

MONTAGUE, SOURIS and KING'S COUNTY

It pays to buy in this Province. A rally of the Souris District S. S. Association, will be held in the Baptist Church, Kingsboro on Tuesday, 14th, inst., 7.30 p. m. Address will be delivered by Messrs. Whiteman, McLeod, and Camp, and others. A paper will be read by Mrs. Whiteman, and J. H. Dingwell.

The annual meeting of the Three Rivers Steamship Company was held at Montague, Tuesday. There was a large attendance of shareholders. The old Board of directors was re-elected with the exception of Nathaniel McLaren who resigned and was succeeded by Col. Davidson of Charlottetown. The usual dividend was declared. Business was found to be in a very satisfactory condition. The efficient manner in which Captain McLaughlin had handled the "Enterprise" during the season was very heartily commended. He has given an excellent service to the public, being accommodating and obliging as well as a capable commander. George A. Thomson continues President of the company and Ex-Governor McKinnon Secretary-Treasurer. The service carried on by the Enterprise between Charlottetown, Port Hood, Port Hawkesbury and Port Mulgrave will be continued next year as usual.

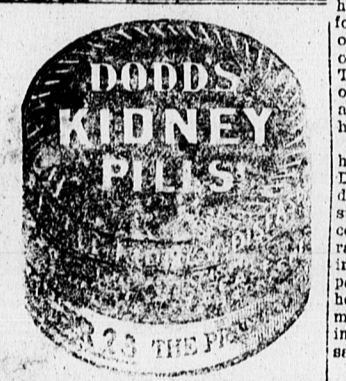

THREATS FOR SCHENK FAMILY

WHEELING, W. Va., Feb. 4.—Since Mrs. John O. Schenk was released after a sensational trial on the charge of attempting to poison her husband, and the announcement was made that eleven jurors favored her acquittal, members of the Schenk family have been in receipt of many anonymous letters which, it is alleged, threaten all sorts of calamities if the prosecution of Mrs. Schenk is continued.

It was stated that the letters have been given to the Post Office Department, and an effort will be made to find the writers. John O. Schenk, Albert Schenk and his sister, Mrs. Mary Doepkin, have received such letters, it is said.

RETRACTS HIS CONFESSION

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 4.—Dr. Pantchenko, the self-styled poisoner, today in court retracted his confession that he had deliberately murdered Sout Vassili Bouturlin at the instigation of the latter's brother-in-law, Count Obrien Delasy. The accused physician asserted that he had been induced to make the admission of guilt by promises made him by the examining magistrate in the original inquiry.

J. A. CLARK, C. P. R. OFFICIAL, DIES IN CAR

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—J. A. Clark, the retiring purchasing agent of the C. P. R., who was stricken with paralysis while attending the funeral of the late J. E. Schwitzer, was brought from Ottawa to Montreal on Saturday. When the train arrived it was found that the patient was too seriously ill to be removed to his home, so he remained in the special car, attended by Dr. Englund and his wife and son-in-law and daughter. The patient rapidly became worse and expired at eight o'clock in the evening.

GETS $1,000 INJURIES

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—A jury in the supreme court brought in a verdict of $1,000 in favor of Thomas F. Rice, lawyer, in Rice's suit against the Union Pacific Railroad Company. Rice was injured in the summer of 1908 when Rice was a passenger on one of the Union Pacific's trains. The accident, which was a peculiar one, shattered one of Rice's thighs and otherwise permanently injured him.

According to the testimony, Rice had just alighted from the train at Denver when a passing trainman dropped a railroad torpedo on the station platform. Before the torpedo could be picked up a baggage man ran a baggage truck over it, exploding it. The flying pieces of the torpedo struck Rice in the thigh, and he was confined to a hospital for months. Physicians testified that the injured lawyer would never be the same physically.

GARMENT STRIKERS WILL GO BACK TO WORK

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Monday will see the beginning of the return of the garment strikers in Chicago to their work. The strike ended by the unanimous consent of the leaders and of the workers, who, fearful lest their places in the shops be filled and the union destroyed, have agreed to return to work.

The strike lasted 133 days, and cost the workers something like $3,000,000 in wages, and cost the employers $4,000,000. The strike cost four lives, and 876 members of the Garment Workers' Union have been arrested for rioting.

WOMAN ATE HARDWARE WITH EVIDENT RELISH

In the current number of the Journal of the American Medical Association Drs. Vandivert and Mills, of the Missouri State Insane Hospital at St. Joseph, report the case of Sallie L., a mulatto, whose appetite for nails, bolts, and all manner of hardware resulted in her death at that institution recently. Her gratification of this remarkable appetite extended over seven years.

