"PURELY VEGETABLE"

Look out for these "purely vegetable" medicines. Aconite, Belladonna, Digitalis, Morphine, Strychnine—all violent poisons—are vegetable. You see the term means nothing, as regards safety.

THE GUARDIAN'S SHORT STORY

In Wall Street

By EDITH M. DOANE

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

Jack Bentley was permitting himself the luxury of a day off. He felt that he was entitled to it.

For a month past the situation had been too tense, the excitement too keen, for any thought beyond the whir of the ticker.

The firm of Curtice & Co., stock brokers, was the medium through which a wealthy syndicate had manipulated the stock market to its own advantage. Bentley, the junior partner of Curtice & Co., had labored steadily at his post on the floor of the exchange, cool and imperturbable in the midst of the rising storm, and only the day before the deal had been pulled off successfully.

And now upon this bright morning in early summer Jack Bentley was feeling decidedly well satisfied with life in general. His part of the transaction had been well handled, his share in the way of commissions was distinctly gratifying, and in addition he had cleaned up a neat little sum by going into the deal on his own hook.

It was getting well into July, and as Bentley's automobile whirled up Fifth avenue his mind turned longingly from the city, sweltering in midsummer heat, to the vision of a clubhouse in the heart of the Berkshire hills.

It was a picture often in his thoughts. The long, low, rambling clubhouse, with its old fashioned garden at one side, a little winding brook sparkling and splashing between clumps of fern and low banks, willow fringed; a girl, sweet and gracious, her white frock cool against a great moss covered bowlder, the sunlight falling through the leaves in flickering shadows on her soft, fair hair.

In the height of the fight he had received her letter. "You'd better come," she wrote. "It's as lovely as ever here," and at the end again, "Do come." He had smiled as he telegraphed his answer There was no doubt of his attitude where Constance Elliott was concerned.

A great longing for country sights and sounds swept over him, for the woods and hills and her. A little while and he would have them. A few days' attention to straightening out the aftermath of the great fight and then—Constance had no parents to object, and even her old curmudgeon of a guardian—strange how he had always mistrusted that man—could not fail to be impressed by the tidy sum he had pulled out of the late deal.

Where Fifth avenue broadens into the plaza he mechanically lessened speed, his mind still with the girl in the Berkshires as the huge car turned smoothly into Central park.

And the first person his eyes lighted on was Constance Elliott.

The next instant he was before her, cap in hand, and she rose in astonishment to meet him. For a second they faced each other, he scarcely crediting the evidences of his senses, she coloring prettily and holding out one slim hand in cordial greeting.

"I phoned to your office this morning, but you were not there."

"Is anything wrong?" he asked uneasily.

"Nothing, except that I return to the country this afternoon at 3 o'clock, and I thought"—

"I am wondering," he interrupted, laughing uncertainly to cover his hurt, "why I might not have known you were in town?"

"But I wasn't, not until late last night, and Mr. Sheldon did not wish any one to know. He wired me yesterday to come at once. You know he has managed everything for me just as much since I have been of age as he did before." She hesitated, flushing with excitement. "Jack," she cried, "it is a great secret, but I am going to be very rich."

He regarded her gravely.

"Through some stock deal," she went on, with feminine vagueness. "Perhaps you've heard of it. Mr. Sheldon has made ever so much money lately—yesterday—and I am to make a lot in the same way. He has all my securities. I gave them to him this morning."

"Do you mean you have given that man all your money?" Bentley blurted out.

Had Sheldon appropriated the girl's money to his own use? That same instant Bentley was sure of it. His brain, used to quick deductions, leaped from the rumor on the street that Sheldon had been badly hit to the sudden wire to Constance—the secrecy—the misrepresentation. These, coupled with the man's well known shrewdness, could mean only one thing. Sheldon had lost heavily and intended to recoup with Constance's money.

His first impulse was to tell her of the deception that was being practiced upon her. But she would not believe him. Besides, he was not absolutely certain of it and might alarm her needlessly.

How he accomplished what followed he never clearly knew. He heard a voice he hardly recognized as his own claiming a pressing engagement and begging her to lunch with him later.

He saw the surprise in her eyes succeeded by frank acceptance of his explanation, he heard each inflection of her dear voice as she promised to meet him, and then a moment later he was speeding toward lower Broadway. Once only did his pace lessen, and then only so long as it took him to rush up the steps of his apartment and slip something small and shining into the pocket of his long, loose coat.

The situation from Sheldon's point of view was bad enough without the interference of Jack Bentley, who had entered his private office with scant ceremony.

"Mr. Sheldon," said that young man abruptly, "I learned an hour ago that you have, through misrepresentation, appropriated certain securities belonging to Miss Elliott."

For once Sheldon's self possession deserted him. "What lie is this?" he cried, half rising from his chair.

"And," continued Bentley coolly, "I have come to get them and return them to her."

"I refuse to give them to you."

"You must."

"I am acting as her agent. By what right do you"—

Bentley leaned across the table. "Mr. Sheldon," he said grimly, "I have come for the papers and intend to get them."

Sheldon, his face livid, reached for the bell, only to find himself confronted by a gleaming pistol barrel surmounted by a white face with blazing, determined eyes.

"Stay where you are till I'm through with you," cried Bentley, at white heat. "Now give them to me."

"I will not."

"You shall!"

"I'll be ruined," gasped Sheldon.

"You'll be ruined if you don't. I'll have you arrested inside of an hour."

The beads of perspiration stood out on Sheldon's forehead. With trembling hands he opened a tin box and flung its contents malignantly across the table.

"Take them, — you!" he cried, with a bitter oath.

And so it was not until Miss Elliott sat opposite Bentley at a table at lunch that she learned how nearly she had been delivered from her "abundance of riches." She sat speechless, watching Bentley with beautiful, horrified eyes as he laid bare the deception that had been practiced upon her, touching lightly upon his own part in the affair.

"Oh," she said in an unsteady voice, "what can I say to you? I want to thank you. I cannot—I do not know how"—

He leaned forward, his eyes holding hers across the flowers on the center of the table.

"I know," he said under his breath, "but I dare not ask—it is so much"—

She colored a delicious pink, but her eyes met his bravely.

"There is nothing—that could be—too much," she said.

Out of School Because of Colds

THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN WILL ACQUIRE LUNG TROUBLES, WHICH COULD BE AVOIDED BY USING

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

The records of attendance at the Toronto Public Schools show that ten thousand children were absent on account of colds during a single month.

"The worst enemy of all to the child, so far as keeping him from school is concerned, apparently is the common, every-day cold," said Dr. Goodchild in his report to the Ontario School Association.

"Not only does the cold prove an enemy in this way," he continued, "but it is well known that many of the more serious diseases follow from the simple cold. As a result of the patient becoming weakened down in his resistance against diseases, the germs of various infectious diseases the more easily find a place to multiply somewhere in the organism."

Parents who make a practice of keeping Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house have at hand the most certain means of curing coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis, and positively preventing more serious disease. It is sometimes forgotten that few all the ills possess more possibilities of danger than a common cold.

MRS. EUGENE JUER, King Street, Truro, N. S., states:—"From an infant one of my children was troubled with bronchitis, and the least cold would aggravate the trouble. We could not get anything to help him and were often greatly alarmed. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a treatment for bronchitis we used it, and are glad to state that it effected a complete cure. If any of the children take a cold or cough I give this medicine, and have never known it to fail to bring relief.

Not only is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine a positive cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds, but it is also a preventive of all diseases of the lungs.
