WORLD AFFAIRS

Empire And World Affairs Secretary, Mrs. J. A. Lawson gave an interesting talk on the United Nations the anniversary of which was Oct 24th. It was interesting to note when the U. N. was first formed there were fifty - one Nations participating now there were eight-one.

Forty-eight hours after China received its independence a representative was at the U. N. More houses, schools and more jobs and food are the problems of the U. N. they find that two-thirds of the people of the world have not enough to eat.

In the correspondence it was noted in a release from the National Publicity Convenor that a British West Indies student John Stockhausen has won the 1957 $2,000 scholarship offered by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire to a graduate of the University of West Indies. Mr. Stockhausen has arrived in Canada and is doing research work in electronics at the University of Western Ontario.

It was also announced that I. O. D. E. Commonwealth Relations Department has offered complete medical courses to two students; one in North India to be taken at Ludhiana Medical College and the other to be taken at Christian Medical College, South India.

PRACTICAL HELP

That the I.O.D.E. in a practical way endeavours to promote friendship and understanding between members of the Commonwealth is evident in that more than $22,000 spent by the Commonwealth Relations Fund during the past seven years in providing educational and laboratory facilities in India, Pakistan and Africa.

In addition to these common wealth projects, I.O.D.E. members across Canada take an active interest in entertaining students from other countries attending Canadian Universities.

Mrs. Roy Cudmore for Ways and Means announced a White Elephant sale by the members of the Chapter and their friends on Monday, November 4th, in the Clover Club.

Sees Weekend Flights To Moon

OTTAWA (CP) — Weekend flights to the moon in the "no-so distant future" and space voyages to Mars by the close of the 20th Century are forecast by Prof. Vladimir Dobronravov, Russian physicist.

He made his forecasts in an article in the Soviet news bulletin published in Ottawa by the Russian Embassy. He says that man in the not-too-distant future also will be using spacing satellites for interplanetary travel.

"Today, we already speak of moon-bound flights as something within reach in the not-so-distant future," he says. "The whole journey will not take more than five days at a minimum fuel outlay" but faster speeds are possible making it possible to reach the moon "within 24 hours."

Prof. Dobronravov says scientists in Russia and other countries believed it will take a space ship about three years to travel to Mars and return to earth.

P. W. C. NOTES

Tonight Will See Crowning Of P.W.C. King And Queen

Coronation Week at last, and what a week. Wednesday is coronation night. The whole College is preparing to welcome their newly elected royalty with one of the biggest and most elaborate celebrations seen in recent years. For this is the important social of the term, and the most cherished memory of the College year. This is the chance to elect, and pay homage to, two fellow students who they feel should have the honor of being the first lady and gentleman of College society, the King and the Queen of the Campus.

The celebration will begin at 8.30 p.m. with a Triumphant Parade through the City. The parade will form up at the College doors, when the Student Body will get their first glimpse of their newly elected Royalty, for the results of the election are a closely guarded secret. After the couple are received, the Archbishop of P.W.C. will lead them to the Royal car, the first car in the procession.

PROCESSION

The procession will proceede up Kent St. to Queen, where it will turn left, and go down Queen to Grafton St., and return once more to the College, where the Coronation will take place. Escorting the King and Queen will be a member of the City Police Force on a motorcycle, while following the Royal car, will be two other convertables, bearing the Prince and Princess, the Arch Bishop and members of the Faculty. Lastly, but not least, the procession will be followed by the student body and a band, who will vent their loyality to the Royal Couple.

CORONATION BALL

On return to the Campus once more, the King and Queen will give permission to begin the Coronation Ball. At 10.00 p.m. they will appear once more, this time to be officially announced and crowned as King and Queen of the P.W.C. Campus. The actual ceremony will be conducted by the Archbishop of the College, who will place the crowns upon their heads, and announced them as King and Queen. He will then present the Prince and Princess.

After the ceremony and the speeches are completed, the Royalty will then receive their loyal subjects, who will file past and pay their homage. When this phase, the last and most important is finished, the King will order the band to continue the dance, and will escort the Queen to the ballroom floor where he will dance the first waltz with her, and the Social will continue.

But one may ask, who plans all this and who is doing the work behind the scenes to make this festivity a success? Well the answers to these questions lie in a group, a committee formed by the Student's Council and appropriately called the Social Committee. It is their job to make this ceremony a success, and as I write this column I can almost see members of this committee scurrying about our unsuspecting city, tidying the small, but important details so that this year's Coronation may proceed without a hitch.

For the last two weeks members of this group headed by Gerry Coffin have been burning up the telephone lines arranging cars and escorts, a dance band, advertisements; rummaging through lockers hunting up crowns and costumes so that all the pomp and ceremony of this occasion may be observed, and the Coronation will continue to be a most cherished memory in our scrapbook of College History. If one could see Gerry and his associates huncled together in one of the vacant rooms of the College, suggesting and rejecting ideas, one would never wonder where our College spirit may be found.

PRELIMINARIES

But how are the King and Queen and the Royal family elected? The answer to this question is far more complex, but basically the operation goes as follows. A week before the Coronation, a primary election is held throughout the College. Every year and department, has the right to chose two of their fellow students as nominees. This is done by the ballot and the two elected represent their department. When the results of this primary are all in pictures of the nominees are taken and what is called a Rogeus Gallery is set up in the main corridor.

After the Student Body has been exposed to the candidates for a few days a final election or more by ballot, is held. The results of these final returns are counted and the winners become the King and Queen of the Campus. The Prince and Princess are then chosen by a second count of votes. These final results are a closely guarded sec-