The case of the woman puzzled the physicians, and her actions became more unaccountable as the end drew near. She seemed to thrive although partaking only slightly of the hospital fare, and on her death the physicians decided upon an autopsy to relieve their professional curiosity. In her stomach they found 1,446 separate articles of hardware which would have been of much greater benefit somewhere else. These included 453 nails, of all sizes, 42 screws, 105 safety pins, 115 hairpins, 136 common pins and a quantity of table utensils, grape seeds and the like.

THE WEARING OF GOLOSHES.

A correspondent of the London "Standard" at Odessa says: It is more than difficult to understand why the average Englishman regards the wearing of goloshes as more or less an effeminate custom. From the hygienic point of view, the Russian attaches a prime importance to warm feet. In this country the wearing of goloshes during the late autumn, winter and early spring is universal among all classes save the peasantry and the rank and file of the army.

The golosh is as commonly worn by commissioned officers as it is by civilians. The military goloshes are of special make, with brass heel-bits and sockets for the spurs.

From the universities down to the primary schools the wearing of rubber overshoes in winter is obligatory. Apart from its hygienic utility, in private and social life it would be regarded not only as very "bad form," but even as an unpardonable gaucherie for a person to enter a carpeted room, or a room with parquet floor, with soiled boots. The custom is similarly de rigueur in business circles. In all public offices, hotels, restaurants and social life it would be considered a disgrace for a visitor to appear without the porters who take one's coat and hat in the corridor or vestibule. In private life there is, it is true, sometimes not a little confusion, after an evening party or a ball, say, in finding one's goloshes, but it is customary for the wearer to have his or her initials, in large brass letters, stamped on the inner soles of the goloshes. Russian goloshes are all of home manufacture, and the yearly output is about 45,000,000 pairs. The price of goloshes this year is very nearly double of last year, owing to the late boom in rubber. I do not know whether the Americans, with their characteristic cuteness, foresaw the rubber boom, but it is noteworthy that since 1900 American agents in all the chief Russian centers have been buying up huge quantities of old goloshes for shipment to the States.

TARA'S HILL GOES UNDER HAMMER.

Within a few weeks the historic hill of Tara, near Dublin, is to be sold and it is expected that the bidding will be likely to secure what was once described as "the most interesting and authentic monument of early civilization in northwest Europe." Tara, of course, is best known by Moore's famous poem, "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," but it is also the centre of more legends than any spot of the three kingdoms and perhaps than any on the whole of Europe.

Tara was the site of the palace of the Ard Rights or High Kings of Ireland for many centuries. The story of the doom of Tara and its destruction is most interesting. It was all due to the indiscretion of a tax collector, but for the leary will be likely to secure what was once described as "the most interesting and authentic monument of early civilization in northwest Europe."

the fancy look him to enter with his spear across his body under his arms. The door was not wide enough and he demanded in the name of the High King that it be widened to admit him. Guare refused and the representative of King Leary reported the King of Connaught's contumacy to his master, who took up the quarrel. The church espoused the cause of King Guare and a deputation of clerics visited the hall of Tara and solemnly cursed it, after which it gradually became deserted. The famous dilapidated became a ruin and gradually disappeared and today the only traces of it are a few mounds and paths.

HOBBLE SKIRT IN 1870.

"I suppose that every man in active life has some fad that interests him and occupies his mind when not engaged at his regular work," said Joseph J. Casey, principal of the West Thirtieth (Manhattan) Public School. "And it is a good thing generally, for it occupies the mind and rests it, and keeps it away from harmful worry. Once it was the collecting of postage stamps with me. I had one of the largest collections of stamps in the world, and one of the most interesting. I suppose they also I collected fashion plates. That might not strike you as interesting or worth while, but it does me. The history of the race, artistically and in many other ways, might almost be traced by the fashions of men's and women's clothing. It is generally supposed that the hobble skirt is new. It certainly is not. As far back as 1876 women wore a very good imitation of the hobble skirt of today, and some of them were quite as ridiculous.

"Then came the other extreme, and women wore hoopskirts. The fashion reached its height about 1870, and then the other extreme set in, and has gone on constantly with mild changes since.

"Men's clothes have kept pace in the changes, and sometimes the changes are very sudden. A complete collection of fashion plates is very interesting for this reason. Sometimes a military cut in dress was in the history of the country. Speaking of sudden changes, I remember the year that I was graduated from the College of the City of New York, which was then the old Free Academy. My father took me to a tailor in Chery street to be measured for my graduation frock coat. Every young man was wearing the wide baggy trousers and a coat with a small collar. The tailor asked if I wanted the clothes in the latest fashion, and I, of course, said yes. When I tried them on, to my amazement, the coat had a wide collar and the pants were skin-tight."—New York World.

