said in effect the government has been in power too long and is going stale.

The CCF, whose only two members last time came from industrial Cape Breton, accused the Liberals of lack of interest in the welfare of the working classes.

CCF leader Michael McDonald termed a Liberal amendment to the Workmen's Compensation Act requiring compulsory examination of an ailing worker by a company doctor "vicious and reactionary."

He also opposed Liberal policies on co-operatives and housing, sought establishment of a department of co-operatives headed by a cabinet minister, and low cost housing schemes.

Charge Waste, Laxity

The Progressive Conservatives accused the government of waste and extravagance, especially in construction of rural schools and new hospital facilities. They hinted at official laxity in regulating securities concerns, and charged that Health Minister Harold Connolly holds shares in a company selling liquor to the government.

They deplored the government's "failure" to promote industrial development and its refusal to investigate liquor agents.

The government claimed it has no knowledge of liquor agents working in the province. Premier Macdonald called the opposition charges "petty criticism" — final proof that the PC party "is not only bankrupt of constructive ideas but has lost all sense of proportion and balance."

The Liberals voiced pride in the Canso Causeway and the Halifax harbor bridge, both under construction, and the proposed Yarmouth-Bar Harbor, Me., ferry. They promised that if elected they would continue their "prudent" handling of the province's financial affairs.

The Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals each have the maximum 37 candidates in the field, and the CCF has 16. There is one independent.

Voting is from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. ADT.

Takes Over Practise In Summerside

Dr. Hubert B. MacNeill, (above), son of Mrs. D. F. MacNeill and the late D. F. MacNeill of Summerside, who arrived Sunday in Summerside and has taken over the medical practise of Dr. Austin Delaney who is leaving to take a two year post graduate course in Halifax. Dr. MacNeill is a veteran of World War Two, having enlisted when he was only seventeen. He saw service in England and Germany and on being discharged from the army took up the study of medicine. He graduated from Dalhousie University this month. Dr. MacNeill is married and has one child. S tinguish a noun from a verb," he stated.

His Excellency added that there are some very fine things in progressive education but there is a great deal of folly.

He urged the members of the graduating class to take post-graduation courses to qualify for the thousands of positions to be filled in Canada. Among the professions he advised them to enter were teaching, nursing, social services, journalism, Home Economics, laboratory technicians merchandizing, commerce, agriculture, fisheries, medicine, law and politics.

He also charged the graduates to be religious men and women.

On opening his remarks he congratulated Senator J. Walter Jones and Premier A. W. Matheson on their recent promotions and expressed the hope that both men would live long to exercise their talents and work in the public interest.

Mr. Justice MacGuigan, who represented the Queen, stated that the motto of the University in view of its progressive development, might well have been "Onward and Upward".

He referred to the University's 99 years of splendid achievement and to the increase in the number of graduates that are turned out by St. Dunstan's each year.

Himself a graduate of Saint Dunstan's 39 years ago, Mr. MacGuigan stated that it was always a great pleasure for him to return to the Commencement Exercises because of his long connections with the University.

He recalled that the formalities surrounding the graduating exercises had been changed considerably since his days as a student but the procedure itself was essentially the same and the same old College spirit was always present.

He extended his congratulations to the students and speakers.

Senator Jones stated that he had scanned each graduate carefully and there was no doubt in his mind but that some of them would make quite a mark in the world.

He told the graduates that they had been given a great opportunity at Saint Dunstan's. "You have been fortunate in having a close association with your teachers. Such an association makes it easier to obtain wisdom and also develop courage," he stated.

He warned the graduates that they must always be right on edge in order to advance in their chosen fields. He tendered his congratulations to the valedictorian, Mr. MacIsaac, and to the guest speaker, Judge DesRoche.

RECTOR'S REPORT

"Once more it is our pleasure to welcome on behalf of the Faculty the several special guests, the parents of graduates and students, and the many interested friends who honor this important occasion with their presence. It is a source of satisfaction and of pride to the students, as well as to the staff that so many elicit interest in their work.

