Canadian Gov't Seeks Role In Satellite Communication

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government is actively seeking a role in the world-wide satellite communications system being pushed ahead by the United States, sources said here.

However, the extent to which the government and Canadian industry would supply money, technology and equipment to the commercial venture — as well as share in the administration of the system—may not be settled for months.

So far the government has made no firm commitments.

The two main objectives in Canadian participation are to assure that Canada would get a fair allocation of the voice and other communication circuits provided by the satellites, and to win for Canadian industry a share of the contracts for equipment.

Meanwhile, the Americans are "pushing very hard" to set up an operational satellite system for communications, said one official here.

The U.S. Congress has established the Communications Satellite Corporation to direct the American effort.

PLAN RELAY STATION

This corporation said recently it is planning to have a satellite relay station over the Atlantic in 1965. This would provide up to 240 voice communication channels between the U.S. and Western Europe. In 1966, the corporation plans to launch a basic-world-wide system to go into operation by 1967. That would be three years ahead of the original target date in 1970.

To date, about 10 international conferences have been held on the subject and there have been 30 or 40 bilateral exchanges of views, authorities said. Canadian officials have attended many of these meetings and face a continuing round of them over the next year.

Informal agreement already has been reached on the need for a single world-wide satellite communications system, rather than competing systems. And there is a concensus that only the U.S. is in a position to put up the satellites.

European countries — especially Germany, France, Italy and recently Britain — have been seeking a way to pool their resources to be on a more equal footing with the Americans in the technical, financial and administrative aspects of the project. A single European agency may emerge for this purpose.

CANADA HAS AGENCY

Canada already has such an agency — Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corporation, the Crown corporation which handles Canada's overseas cable and radio communications.

In addition, Canada has proven its technical abilities through the success of the Alouette, a Canadian satellite fired by the U.S. and now looking down on the ionosphere. And there is no doubt that this country could generate a sizable volume of traffic for the commercial satellite operation.

Still to be settled in the international conferences ahead are the highly technical questions of the number of satellites and ground stations needed, and the number of circuits to be provided and how they will be allocated.

What will the system cost? One oft-quoted estimate is $200,000,000 but this was described by one official here as "a nice round figure that may or may not bear any relation to reality."

Thousands Slaughtered In Reprisals For Raids

USUMBURA, Burundi (Reuters)—Thousands of men, women and children of the Watutsi tribe have been killed in reprisals for raids by refugees of the tribe on Rwanda territory last December, according to reports here.

Some unconfirmed reports put the toll as high as 8,000.

For several days Burundi authorities have been taking bodies out of the Ruzizi River which links Lake Tanganyika with Lake Kivu and serves as a common frontier for Rwanda, Burundi and The Congo.

BROKE WATUTSIS POWER

Rwanda and Burundi were formerly joined as Ruanda-Urundi, a Belgian-administered United Nations trusteeship. The two states became independent in July, 1962. Each has a population of about 2,500,000.

Bahutu tribesmen in Rwanda recently broke the power of the giant Watutsis, their overlords for many years, and the Rwanda government is now Bahutu-led.

(Geneva relief agencies with field missions in the area said last week a killing wave had already cost the lives of thousands of Watutsis resident in Rwanda and said the killing continued unabated.

(The reports said the killing was apparently started by raids of Watutsi refugees against the Rwanda government some time during the Christmas period.)

According to reports here, thousands of Watutsis have left Rwanda for neighboring countries.

Some 4,000 of them have sought refuge in Burundi, bringing to about 40,000 the number of Rwanda refugees in this country.

Most of the Watutsis who held key posts in the administration in Rwanda are reported to have left.

Opening lead— king of diamonds.

The general rule, missing the Q-x-x-x of a suit, is to cash the A-K in the hope that the queen will drop on the first or second lead of the suit.

However, the mathematical advantage of playing for the drop of the queen is only slightly greater than playing for a finesse against the queen, and for this reason a competent declarer will feel free to finesse whenever the circumstances indicate that that is the better play.

Here is a hand to illustrate the point. South is in four spades and West leads the K Q of diamonds on which East plays the four and then the eight.

West now leads the deuce of hearts. South plays low from dummy, losing to the king, and East then returns the three of hearts.

Declarer is now at a crucial point in the hand. He has lost three tricks and must win the rest to make the contract. The prospects are not good, since there is a danger of also losing a club and a spade.

To win the heart with the queen and then cash the A-K of spades would be the simplest but not the best method of play. Since the club finesse has to be taken in any event, it is better to do that before deciding how to play the spades.

Accordingly, South wins the heart in dummy with the ace and finesses the queen of clubs. After cashing the ace of spades, he plays the ace and another club, ruffing in dummy.

When East's king falls on the trick, South has a pretty good idea of East's original distribution. East probably had four hearts (judging from West's lead of the two and East's return of the three). East probably had three diamonds (having failed to play high-low in diamonds), and also three clubs (judging from the fall of the king).

All indications point to East's having started with three spades, and South therefore leads the jack and finesses when East follows low.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