GIVEN FIRST CHANCE.

Richard Harding Davis, who followed the Government army in recent revolution in a Latin-American country, tells a story about an experience that he had with the general commanding the division. The correspondent observed that in every town that the troops invaded they would help themselves to everything that was not nailed, screwed or anchored down. This did not appeal to the American's ideas of the rules of war, and he reported the misdoings of the soldiers to the commander. "That is selfish," said the latter indignantly. "I will see to it that when we reach the next town you will have the first chance." The correspondent confined himself thereafter to the writing of "copy."

FIGHTING IN MEXICO.

EL PASO, Feb. 8.—The insurgent army, last evening, commenced a determined attack on Juarez, and there is every indication of a desperate and bloody fight. The Government troops occupying positions outside the city speedily retired into Juarez. There a sortie having been made for the purpose of driving the insurgents back to the hills. Hundreds of spectators are gathered in the neighborhood of Juarez watching the progress of the fight. The residents in Juarez are greatly excited, and are taking precautions to protect their property. But yesterday the races were held as usual.

SURGERY AND CRIME.

Pernicious results would be sure to follow a belief that surgery could turn a criminal into an honest man is the opinion of Dr. Joseph Collins, chief physician of the New York Neurological Institute, of this city, where numerous brain operations are performed.

This view was expressed in commenting upon the report in yesterday's Herald of the change which came over the moral nature of Edward E. Grimmell, a convict in Clinton Prison, after an operation had been performed upon his skull, which had been slightly fractured when he was pardoned and is soon to return to his old home in Buffalo. "There is no authentic case on record," said Dr. Collins, "of an operation on the brain which changed a criminal into a moral and upright man. There are, however, plenty of operations on the skull by which the soul has been changed from a state of mild imbecility to a state approximating the normal.

"From the story printed in the Herald this morning it would be inferred that there was a centre or area in the brain which presided over moral judgments, or was the seat of the soul; that this area was disordered and that the surgeon had removed the part affected. Such a doctrine is pernicious. Man's nature is not the product of any one part of the brain or the body, but is associated with the activity of every part of the body and brain.

"If the brain be disturbed by some long continuing disorder or from a fracture of the skull slight perversion of man's normal nature may result. It would be pernicious, indeed, if the idea should become widespread that criminals are susceptible to surgical interferences. Such stories divert a few indolent persons, who do nothing else but read newspapers, but they serve only to fill with false hopes those who may see the evidences of the development of the horribleness of crime as manifested in beloved ones."

Dr. Ira Van Gleson, of the Health Department, has devoted much attention to abnormal brain conditions, was much interested in the Grimmell case, although he declared it did not necessarily indicate the widespread application of surgery as a moral agent. He said that it was the theory that the frontal lobes of the brain presided over the functions of self-control and thus the cave man instincts of humanity were held in check.

The forehead of primitive man sloped, that of the civilized being is higher, owing to the development of the part of the brain which subordinates brute tendencies. Hence, it would not be unreasonable to suppose that injuries to the frontal part of the brain would have an evil effect on the nature. In performing an autopsy on the body of a convict, Martin Lopy, several years ago, Dr. Van Gleson had observed an old scar on the brain which had resulted from a severe blow on the head. After that injury it had been learned that Lopy, who had been a decent workman, developed violence of temper and eventually killed his wife, a crime for which he was put to death. The physician said that he had his doubts, however, as to the efficacy of artificial aid in changing mental or moral tendencies.

A HIGH COMPLIMENT TO THE PREMIER OVERSEA DOMINION OF THE EMPIRE.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, the only surviving son of Queen Victoria, brother of King Edward, and uncle of King George, from his latest photograph, who will come to Canada next September as the next Governor-General of the Dominion. The Duke will be accompanied by the Duchess and Princess Patricia, who is the beauty of the Royal Family. The Duke has an excellent record as a soldier and administrator, and is personally a very popular man. It is said that in his new office he will be a thoroughly democratic Governor, and that he will come to Canada to be one of us, and without any idea of establishing a little court at Ottawa. The Canadian people are prepared to welcome him heartily, both for his personal qualities and his near relationship to the crown. A few years' intimate acquaintance in Canada and Canadians will perhaps strengthen the bonds of sentiment which are year by year more powerfully connecting this great young country with the United Kingdom in a union more durable than could be brought about by any paper constitution or tariff bargains. It is hoped that the first act of the Duke as Governor-General will be to dedicate the Memorial Tower in the Stanford Fleming Park, commemorating the establishment of the first representative government in Britain overseas.

