New York Stocks

NEW YORK, (AP)— The stock market closed lower Wednesday but it still managed a good measure of recovery from the bottom of the selloff.

That was taken as a demonstration of underlying strength of the market as a whole following Tuesday's sharp break, the worst setback in the market in the last four years.

The market started lower Wednesday with a moderate amount of trading. In the second hour railroads rallied and added to general market betterment.

Later, however, selling rammed down aircrafts and steels and carried rails and others down along with them. That destroyed what appeared to be a holding operation against the decline.

The lower prices soon lured in additional buying and in the final hour aircrafts and railroads rallied vigorously and took other stocks up with them, including many in steels.

Only aircrafts and railroads, however, stood firmly forward. The other major divisions were mixed to lower.
