MR. AND MRS. IVAN LEARD

Double Ring Ceremony Solemnized At Brae

Brae United Church was the scene of a wedding recently when Marjorie Lorena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. MacKinnon, Brae, was united in marriage to Ivan Sterling, son of Lloyd Leard and the late Mrs. Leard, Victoria West.

Rev. David Hamilton performed the double - ring ceremony. The church was decorated with potted plants, flowers and an arch trimmed with running spruce and yellow marigold. The guest pews were marked with white satin bows.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by the church organist, Sandra Rogers. The bride wore a floor - length gown of white satin brocade with a bell-shaped skirt and three - quarter length sleeves. Her shoulder - length veil of nylon tulle was held in place by a crown of crystals and pearls. She carried a semi-cascade of white carnations and yellow roses.

The maid of honor, Lorraine Leard, niece of the groom, wore a gold street - length dress of satin brocade with a bell-shaped skirt. She wore matching shoes and headpiece and carried a nosegay of rust carnations.

The bridesmaid, Lorna MacKinnon, sister of the bride, was similarly gowned in a turquoise satin brocade street - length dress, with a bell shaped skirt. She wore matching shoes and headpiece and carried a nosegay of yellow carnations.

The best man was Lyman Smith and the ushers were Hilliard MacKinnon, brother of the bride, and Wayne MacLennan, cousin of the groom. Mr. Charles Caseley sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride's mother chose a teal blue, all - wool dress with white accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the Brae United Church hall for 50 guests. The bride's table was centered with a three - tiered wedding cake, topped with miniature bride and groom. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Hamilton and was responded to by the groom. Several telegrams were read by the best man and usher, from Toronto, Sask. and Toronto.

The honeymoon was to various points in the Maritimes. For travelling the bride donned a two - piece teal blue, all-wool suit, a white fur hat, matching gloves, and corsage of yellow roses.

Out - of - town guests were: Willard MacKinnon, Amherst, N.S.; Sinclair Leard and Mrs. Edythe Stewart, Hamilton, Ont.

Prior to the marriage the bride was tendered a shower at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Oulton and following the wedding the newly - married couple were guests of honor at a shower in Victoria West.

Mr. and Mrs. Leard are now residing in Victoria West.

At the close of the meeting the hostess was assisted in serving refreshments by Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. Wilkie and Margaret Forsyth.

Household Hints

A pinch of salt added to the water in which hard - cooked eggs are to be cooked makes them easier to peel.

Shellac makes an excellent adhesive, especially for such cementing as glass to glass or leather to metal.

ELLEN'S DIARY

James Is Sensitive To Distress Signal

James recognized at once a sound this morning: a plaintive low from the stable, when the day was just breaking above the white hills...

It is amazing to us, how quickly he can catch those sounds of the farming through and above the many louder, longer noises, which now continually thrust themselves into our living: the various machines we hear: tractors and trucks and cars; the planes that wing overhead; the trains beyond the far fields; the rumble of traffic on the highway. Personally we have become so accustomed to such noises, we take them for granted now, not so much as coming to a door, when a low - flying plane of summer, causes Scampie to utter start'ed barks, and the hens to hasten to shelter.

James sometimes despairs if through it all, his call from the out of doors may chance to fall unheeded.

"Ellen, it's not that you didn't hear me" he will say, taking us to task.

"It's that you like the rockingchair! I declare, you're like old Mrs... of the long ago. She was content to let the world pass her by. One day when her husband happened to be away, and a neighbor came by to tell her that her cows had broken into her potato - patch, she made no move to drive them out. She just rocked away calmly."

"They'll but eat their fill she said."

James has the sharpest ears. He can hear by day or through the night, the neigh, the low, the bleat, the bark, even the faintest mew of distress, which tells him, that with some animal all is not going well.

This morning it was a low he heard. He threw back the bedcovers and came smartly to the floor.

"It's that cow" he nodded. "I was expecting it. Yes, last night, I said to the young lads, they'd better keep an eye to her. To tell you the truth, I've been sort of listening. I thought it would be here before this."

And there it was presently. Good-night

Menu Stars Meaty Dish On Flaked Fish Entree

"TOAD in the hole! Mon Dieu, qu'est-ce que c'est que ceci!" exclaimed the Chef, staring at the open page of an old English cookbook! "Toads are not food! Could it mean fogs?" legs?"

"It's just an old - fashioned way to use oddments of meat, Chef. Years ago English cooks often named dishes descriptively for fun. In this case thin-sliced cold meat is baked encased in a batter. You can't see the meat because it's covered up. Neither can you see a toad in a hole!"

"Et voila," grumbled the Chef. "At any rate I will try this entree of the queer name with some pot roast in the refrigerator."

Measurements level; recipes for 6

"TOAD-IN-THE-HOLE"

1 recipe Yorkshire pudding, or pancake batter de luxe printed on pkg. of mix
2 c. thin-sliced oddments cold meat (any kind)
Or 1¾ c. well-seasoned stir-cooked chopped beef
Meat gravy, any kind, home-made or from gravy or brown sauce mix

Rub round 9" layer pan generously with butter. Pour in batter to depth of ¼". Place in hot oven, 425 degrees F. about 5 min., or until almost set. Remove.

