MANY CHANGES SEEN IN THE NEW STYLES

It seems that the fashions of the present day are so entirely different from those of last year that remodelling is out of the question. Skirts are wider and coats are longer. The waist-line is normal or below normal, and sleeves are set in for the most part and come down long over the hands instead of being kimono and short. And yet there are many ways of utilizing last year's suit.

For one thing the present fashion of using two materials in a suit is most economical. The combination is fortunate for a silk or wool garment, because the new combination is always of silk, satin or velvet, with wool. Last year's serge can be ripped apart, cleanly, pressed and made up with either of the materials named. The suit will furnish tunic and coat or the long basque waist. The underskirt, girdle, and even the sleeves may be of the new material, and it is better to take a contrasting color. A dark blue serge could be combined with a pretty plaid silk of blue, with a suggestion of green and gold. This would be charming for a young girl or young matron. For an older person, or for a street suit, black satin would be better than the plaid silk.

If one has a silk suit it might be used with velvet for an underskirt and waist. Another possibility which results in a very modern arrangement is a long tunic of the wool over a skirt of satin. The waist can be of crepe de chine chiffon, or shadow lace, according to the general color of the costume and its use. It may be along the lines of the kimono, and is really better in this style if made of filmy materials.

Revival of Jumper

Over this is worn what is really bretelles or a revival of the jumper. It is made of the material as the underskirt, and can be made from an old waist by sloping it away from the waist line in front to almost half way on the shoulders. The outer edge comes quite low over the shoulders, and ends about three inches each side of the under arm seam. What would be gathered in at the waist-line in a kimono blouse is cut out, the opening of three inches at the waist extending into a sharp point above the bust. Little tailored straps, two of them, held by tiny buttons, give the desired finish just above the waist.

The possibilities of Brussels net are numerous. One of the very prettiest ways of using it is as a full perfectly straight tunic falling over a silk velvet to chiffon skirt. It is especially effective over the heavier material. The edge is finished with a velvet band less than two inches wide, and the net is used in jumper effect over a lace and chiffon waist. If one prefers the net can be used over chiffon for vest and sleeves, and a basque waist and girdle made of the skirt material.

There is a less elaborate method of utilizing last year's narrow slit skirt. The entire skirt can be raised at the waist line, making a long tunic of walking width. If very narrow it can be split up the front and pushed back to fall from each side of the front. The foundation skirt can be of a harmonizing or contrasting color in satin or velvet. Military braid can bind the edges or a simple facing may be the finish.

WOMEN ANXIOUS TO FILL THE PLACES

Fifteen Thousand Want to Do Men's Work While Latter Fight.

LONDON, Eng., October 11.—Remarkable testimony to the eagerness with which women wish to fill the places of men who have been called from England to fight for their country is given by the women's emergency corps, which, under leadership of the Duchess of Marlborough, has compiled a register of more than 15,000 names of women who desire to be of service.

"How diverse the jobs they seek," says Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, in writing of the work of women's emergency corps, "may be guessed by the entries of more than 100 interpreters—none of whom speaks fewer than four languages, and some of them eleven—ann of more than 200 expert horsewomen ready at a few hours' notice to serve at home or abroad and who are capable of managing or working in remount camps. Many of these, having shot and camped all over the world, are eminently suited for rough work. Then there are 150 expert motorcyclists eager for patrol or despatch work, and endless stalwart young women for such jobs as omnibus conducting, milk delivering, gardening gnd the farm work that is generally done by lads of 19 or 20.

"Of course, behind and beyond these more or less freak volunteers comes the great army of nurses, domestic workers, clerical agents, and the numberless well educated intelligent women who are fully capable of shop and general business work. Naturally enough, qualified doctors, nurses and dispensers are drafted out as soon as they come in. Cooks and domestic servants follow suit: but every day's register points to the fact that we have here a mighty agent for the national good."
