Executive Suggests Plan To Clip Management Wings

By STEWART MacLEOD

MONTREAL (CP)—In a presentation that clearly fascinated the royal commission on taxation, a company executive offered a radical plan for clipping the wings of management and turning over more investment control to average Canadians.

Frank S. Capon, vice-president of Dupont of Canada Limited and a chartered accountant, appeared before the six man commission as a private individual "and an average Canadian . . . very much concerned about the future of our country."

Corporation taxes should be eliminated, said Mr. Capon. The accumulated profits of companies should be heavily taxed. More shares should be spread through Canadian households, and these shareholders should have a bigger voice in future investment.

Unless more Canadians were allowed to take part in capital investment "our people will have to rely more and more on socialistic handouts."

ENCOURAGES SPENDING

He told the commission, headed by Toronto chartered accountant Kenneth Carter, that the corporation tax now results in industrial inefficiency lavish spending and astronomical salaries.

Because firms paid roughly 50 per cent of their incomes to the revenue department, they looked on $1 as being worth 50 cents.

"Expense-account living, including travel, club memberships, company planes and cars, lavish offices and all the other praiphenalia of business life today are based on the premise that the net cost after taxes is insignificant."

Mr. Capon said many of his views would probably not be shared by his company. When Commissioner Donald Grant said some of Mr. Capon's views differed from those expressed by the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants last week in Ottawa, Mr. Capon said, "I guess I am a rebel there, too."

Before the hearing started, Mr. Carter said he arose an hour earlier in the morning so he could read the brief a third time. "Everytime I read it I find myself more in line with some of your thoughts," he told Mr. Capon.

The commission also received a brief from the National Council of Women which called for amendments to the Estate Tax Act so pensions and annuities won't have to be taxed at their capitalized value.

In effect, said the brief, it means that a widow must pay estate tax on capital she has not received and since she must also pay income tax on most of it, she is subject to double taxation at a time when she needs the money most.

Estate tax must be paid off in six years.

The 700,000-member council also said that one-half of the estate left by a deceased husband should be regarded as belonging to the widow "in recognition of her contribution to the marriage partnership."

Only $60,000 now can be deducted for taxation purposes.

Opening lead—two of hearts.

This hand was played last year in Phoenix during the national mixed pair championship. It produced what was probably the most unusual endplay situation of the entire tournament. Declarer (South) was the Los Angeles star, Lew Mathe, playing with his better half.

West led a heart. East covered the jack with the queen and Mathe ruffed. West discarding a diamond. On the diamond return East took the ace an played back a club which West ruffed.

Mathe trumped the heart return, cashed the ace of spades, and led the queen of diamonds, covered by the king. Declarer ruffed, played a spade to the king, and then led the queen of clubs. This was now the position:

North
♥ K 6
♣ K J 8

West
♠ Q
♥ 8 3
♣ 10 7

East
♥ A Q
♣ 9
♣ 10 9

South
♠ J
♥ J 9
♣ Q 7

West had a choice of three plays, all of which led to the same dead end:

1. He could ruff the club, but Mathe would score the balance, since he would throw a diamond on dummy's last club.

2. He could discard a diamond, in which case Mathe would keep the lead in his hand and then play the J-9 of diamonds, followed by a club. West would make only one trick on this line of defense.

3. West could discard a heart, in which case Mathe would overtake the queen and ruff a heart. Another club lead would render West helpless. If he ruffed, he would be forced to lead a diamond into the J-9; if he discarded a further club lead would hold West to only a trump trick.

There was no escape for West.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X B is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
