tremendous strength of the Imperial resources in men and armaments, may not be led to put their trust in these, and forget God, the Author of their sovereignty and Source of their power.

The tone of religious fervour is almost Hebraic in its intensity and seems to claim the same special relation to Jehovah for the British peoples as that enjoyed by the Hebrews of old.

Prime Ministers and troops from the Dominions, Indian native princes and their soldiers, and many others from all parts of the Empire gathered in London to take part in ceremonies of unparalleled splendour. So overwhelming was the display that many had a feeling of awe and apprehension as to where this greatness of Empire would lead. Rudyard Kipling gave expression to this in his poem, "Recessional" and so produced one of the greatest poems of the last century. He based his poem on the Bible and it made a wonderful appeal to the British at the time of the publication and is still often sung in times of stress and triumph.

Stanza I: God has done great things for Britain and has given England the power to rule over a great empire but she still needs God's help.

Stanza II: The sounds of triumph pass but God still is the friend of the humble.

Stanza III: Other great empires have fallen, so may ours if we forget God.

Stanzas IV, V: If we forget these things, boast of our own attainments, and put our faith in military armaments alone, we build on dust and are heading for destruction. The poet asks God for mercy, for all our failings, and shortcomings.

God of our fathers—our forefathers have always acknowledged that God is the source of their greatness and power.

Our far-flung battle line, A phrase with the true heroic ring in it. The British legions have penetrated to the ends of the earth. Awful hand. Awful, inspiring with awe and reverence.

Palm and pine. Synecdoche—palm representing the tropics, pine the colder countries.

Lord God of Hosts. He is the Head of armies as He was of the Israelites in the wilderness.

The Captains. The commanders of the various divisions of the British forces who attended the Jubilee celebrations.

The Kings. The foreign potentates, princes, and ambassadors, colonial and foreign, assembled to

DRY FARMING

It is a system of cultivation of lands with scanty rainfall, otherwise too dry for agriculture. The land is deeply ploughed and the surface soil is kept loose, and thus forms a "blanket" or "mulch" which prevents the moisture from the damp earth underneath rising by

He is wealthy. Nevertheless he is not proud.

The meaning of these two sentences can be given in one sentence, thus:

- Although he is wealthy he is not proud.
- However wealthy he may be he is not proud.
- He is wealthy but he is not proud.
- He is not proud in spite of his wealth.
- Notwithstanding his wealth he is not proud.

NEWFOUNDLAND

Newfoundland has been called "The Gibraltar of North America," Britain's oldest colony, and The Watch Dog of the St. Lawrence.

John Cabot discovered Newfoundland. He sailed from Bristol in 1497. Newfoundland lies about 1900 miles west of Ireland. Newfoundland was governed by a Commission of seven, of whom three were natives of Newfoundland (1934-1949).

Corner Brook is the second city of Newfoundland with a population of about 10,000. The climate is temperate with mild winters and cool summers.

The heavy fogs off Newfoundland are caused by the mingling of the warm air from the Gulf Stream with the cool air of the Labrador Current.

There is a regular mail and passenger service between North Sydney in Nova Scotia and Port-aux-Basques in Newfoundland. Newfoundland's staple product is codfish. The making of paper is another important industry.

The climate and soil are both not suitable for much farming. In addition, the fishing season occurs at the same time as the growing season and hence interferes with it. The fishing is good off the coast of Newfoundland, because the water is not deep on the Grand Banks which are like a shelf under the surface of the sea. It is also at this point that the icebergs from the Arctic meet the Gulf Stream and melt, depositing their stores of fish-food.
