Question Preference To Hungarians

OTTAWA (CP)—Some members of the Commons external affairs committee questioned Wednesday the preference given Hungarian refugees over other European refugees, pointing to come to Canada.

D. Matthews, assistant undersecretary of external affairs, said more than 200,000 refugees still are in Western European camps. Canada has accepted more than 35,000 Hungarians.

F. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) said he can't understand why Canada accepts Hungarians while thousands of other refugees are left stranded in Europe.

Mr. Matthews said the Hungarians were left in an impossible position because of their revolt against communism. If Western countries had not done something for them, there would have been serious implications for the West. The minister said he under stands that but that he can't see why other European refugees are not given the same treatment as Hungarians.

Alistair Stewart (CCF—Winnipeg North) said the European refugees include Ukrainians who had been oppressed by communism.

Ambrose Holowach (SC — Edmonton East) said many of the European refugees have been stranded since the Second World War. They were "stagnating" in Europe without any apparent chance of getting re-established. The plight of many was worse than that of Hungarians accepted by Canada.

SEES SOME PROGRESS

Mr. Matthews said "progress has been made. The original number of European refugees was more than 1,000,000.

Mr. Holowach said he doesn't want to detract from what has been done. But Canada's effort for the European refugees was obviously "slow and ineffective." The immigration department had done nothing for them.

Mr. Herridge said there is a lot of discontent that European refugees are not given the same treatment as other emigrants to Canada.

Mr. Matthews said the question of who is admitted to Canada is up to the immigration department.

Soviet Timing Has Been Perfect To Embarrass NATO

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Grinding pressures are building up as the deadline nears for the NATO summit meeting in Paris.

Soviet Premier Bulganin, in shooting off letters to the heads of NATO governments, obviously hopes for propaganda advantages by confusing the thinking of Western peoples. His timing couldn't have been better.

He raises hopes while at the same time hinting darkly at terrible dangers. He holds out the dream of East-West disarmament and trust.

To countless persons living for years in fear of war, this dream —however unlikely of fulfilment —sounds like paradise and goes far beyond even the most ambitious hopes of the NATO meeting.

MACIC WORDS

But Bulganin sounds like the preacher who was "against sin." He makes such proposals as one to "outlaw war," as if that could be done simply by a handshake or a few magic words at an East-West summit meeting.

What Bulganin well knows is that Russia, with its technological advances, never was in a better propaganda position. This will change as the West catches up, so the Kremlin can be expected to wrench everything possible from the current situation, among the so-called neutralist countries as well as in the West.

Actually, Russia's continuing attack on the NATO meeting is one of the few indications that it holds promise for success. Russia apparently feels NATO has a good chance. In Europe there are fears that the meeting may be a flop in the face of historic changes in defence alignments.

MACMILLAN PLIANT

Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain has indicated to the House of Commons just-how great these changes are. In a statement that would have been unthinkable even 10 years ago, Macmillan refused to promise Parliament that he will not surrender any degree of Britain's national sovereignty in the NATO reorganization.

President Eisenhower has shown vividly how important the meeting is by his decision to attend despite his illness, which has not yet completely cleared. What faces the western alliance is a complete reappraisal of defences and strategy and the economies of the NATO countries.

Eisenhower's role is difficult because the prestige of the U.S., as the most powerful of NATO nations, has fallen to its lowest ebb in two decades.

The U.S. has been trying to allay fears — particularly in France — that unwilling NATO countries would be dragged into nuclear war by unilateral American action from French or other missile bases.

It is striving for acceptance of a formula by which nuclear missiles would not be fired from, for instance, France, without French agreement.

French mistrust of Anglo-American intentions reaches into another field. There have been fears that the U.S. and Britain planned to seize a dominant role in NATO and might even oppose France in North Africa by insisting upon negotiation over Algeria, where the French want to be recognized as paramount.

Stevenson Is Back To Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson delivered his final report to State Secretary Dulles Wednesday, formally ending 25 days as the Eisenhower administration's Democratic consultant on NATO problems.

Stevenson and Dulles conferred for about 1½ hours in Dulles' office.

From the farewell meeting, Stevenson went to his sixth-floor temporary office, gathered up his belongings, polished off a bit of detailed paperwork and checked out. He flies back home to Chicago and his law practice today.

There was no evidence that Stevenson's major suggestions were incorporated in the proposals to be unveiled by Eisenhower and Dulles in Paris next week. The conference, Monday through Wednesday, brings together the government chiefs of the 15-Atlantic Alliance nations.

Stevenson had complained that preparations for the meeting over-emphasized military aspects of the problem of coping with Russia's new advances. Stevenson urged a bigger foreign aid program to finance more easy-pay development loans to the underdeveloped nations.

The NATO plans drafted by Dulles are understood to lean heavily on establishing missile-launching sites in Europe, among other military proposals.

FISH CATCH

The United Kingdom's fisheries produced 1,050,000 pounds of fish in 1956, compared with Canada's 1,077,000.

Red Cross Raises Sights

TORONTO (CP) — The central council of the Canadian Red Cross Society said Wednesday the society's 1958 campaign objective is $6,232,099, an increase of $24,822 over this year.

Provincial objectives: Newfoundland $93,500; Nova Scotia $219,400; New Brunswick $150,800; Prince Edward Island $31,200; Quebec $1,243,300; Ontario $2,464,699; Manitoba $433,100; Saskatchewan $340,300; Alberta $539,700; British Columbia $761,100.

Princess Is Now F. R. S. M.

LONDON (AP)—Princess Margaret became an honorary fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine Wednesday.

Lord Evans, one of Queen Elizabeth's physicians, awarded the princess the society diploma at a ceremony in which he praised Margaret's contributions to medical welfare during her overseas journeys.