"Since our last assembling here, the world scene has not changed greatly. A faint element of hope has been injected, which we fondly trust may develop and give birth to a sturdy and lasting peace. In our Commonwealth and Nation we look forward with joy and confidence to the Coronation of our gracious Queen Elizabeth II; and our humble but sincere prayer is from the Anthem — "God Save the Queen!"

"In the field of education there is evident anxiety and a continuing effort to find a via media between the extremes of the pragmatic system on the one hand, which would lay all emphasis on the practical; and on the other hand the predominantly humanistic system which obtained in more distant years. All will agree, of course, to the necessity of some adequate stressing of the practical — we have to make a living as well as to learn how to live— but agreement on what is adequate is the problem.

If such an extreme were reached, and many in high places of the educational realm today are timorous of just this outcome, that the youth coming forth from the educational machine, be cast in the financial, industrial, and political moulds dictated by a Godless State — a soulless mass, mere cogs in huge economic and political wheels revolving in an "endless cycle of material change," (as Christopher Dawson, the British historian of culture describes them), then we would have reached just what has been reached in the Germany of Hitler and the Russia of Stalin.

"It is this fear that prompts two very recent severe body blows at the demagogic pronouncement last year of Harvard's President Conant when he condemned all private schools, and, in the name of democracy — save the mark. Mr. Albert Lynd in April's Atlantic Monthly says the Public School System (he is speaking of the United States) has adopted "Progressive Education" the child of "Scientific pragmatism", and seeks a mandate to regiment all teaching. It denies all immutable principles.

There are no constants in thought, nor absolutes in ethics (This, by the way, is a long step, indeed, towards dialectic materialism). The private schools alone, he says, can withstand this tidal wave. President Dodds of Princeton recently said that a single school system would be a national calamity. He sees the private school a bulwark in resisting erroneous trends, and in upholding traditional values fundamental to our welfare.

Totalitarian Danger

"Their argument is that the system of education today fashions the mentality of the citizenry of tomorrow, and thus will find reflection in the economic and political life thereof. If it be bereft of an adequate philosophy of life, and a conviction on traditional ethical values, then the democracy of such a citizenry can easily lose its moorings, and fall into such totalitarian horrors as the concentration camps of Hitler knew, and the slave camps and prisons behind the iron curtain still know.

"To add to the difficulty of maintaining an orthodox educational system, the educator must cope with youth as he finds it. The young student of today is usually just as ambitious as his predecessor of former years, but too often he lacks the drive to attain to his There are too many other ways of expending his energy, too many serious distractions creeping in to hinder. The result is that he becomes fearful of, and eventually shies clear of the difficult subjects in the curriculum — to his own detriment, of course, and oftentimes to his own frustration, for he finds later he has not the credits necessary to follow his bent in life.

Again this year we participated in the Federal grant to Universities and Colleges. We highly appreciate this grant for it means that in our operating accounts our bill for red ink is considerably less. Our registration this year stood at 310. Although it includes an increased number in high school, the number in College years was somewhat decreased. Two members joined our staff this year: Mr. Ronald Doucette, M. A., in the Commerce Department and Rev. Adrien Arsenault in the High School.

Last August, under the organization of Father Simpson of the Extension Department, and sponsored by the parishes of the Diocese, a conference on Rural Life was held at the College, the theme of which was "Education for Rural Life". Monsignor Ligutti of Des Moines, Iowa, who has devoted his to the problems of this field, attended and imparted some of his knowledge and experience.

The facing of the problems and the discussing thereof reflected the serious thought given to them. It is our sad duty to chronicle the death of a member of our Board of Governors, Rev. Francis McQuaid. He had long served us as Bursar, and since then has served on the Board of Governors. We wish to pay tribute to his memory.

"Opportunity is available at the College for Officer training, either with the Army under the C.O.T.C., or with the Navy under the U.N.T.D. Students taking advantage of this training may receive their commissions as officers by the time of graduation. 3 of this class have already obtained commissions in the Army and 1 is qualified in Navy. In a recent visit of Major-General Plow, Commanding Officer of the Eastern Command, he voiced the regret that is finding expression across Canada, that too few of those so trained choose the services as a career. The Department of National Defence is somewhat disappointed in that regard.

