New Trouble Boils Up Among Four Partners in Malaysia

By KARSTEN PRAGER

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (AP)—Trouble has boiled up among the four Southeast Asian parties that agreed to form the federation of Malaysia. The federation already is under outside pressure from the Philippines and Indonesia, which oppose it.

The Malayan cabinet went into emergency session to discuss a British decision that gave two partners in the federation — the British Borneo territories of Sarawak and North Borneo—limited self - government last Saturday. It also took up a declaration by Singapore, another partner, to take over its own foreign affairs and defence pending actual formation of Malaysia.

The cabinet announced, in an unexpected move, that it would demand clarification from the British government for the action which it called "contrary to the Malaysia agreement."

Malaya's prime minister, Tunku Abdul Rahman, launched the Malaysia project as a bulwark against Communism in Southeast Asia.

Indonesia asserted it would extend "imperialism" in this area. Indonesia shares the island of Borneo with Sarawak and North Borneo.

The Philippines claims part of Borneo and feels Malaysia would stifle its chances of taking control.

AWAIT SURVEY

The two countries agreed, however, to accept Malaysia if a United Nations survey team now in North Borneo found that the people of Sarawak and North Borneo really wanted to become part of Malaysia. The survey delayed the formation of Malaysia from Aug. 31 to Sept. 16.

The Malayan cabinet move came in the wake of confusion here over the actual status of the three territories — entirely due to the postponement of the Malaysia inauguration day.

While no one in Kuala Lumpur would spell out just what the constitutional status of the three territories was, it was known that Singapore, already with full internal self - government, had made what was termed "a constitutional advance" and that the British Borneo territories were given restricted internal self-government.

Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Kew carried this further Saturday when he proclaimed full sovereignty in foreign affairs and defence for the island state.

It seemed clear that any constitutional concessions offered by Britain were given with the intent of mollifying opposition by the three territories to Malayan agreement to postpone the Malaysia date.

IGNORE DEMAND

Singapore, Sarawak and North Borneo opposed postponement, ignoring Indonesian and the Philippine demands for the UN sponsored survey in Borneo.

Their disagreement with Malaya was believed one of the major reasons for recent discussions between the four partners and the British Commonwealth secretary, Duncan Sandys.

It was reported earlier that the secretary's presence had made possible a compromise which welded the four Malaya partners into a common front. But the Malayan announcement indicated that disagreement and distrust lingered.

Meanwhile, Indonesia appears to have radically altered strategy to crush the Malaysia idea.

The new plan, reliable diplomatic sources say, involves extensive and simultaneous use of "the carrot and the stick" to break Malaya away from Britain.

MONEY FINDS POSE MYSTERY

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—The James Bucks of Lincoln, Neb., have a problem—they keep finding money around their place and don't know where it comes from.

As the facts were presented to Lincoln police, the mystery began Aug. 1 when the Bucks found $40 in the corner of their garage.

A few days later another $10 showed up on the floor of their car. Shortly afterwards another $18 was found, this time under the family bathtub.

Last Friday Buck was just leaving for work when his wife found a $50 bill just inside the front screen door.

That makes $118 found and police admit they are having trouble figuring out just who is giving the bucks to the Bucks and why.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1NT	Dble.	2♣	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Redble.

Opening lead—four of spades.

Bad bidding breeds bad results, but seldom do you hear of it being punished as severely as in this case. The hand was played in a team match.

At the first table, North, a firm believer in the weak notrump (12 to 14 points), opened with a notrump. East doubled and South bid two clubs, which West doubled.

South's bid was overly imaginative, no doubt, but he reasoned that after he got doubled, which seemed likely, he would be able to find the proper suit contract with his hand.

So when two clubs doubled came around to him, South redoubled, intending this as an SOS redouble to force North to choose another suit. The idea was fine, since a redouble in this sequence indicates distress but North obviously didn't interpret the bid this way. He passed and the outcome was that South went down four. The experiment cost North-South 2,200 points.

When the hand was played at the second table, with the East-West cards now being held by the opposite team, the bidding proceeded:

Again the SOS signal was misunderstood. West was saying in effect by his redouble that two diamonds doubled was a bad contract and that any other contract would be better — the theory being that West would be happy to pass if he thought two diamonds doubles could be made.

But East here also misjudged the meaning of the bid and passed. This proved to be a very painful experience when South led a low heart and North cashed the A-K and continued with the ace and another spade.

South took the king and led another spade, ruffed with the seven and overruffed with the jack. East played the queen of diamonds and South grabbed the ace and led a fourth spade. North ruffed with the ten and East overruffed with the king. East took no more tricks and went down six—3,400 points!
