conn., where he has been working as a laundry driver. Now he is looking forward to reunion with his aged father, at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Commons was declared legally dead in 1938, and his wife collected nearly $10,000 in life insurance.