I should think there are two very obvious reasons for this condition at present. Canada today is a land of opportunity: life in the armed services must take second place to the many other vocations that beckon. Secondly, there is no tradition of such as a way of life in our country, only emergencies bring it into view. Youth rarely thinks of such a life work. However, as the Nation grows, so will the need of the armed services; and that way of life must soon find its place among the accepted professions from which young men choose their careers.

We present today 35 candidates for their degrees. In addition to these, 6 other members of the class are returning to the Province of Quebec and will write examinations from Laval University next month for their degrees. A larger number than usual receive their degrees with distinction; we congratulate them on work well done. As a class they have contributed generously to all student endeavours during their course. Many of them have engaged in intercollegiate contests, both in debating and athletics, with signal success in both spheres.

No doubt the experience gained and lessons learned in these activities will add to the assets they take with them into the world. I wish to impress on their minds as a final admonition that their store of learning is very far from being complete. If, however, they know how to learn; if they have acquired some facility in applying their minds to problems in logical thought; if their horizons have been broadened, so that they have an aim and interest in life; then they are fairly well equipped for life's burdens. They have our best wishes as they go forth.

"We are grateful today to Judge DesRoches for undertaking the onerous task of addressing the graduates. Judge DesRoches graduated from here in 1922, having interrupted his course during the First World War, in which he served with distinction. He was president of the Alumni Association in 1933-34, and we recall his devoted interest at that time. In recent years he has reached a coveted goal of his profession, and sits as Judge of the King's County Court. We know he will have wise counsel for the members of the graduating class.

"We wish to express our gratitude to the donors of prizes; to our many friends who rejoice with us in our victories, and who lend their support to so many of our student activities; and to so many of our loyal alumni who are making sacrifice to liquidate the debt on this auditorium. We look forward to the celebration of our centennial year in 1954, when we hope to have a large number of those alumni, especially those from a distance, come to visit us."

Annual Meeting Deanery Layman's Association

—The annual meeting of the Deanery Layman's Association of Prince Edward Island was held in St. Mary's Hall, Summerside, on Friday evening with Mr. Arthur Duvar, Charlottetown, the president in the chair.

Archdeacon G. R. Harrison opened the meeting with prayer and the complete slate of officers was re-elected. The officers are, honorary patron, Bishop R. H. Waterman; honorary president, Archdeacon G. R. Harrison; president, Arthur Duvar, Charlottetown; vice-president, Geo. T. Clarke, Summerside; secretary-treasurer, Harry Miller, Charlottetown.

Plans for the coming year were discussed and the reports of the three Layman's Associations were given. Mr. Geo. T. Clarke reported for St. John's and St. Mary's; Mr. Greene reported for St. Peters; and Mr. George Whiteside reported for St. Paul's. The treasurer's report was given by Mr. Miller.

The meeting was addressed by Major T. E. MacNutt, Judge H. L. Palmer and Mr. Edward Miller, all of whom spoke on the work of the association and of the church.

At the conclusion of the meeting lunch was served by the members of St. John's and St. Mary's Association.—S

Annual Meeting

August, 1954.

His Excellency, Bishop James Boyle stated that it is quite possible that the remaining debt on the Alumni Gymnasium will be paid off next year. He urged the Alumni to make a strong effort to meet this end and reminded them that St. F. X are putting on a drive for $2,800,000 in 1954.

His Excellency congratulated those who had done such outstanding work in assisting to build the gymnasium.

The main business of the meeting revolved around the question of raising funds to complete payment for the gym. One of the first remarks of the new president, Mr. Justice MacGuigan was "Our main objective is to try to secure the balance of the payment for the gymnasium."

He urged all members to make special efforts to meet their obligations and asked each alumni present to contact ex-students for this purpose.

A guest at the meeting was Dr. James MacDougall of Rumford, Maine. Dr. MacDougall, who first entered Saint Dunstan's in the autumn of 1903, motored down from Maine for the Commencement Exercises and the Alumni dinner.

