HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK...

Queen Mary was a luncheon guest of Prime Minister and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin at 10 Downing street, London Thursday. A large crowd gathered outside the Prime Minister's residence when a red carpet was laid from the front door to the curb indicating that distinguished persons were about to arrive. Her Majesty was loudly cheered as she entered the house. Other guests included Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and Mrs. Norman; the Earl of Bessborough, former governor-general of Canada; Earl Stanhope, first commissioner of works; and Sir Philip Sassoon, under-secretary for air and frequently the Prime Minister's host at his country estate.

Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret are to be introduced to a new phase of their education during the Coronation season. In the past the Queen has been adamant in her decision that "the children" should not take part officially in any public function. They have gone to the horse show and to the military tournaments as little visitors as other children might attend. Formal visits to hospitals have been barred and though they have met visitors at least at Buckingham Palace and appeared at the annual garden parties with their mother, these were considered "private" not duties. Now it appears the Princesses are likely to learn something of the meaning of the word "service" for they are to accompany the King and Queen to Holyrood, house, Edinburgh, in July and may also visit Wales immediately afterwards with their parents. If it is decided they will make the latter trip, they will be obliged to spend a night on the royal train, not at present equipped for two younger royals. Princess Elizabeth is becoming used to public appearances and it was noted at the children's concert at which she appeared with her mother last week that she received her bouquet with a graciousness that reminded onlookers of her grandmother, Queen Mary, who shook hands gravely and smiled like her mother, quite at her ease. Princess Margaret, watching her sister and imitated her, winding up the proceedings with a formal little bow.

Regretful farewells are being said to Rev. George Gillespie and Mrs. Gillespie who are leaving Monday for Toronto. During a short residence in this city, as assistant to Mrs. Stewart, he and she have made many warm friends both in church and social circles who will follow their future work with keenest interest.

Bon voyage to Mrs. W. S. Stewart who is leaving this morning for New York where she will be joined by Miss Elsie Nicholson and Mrs. J. O. McCallum of Saskatoon and proceed by the S. S. Aquatania en route to England for the Coronation celebrations. Mrs. Stewart will be among the Charlottetown ladies to receive this honour are Mrs. George De Blois, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Prince Edward Island, and Miss Helen DeBlois; Mrs. Bradford LePage, wife of the President of the Executive Council in Prince Edward Island; Mrs. Rowland Paton, wife of the ADC to the Lieutenant-Governor of P.E.I.

Miss Helen Holman, who graduates from Dalhousie University this year, is leaving next week for England to attend the Coronation. She will sail from Montreal on the Duchess of Athol on Friday, April 30th. Miss Holman will be accompanied by Miss Janet Horne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Lee Horne, Summerside, who is studying in Montreal; Mrs. Heber Large and Mrs. Robert Holman, both of Charlottetown, leave Monday to join them. Mr. and Mrs. J. LeRoy Holman will accompany the party to Montreal to see them off. Their many friends wish them a happy voyage and safe return.

Solberg, of Paris, France, who is home on a short visit. Mrs. Underwood's hospitality also afforded a most welcome opportunity for the large number present to meet two other visitors, former New Glasgow residents. They were Mrs. Ewen MacKinnon, of Charlottetown, and Mrs. Gordon Graham, of Sydney. Pink snapdragons in beautiful glass bowls and vases were effectively used in the drawing room, where Mrs. Underwood, most becomingly gowned in brown, trimmed with ribbon ruching in self-color, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Solberg, very charming in black with white bead trimming in medalion design. Mrs. Gordon Graham was smartly gowned in black crepe and Mrs. MacKinnon wore Coronation blue. The party part of the bodice was of gold lace. Mrs. R. C. Tory poured tea in the dining room where the table was most artistically done. Centering the lovely cloth was a green and gold glass bowl of daffodils flanked by four green glass candle holders with green candles. A further touch of color was introduced in ornamental fruit, in glass. Assisting in taking care of the guests were Mrs. George D. Macdougall, Miss Dahnery Miller, Mrs. L. M. Rhodenizer, Miss Elizabeth Ballam and Miss Janet MacNeill. Miss Jane, winsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Cantley, daintily frocked, discharged the duties of portress quite charmingly.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Gregory entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. C. Grant Gregory, Charlottetown, at an informal buffet supper on Saturday evening at their home, Prince William Street, Saint John. The honor guests have recently taken up residence in Saint John. The party later attended the dance in the Union Club.

A Morning Smile

IN LIGHTER VEIN "Why Donald, it must be nearly 10 years since I last met you?" "Aye, Sahdy, 'tis a mighty long time. We must celebrate." "Aye, let's. But ye'll remember, Donald, I paid the last time!"