Place meat evenly almost to the edge on partly cooked batter; pour over remaining batter.

Continue to bake about 18 min. or until puffy and brown. Serve hot cut in wedges. Pass the gravy.

FLAKED FISH-BAKE DUCHESSE

1 (1 lb.) can fish flakes
2 c. medium white sauce
¼ tsp. dry mustard
1 c. butter-sauteed sliced mushrooms
1 recipe mashed potato
fresh poatoes or flakes
1 egg, beaten
1 tbsp. parsley, chopped

Combine fish flakes, sauce, mustard and mushrooms. Into mashed potato whip beaten egg. Taste to correct seasoning.

Rub bottom and sides of low 6 c. baking dish with butter. Line with prepared potato. Fill center with fish-mushroom mixture; edge with remaining potato, indenting with spoon to make attractive design.

Bake 25 to 30 min. in hot oven, 400 degrees F., or until browned. Dust center-top with parsley.

THE CHEF APPROVES

CANNED FISH

Mesdames: May I suggest allowing an extra 5 minutes the next time you go supermarketing. Linger a few minutes at the canned fish counter. There you will find a wide variety of excellent canned fish. Fish flakes have many possibilities; tuna is an old friend; salmon, lobster and crab meat are excellent but are generally used for special service as prices are higher.

Every one of those varieties of cans of fish on display, regardless of price, will produce a tasty main dish and can be used interchangeably in any of your pet recipes calling for fresh fish. Yet the price differential for variety is as high as 40 cents a can. Nobody is forcing you to pay a high price for canned fish, so choose the variety within your budget.

WAYS TO USE THEM

On the next shelf you may see cans of oysters, shrimp, clams and mussels. They are not expensive. How may they be used? In any way that you would use a comparable quantity of fresh sea food, with this exception: Remember that canned foods are already cooked, so shorten the time of preparation accordingly.

Now we come to Maine sardines. These are a downright bargain. But are they merely a tid-bit or do they have real protein value to help balance the menu? Maine sardines are made from the meaty sections of fresh caught young herring and are a fine protein.

It's surprising what good eating thoughtful shopping makes possible at budget-wise prices.

MARY HAWORTH

What's The Objection To Cousins Marrying?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am really enjoying the "don't call me Mommy" debate and here is a new one or you.

My boss calls me "mama" part of the time and I am delighted. On the days he calls me "Mrs. B" I know things aren't going so well.

He is young, somewhere around 30, I judge, and I am 41 and the mother of two teenagers. Almost but not quite old enough to be his mother. Anyway, he already has a mother and also a cute little wife and young children.

If my former husband had felt or shown enough affection for me and the kids to call us pet names, maybe I would be where I'd rather be, which is home, being a full time mama, instead of a part-time mama, papa, wage earner and a dozen other fragments of displaced person. Sincerely, W.B.

DEAR W.B.: Reading your correspondence about whether or not a man should call his wife "mommy" or "mother" or "mom." I almost crumble inside.

When our children were small, my late husband seldom called me anything but mommy. From the beginnong I treasured this name. I sensed that it meant he loved me above all others; I felt so secure, so honored, as the mother of his children. It implanted (and added to) respect for me, from the children I could write pages on its dear significance to me.

The last time my husband left our door he said, "I love you, mommy." That was three years ago. He was killed in an accident. I have missed him inexpressibly.

About three months ago a widower, an old friend, dined with me and the children. After dinner my teenage youngest daughter, leaving with her brothers for a ballgame, came back to kiss me "bye." I was busy and didn't notice. My friend said, "She wants to kiss you, mommy." Somehow I managed not to show how moved I was by that familiar salutation....

Since then he has twice referred to me as mommy and my impulse is to say, "Thank you, I love you too!" However, I am ahead of him in awareness on that score, so I won't tell anyone, yet.

But please, once again assure the wives that mommy is a lovely term of endearment to the understanding heart. F.N

DEAR CORRESPONDENT: I must say the continuing wave of interest in this topic takes me by surprise. I wouldn't have supposed (before the letters came in) that so many wives had deep convictions and feelings about it. At the present tally, more wives speak well of being called mommy than vote against it, however. The subject was opened, you may recall, by a wife who objects furiously to being called mommy by her spouse. M.H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In what states may first cousins be legally married? We are 62 and 65 years of age. So what's the objection to our being married?

What about Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, for example? Please answer soon, as I am only visiting here and we don't see your paper in my home town (in Iowa). Thank you. R.K.

DEAR R.K.: Marriage between close cousins tends to multiply the chances of aggravated hereditary defects in their offspring, if any. Hence, man-made legislation designed to prevent such marrying is aimed to protect humanity.

In your case, as your age, that logic doesn't apply. Thus it may be possible for you to marry legally. For guidance on where to apply for a license, write confidentially to your congressman, in care of his regional (Iowa) address, or at his Washington, D.C. office on Capitol Hill. His legal staff will research the situation and relay the facts to you. M.H.