He spoke briefly and in his interesting talk recalled how Saint Dunstan's had grown since his days as a student. He stated that he was very much impressed with the gymnasium. He also spoke on the improper educational situation in the Rumford High Schools, a situation which he stated "Teaches a student to go around a difficulty rather than face it."

Sir William MacMillan stated that Saint Dunstan's was primarily great because of the sacrifices the priests had made for her down through the years. He pointed out that it was the priests of the Charlottetown dioceses who had made the greatest sacrifices for the erection of the gymnasium and he urged the laymen to share the burden equally with the clergy.

Life Memberships

Life memberships were presented to the following: Dr. J. A. MacMillan, Charlottetown; Mr. John S. Driscoll; Rt. Rev. John Butler, Kansas City; and Dr. Alfred E. King, Watertown, Mass.

The members of the 1953 graduating class were welcomed to the association by Mr Driscoll. Mr John Mullally, president of the 1953 Class pledged the loyalty of its members to the Association.

The treasurer's report was presented by Rev. Edmund Roche, who was complimented for his excellent work in connection with the Association throughout the year.

winders, carders, coins, leather fire buckets, rare pictures, candle moulds and numberless other items are still here in profusion and are all museum pieces."

Mrs. Brehaut spoke of the wedding certificate of Hon. George Coles, first Premier of P. E. Island after Confederation and of a cake backet presented to Mr. Coles' daughter at her christening in 1873. This present came from her god-parents, Sir Alexander and Lady Bannerman. Lady Bannerman was granddaughter of P. E. Island's first Governor Patterson. She was born in 1795 and lived where the Kirk of St. James now stands. Her father died when she was young, and she went back to England to relatives. There she met and fell in love with Thomas Carlyle. She is the heroine of his book "Sartor Resartus." She did not marry Carlyle but came back to the Island as wife of another Governor-Bannerman.

Several other interesting souvenirs with museum rating include a return ticket on "Princess of Wales," Summerside to Charlottetown, Major MacNutt's exhibit "Book of Forts and Fortifications," and a shillalah used in the Belfast riot, owned by Mr. William Douse who was a member representing that district for 29 years. "We have also two huge locks and keys of Mr. Douse's house which was the first domicile on Sydney Street, and which is still standing," Mrs. Brehaut concluded.

Dr. W. J. P. MacMillan highly commended Mrs. Brehaut and her associates for their activity in connection with the development of a provincial museum which he described as "long overdue." The speaker was extended the thanks of the club by Tom Davies, co-chairman having been introduced by the chairman Walter Hyndman.

Rotarian George Rogers was duly elected and installed as president of the Stork Club, the investiture being made by the retiring president, Dr. Harold Shaw with a suitably engraved mug for the baby boy. Club members volunteered to convey 15 polio patients to the Exhibition Grounds on the occasion of the Coronation celebration. Rotarian W. W. Reid reported on the success of the hockey night arranged for the juveniles. Mr. E. D. Ramsay of Montreal was a visiting Rotarian and other guests were Miss Mary Haszard, Mr. Earl Taylor and Mr. J. N. Murray, Halifax.

Mr. MacNaught To Attend International Convention

OTTAWA, (CP)—Fisheries scientists of 10 countries interested in conserving fishing resources of the northwest Atlantic will meet in New Haven, Conn., May 25-30, the fisheries department announced Friday.

Stewart Bates, deputy fisheries minister, will head a six-man Canadian delegation to the third annual International Commission for the Northwest Fisheries. Denmark, France, Iceland, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States also will be represented.

Others attending will be L. S. Bradbury, chief supervisor of fisheries, St. John's, Nfld.; J. H. MacKichan, Halifax; J. Watson MacNaught, parliamentary assistant to the minister of fisheries; Dr. A. W. H. Needler, director of the fisheries research board station, St. Andrews, N.B., and Dr. Wilfred Templeman, director of the fisheries research board station, St. John's, Nfld.

One of the items to be decided is a permament site for commission headquarters, located temporarily at St. Andrews.