A young golfer on the look-out for a game was introduced by the caddy-master to Dr. Jones, another player who had no partner. Dr. Jones was a very quiet serious gentleman who played a very unemotional game. All went well until the third hole, where the younger player found that a perfectly good drive had ended unsuspectingly in a shockingly difficult bunker. He glared at the ball, then he turned to his opponent. "Excuse me, sir," he said, "but before I play this accursed shot do you mind telling me whether you are a D.D. or an M.D.?"

And Mrs. MacArthur will sail on Friday, April 30th from Montreal on the Duchess of Lancaster for England where they will be among the many Canadians who are attending the Coronation.

No Mother Has the Right to Stand in the Way When Her Children Are Ready to be Married - If She Does, She is Selfish in the Extreme

Dear Miss Dix—A splendid young man of my acquaintance has been engaged for years to one of the finest girls in the world. They are desperate in love with each other and would have married long ago except that the boy's mother has gone into hysterics every time he mentioned marriage, and declared that if he left her it would kill her. They have waited, hoping that the mother would come to take a reasonable view of the subject and to have pity on them. Instead of that she has become more violent and now has wrung a promise from her son that he will not marry as long as she lives. The couple are broken-hearted and in despair. What do you think they should do? A FRIEND.

Answer: The thing to be done is to say no more to the mother, but for the young man to take his girl by the hand and step around to the parson and get married forthwith.

Of course, there will be a pretty scene. The mother will rage and have hysterics. She will accuse her son of ingratitude and tell him how much she has done for him and that he has rewarded her by breaking her heart, and so on and so on. Probably she will tell him that he has killed her and that she is going to die, but she won't. In a little while the storm will blow over. She will dry her eyes and accept the situation, since she cannot change it, and by the time there are grandchildren she will be thinking she made the match.

There is really no other more despicable figure in the world than the woman who is so utterly selfish that she is willing to ruin her children's lives in order to gratify her morbid mother passion. Her love for her children is not a beautiful, wholesome, natural affection. It is a neurotic emotion, something dark and sinister, that curses instead of blesses.

A real mother is a woman who is filled with tenderness and devotion to her children. She gives herself without stint to them. She watches over them night and day during their infancy, but she realizes that they must grow up and become men and women and fulfill the destinies of men and women. When the time comes for them to go into the world she does not seek to hamper or hinder them. Instead she sends them forth gladly and proudly with her godspeed ringing in their ears.

The real mother does not try to stunt her children and keep them perpetual babies, dependent upon her. Instead, she teaches them to stand upon their own feet. She develops them into intelligent men and women, capable of using their own brains and judgment. Her love does not cause her to make morons of them. Nor does the real mother make herself an "old woman of the sea" around her children's necks. She tries to be as little of a burden to them as possible and to leave them free to do their own lifework.

But, unfortunately, there are a large number of mothers who do not take this big, broad view of motherhood. They make of it a craft. They enslave their children to them. They bind their sons and daughters so tightly to them with the bonds of filial duty that the poor, bewildered youngsters are afraid to break them lest they commit a mortal sin. These mothers use any weapon, however unfair, with which to beat their children into submission.

With tears, with reproaches, with ill health, with age, with threats of dying, they bow the poor wretched son or daughter, who asserts some right to his or her own life into submission. I have known families who have waited for forty years for Mother to die so that they could do what they wanted to do and have a little liberty.

Every grown man and woman must recognize the utter self-centeredness that makes a mother unwilling for her children to marry, and they are weak and foolish to sacrifice the lives of their own children and that of the men and women who love them to an old woman's whim.

So I say to all such: Don't debate the question with Mother another time. Don't let her bamboozle you with her threats of death. Your marriage isn't going to kill her, nor even make her permanently unhappy, so call her bluff and lie away to the parson with the girl or man of your choice.

Dear Miss Dix—I was married to a good man and had a nice home and a car, but because we argued and quarreled I was fool enough to leave him. Since then I have had to earn my own living. I realize now what a man has to go through to keep up a home and I don't wonder that he was sometimes cross and irritable. Believe me, if my husband had been like I am, I would be willing to overlook a lot of his shortcomings that I made such a fuss about. I have had my lesson. Would you tell him so, and ask for another trial? BELLE.

Answer: I certainly would, Belle. Perhaps he has had his lesson, too. You both will have learned the folly of arguing over things and know how to make concessions, and you will put as much thought and work into trying to make your marriage a success as you would into trying to make a success of any other job you tackled.

It can be done, you know. There would be mighty few divorces if the husband would try to "sell" himself to his wife as he does to his best customer, and if the wife would handle her husband as tactfully and put up with as much nerves and crankiness in him as she does from her boss in an office or store.