BIBLE STUDIES THE VITAL POWER OF MISSIONS.

The living and expanding power of Bible study as carried on today by Christian scholars throughout the world is bringing to bear an influence direct and indirect, that is the cure of many of those difficulties which have so far kept the church from realizing its full charter and commission as the Christ-bearing messenger to the world. From one subject alone there has come a new source of inspiration that is already revolutionizing the whole missionary energies of Christendom in the foreign field. That subject is the study of the personality and work of our Lord looked at in its historical environment and connected with the national traditions of His own people. Missionaries no longer go to carry the knowledge of Christ to the intellectual statement and verbal definitions of the great confessional statements of Western Christianity. All of these have their place and value. They bear witness to the untiring desire of a man to give the best that he has for the service of the truth which has submitted to human conditions in the person of Jesus. But the statements in decrees, articles and catechism about Christ are now recognized to be subordinate to that fuller, more intelligent and more generous appreciation of the person and teaching of Christ as both were adapted to the needs and conditions of mankind.

The study of the historical Jesus is making the work in the mission field a reality where once there was a hard and almost hopeless struggle to force races of alien psychology and alien customs to use a language which was practically unmeaning except to those who had grown through fixed stages of experience in their national advance from barbarism to civilization. The missionary nowadays is the living illustration of that cry so frequently heard in the field of Criticism, Back to Jesus. The reflection of Biblical studies and investigations as time goes on will, owing to the desire for education, grow into Bible and knowledge of its meaning, become more important than anything that has been known in previous generations. The old antipathy to research in the sacred books of the Bible because of the fear that its pursuit was nothing but the application of rationalism has departed, and the supremacy of what used to be called destructive critical generalizations.

Obstinate Open Sores are Healed by Zam-Buk.

For sores which defy all ordinary remedies, Zam-Buk should be tried. Old wounds, varicose ulcers, cold cracks, blood-poisoning and chronic skin diseases cannot resist the healing influence of this great heral balm. Miss Alma Bourque, of Notre Dame, Kent Co., N.B., gives the following account of what Zam-Buk did for her after various other ointments and salves had failed. She writes: "For some time I suffered with a running sore on my leg. I tried several ointments and salves, but none of them would bring about a cure. The sore would just heal over, and then break out again. I read in a newspaper, one day, of the good Zam-Buk had done, and so I determined to try it. I saw what this balm would do for me, also purchased some Zam-Buk Soap. "I washed the sore night and morning with the soap, and then applied the balm. I continued with this treatment, and after using Zam-Buk for a few weeks the sore was completely healed. I have recommended Zam-Buk to one or two of my friends for sores, and in their cases it has been equally effective."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box or may be had post free from Zam-Buk Co., for price. It is a sure cure for piles, inflamed places, cuts, burns, scalds, chapped and all similar skin diseases and injuries. Refuse harmful imitations.

FAMINE OF HOT WATER.

St. Louis is threatened with a "hot water famine." Holocausts, scourges, and calamities have visited cities, towns and nations, droughts and floods have destroyed crops and waste farms, but the calamity which threatens the city of St. Louis and a part of her industries is perhaps unique in the history of modern civilization.

Every hotel, every large office building, and even the homes of St. Louis and will suffer from this hot-water "famine" at any time. The thousands who arise every morning with the thought of a hot water bath or to wash the sleep from their eyes may discover that the hot-water faucet suddenly has gone dry and be forced to the cold water side of the house. Already in some of the downtown buildings, the "drying up" of the hot water pipes has begun. Engineers in many of the large office buildings and in some of the hotels have begun to notice a diminution in the flow of hot water through the pipes. At times the stream is much more forceful than at others, owing to the pressure which is behind it, but this often is followed by a white-colored stream showing a lime-like appearance.

The cause of this threatened loss of hot water is variously explained, but the general impression is that it is due to the precipitation in the hot-water pipes of suspended lime and other minerals.

This precipitation has continued, it is pointed out, for several days, until the smaller hot water pipes are clogged with these minerals to the point of suffocation. There is little chance of flushing many of these pipes, and, consequently, the hot-water supply is gradually being shut off. One remedy is that of putting in an entirely new hot-water pipe system, and this will cost thousands of dollars to the owners of business and private buildings. The water supply of St. Louis is gotten from the Mississippi river, and is treated with sulphate of iron and lime at the settling basins at Chain of Rocks, where the impurities in the water are precipitated. According to local hydraulic engineers, the water supply of this section is heavy with lime from the limestone strata throughout the district. A continual subjection of this lime-laden water to steam and heat, it is pointed out, will cause a sediment to form on the inside of the iron pipes, which cannot be removed, except by a system of thorough cleansing.