You say, now that you have tried making your own living, that you tired and nerve-racked at night, he has simply reached the limit of his endurance, and any chance word or little misadventure is the straw that breaks the camel's back. He is ready to fight at the drop of a hat and likely to drop it if you don't.

I often think that the old proverb, "One-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives," is truer in matrimony than anywhere else. If husbands and wives could only change places now and then and know the trials and difficulties of each other's lot, they would have much more sympathy and patience with each other. The exchange would correct many of the abuses of matrimony.

BOOKS, ART, MUSIC

Some interesting April books include: "Together and Apart" by Margaret Kennedy published on April 1st, and on April 2nd "Son of Chen" by Richard La Piere, a story of 19th century China by a new writer; called a "find" by Harper and Brothers. "For Readers Only" appearing on April 6th is a revelation of the working habits of those famous writers who gathered in the British Museum to collect material for their works—Carlyle, Macaulay, Swinburne, Ruskin, Darwin and others; with caricatures by Low. Later in April came Cecil Roberts "Victoria Four-Thirty" "Garden Rubbish and other Country Bumps" by Sellar and Yeatman authors of "1066 and All That" "The Trumpet of Jubilee", the first novel in three years by Ludwig Lewisohn who wrote "The Island Within" "The Ring is Closed" by Knut Hamsun. "The Du Mauriers" by Daphne Du Maurier, and, early in May, "Pipe All Hands" by H. M. Tomlinson author of "Galleons Reach" "The Wind from the Mountain" by Trygve Gulbransen, the second book of a trilogy of which "Beyond Sing the Woods" was the first.

"Arouse and Beware" is MacKinlay Kantor's newest book. His previous one, "The Voice of Bugle Ann" is, to my mind, one of the most surprising and charming little books of recent years. "Arouse and Beware" also has charm, from the opening paragraph—"The pine needles that shone in those woods ever my thought hurries back to that bright March morning, I see a woman with pale hair and grey eyes walking toward me down the years"—to the exciting close; but it has a very bitter realism as well.

The story is of the escape, in 1864, of two Yankee soldiers from the Confederate prison on Belle Island, and of their flight, on which they were accompanied by a woman who was also fleeing from Virginia, to the Union lines.

Mr. Kantor's character drawing and descriptive powers are remarkable. When once begun the book is very hard to leave; as one reviewer has said, "this is a fast-moving novel into whose torrent the reader is swept irresistibly."

W. E. Milne of the Toronto Saturday Night writes—"I consider 'Arouse and Beware' a great novel. I consider MacKinlay Kantor a great writer, and I am going out to beg or borrow the three Kantor novels I have not yet read. The excellence of 'The Voice of Bugle Ann' was no accident."

The National Geographic Magazine for April contains most interesting articles and photographs of the restoration of Williamsburg, Metropolis of the Virginia Colony. The main article, by Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin who first conceived the idea of restoring Williamsburg, begins:

"Williamsburg is dedicated to the hope and purpose that the future may learn from the past. It is designed to preserve and recreate the symbols and memorials of a creative and colorful period of American history. The compelling reasons for its restoration lie in the historic background of the city, and in the intrinsic simplicity and alluring beauty of its architectural form."

The partial restoration in 1904-1907 of Bruton Parish church, where George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and other famous men worshipped, was the beginning of the thought of the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg; and sketches showing the possibilities of the restoration were shown in 1927 to

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

Life gives us better than it takes away. In brighter hope and broader fuller day. There is no past, but all things move and blend. In sure fulfillment of a promised end.

BEAUTY The very first discovery of beauty strikes the mind with an inward joy, and spreads a cheerfulness and delight through all its faculties.—Addison.

JUSTICE Be not exacting in your justice, lest you be unjust in your exacting.

REWARDS The best reward for having wrought well already is to have more to do.

HUMOR There is humor in all things, and that is the truest philosophy which teaches us how to find and to enjoy it.—W. S. Gilbert.

GOOD NATURE Good nature is the very air of a good mind; the sign of a large and generous soul, and the peculiar soil in which virtue prospers. —Goodman.

STORING DISHES Stick a small piece of plastic modeling material on the shelf in front of your favorite display dish or plate and stop it from slipping. It is inconspicuous if the right colour is used.

KEEPING SUET Suet may be kept fresh for some time if it is chopped up roughly and sprinkled with a little granulated sugar. The brown discoloration marks which sometimes appear on fireproof oven dishes during cooking may be removed by applying common salt with a damp cloth while the dish is still hot.

TOMATO SOUP Next time you have tomato soup, add two or three slices of orange, just before serving; it gives a new and very pleasant flavor.
