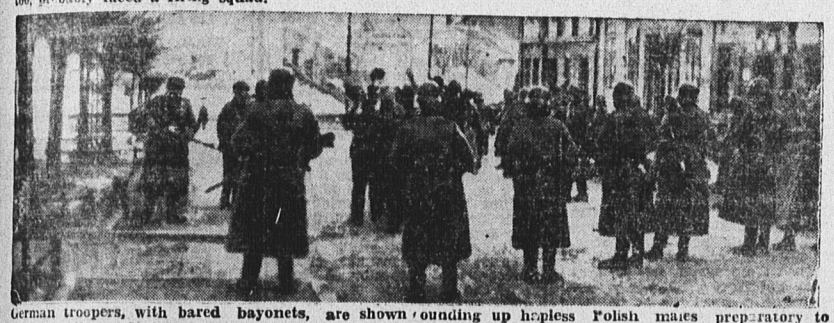
Nazi Firing Squads "Pacify" Poles

How Hitler is carrying out his boast to exterminate the Poles is graphically shown in these pictures taken from the pocket of a German airmen shot down over England. Polish civilians are shown above lying on the ground where they fell after facing a hail of bullets from a Nazi firing squad. Compatriots were forced to dig their graves under the direction of Nazi soldiers. After the grave was completed, they, too, probably faced a firing squad.



German troopers, with bared bayonets, are shown rounding up hapless Polish males preparatory to marching them off for execution, or worse, a living death in the hell of a Nazi concentration camp.

Standing before the grave they were forced to dig for themselves, three Poles are executed by a German firing squad composed of Nazi military police who wear army uniforms but use Czech Mauser rifles.

With their hands behind their heads, a long line of Poles is shown being marched through a Silesian town, under the watchful eye of German soldiers. Few, if any, of the prisoners were lucky enough to receive a trial before being shot, hung or sent to a concentration camp.

THOMPSON - MACDONALD NUPTIALS — A wedding of much interest was solemnized on February 19th at the Little Flower Church, Morell, when Mary Lauretta, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, became the bride of Raymond Joseph, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George MacDonald, Little Pond. They were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Phelan MacKenna. The bride, given away by her father, was very becoming in a street-length dress of Royal blue velvet, blue hat with a black fur coat and white accessories. She was attended by her siser, Helen, who wore a soldier blue dress with black and white accessories, while the groom was supported by his brother, Alex MacDonald. After the ceremony the bridal couple left the church in showers of confetti for the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to relatives and friends. In the afternoon the wedding party drove to the home of the groom, where a wedding supper was served to upwards of a hundred invited guests. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all in dancing. Before the wedding the bride was honored with a shower at the home of Mrs. James Whalen, where she was the recipient of many useful and lovely gifts. Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald will reside at Little Pond. The groom is a prosperous farmer.

Tempers flare In U. S. Senate Over Aid Bill

By Richard L. Turner
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27 — (AP) —Debate on the British-aid bill reached the stage of snapping tempers in the Senate today.

Senator Albert Chandler, Kentucky Democrat, accused opponents of the bill of endeavoring to undermine public confidence in President Roosevelt. In turn, Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem.-Mont.), leading foe of the measure and noted isolationist, charged that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to "flim-flam" the public.

Wheeler repeatedly described as "shocking" the President's statement yesterday that the task of winning the war must take precedence over talk of peace aims and called it indicative of an attitude that the United States already is in the war.

The session which began in quiet fashion with Senator Gerald Nye (Rep.-N.D.) continuing a speech begun last week, was suddenly transformed into a scene of excitement.

First, Wheeler interrupted Nye to say that Mr. Roosevelt's words indicated a position which the United States should not take unless it is ready to enter the war.

"How can Britain win, unless we come into the war?" Nye asked, and to this, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Dem.-Mo.) added the observation that the President had "practically said, 'Yes we are in the war.'"

Chandler plunged into the discussion.

"I don't think any Senator is serving his country by making the people lack confidence in their President," he said. "We may get into war although I hope we don't... if we do all this talk is going to do us no good."

Wheeler referred again to Mr. Roosevelt's press conference statement of yesterday, which he interpreted as "urging the British people to fight on."

"I'm sick and tired of seeing the American people flim-flammed, whether by Democrats or Republicans."

But Chandler had not finished.

"You fellows who call yourselves isolationists are going to win some day," he said. "You are going to be completely isolated. They will come over from all directions, and they will bomb your cities and your houses."

Referring obviously to Wheeler's recent plea for a negotiated peace, he declared that it was impossible to negotiate with Hitler. One by one the countries that negotiated with him have been swallowed up, he said, adding:—

"And you fellows want to negotiate with Hitler. I'm not going to do it. If you do it you're fools."

There was a burst of applause from spectators.

Fascisms Swan Song

(Hamilton Spectator)

Finito Mussolini has not only lost his grip as a would-be modern Caesar, fighting to re-establish the the ancient glories of the Roman empire, but as a spell-binder as well. The man who aspired to be emperor and tribune at one and the same time has come such a cropper that he actually finds it expedient to forsake the famous balcony of the Palazzo Venetia, where he was wont to shout his bombastic defiance, for a hastily-summoned meeting in a theatre, at which he is reduced to an abject confession of failure on all fronts. The speech, it is thought, was especially intended for his axis partner, Herr Hitler; if so, it was a clumsy attempt which the Fuehrer is little likely to appreciate.

The Italians are told that they must reconcile themselves to the fact that they have been soundly licked on the battlefield, but should rejoice in their good fortune in having a strong ally like Germany, ready to take on all comers. Let them welcome with open arms the goose-stepping Nazis and the agents of the Gestapo, for on them alone depends any hope of redressing the balance!

Hitler cannot afford to see his partner drop out of the war, and will undoubtedly come to the assistance of Mussolini before it is too late. The gobbling-up process, predicted by Premier Churchill, has set in even quicker than anticipated, but it will be none the less thorough for that. The axis partnership has now become a merger, and the deluded Italian populace is frankly told by their Duce that they must make the best of it. What that best is is already seen in the shar orders from Berlin. The thousand of Italian workers who are being rushed to Germany to do the bidding of their Nazi taskmasters are a bitter foretaste of what is to come.

The morale of the Italian people, says the Duce, willl never break, come what may. But such speeches as that of yesterday impose severe strains on any public confidence that may still survive. A nation which is brought to the humiliating position of pinning all its hopes on Nazi sympathy is indeed in a perlous state. Italy's disastrous little walk with the tiger reached its inevitable climax almost as soon as it began.

King Herod's fortress in Jerusalem was named Antonia fortress to honour Mark Antony.

Solves Travel Problem

Roy Davis, of Jackson's Point, Ont., spends a good part of his winters visiting ice fishermen all over Lake Simcoe. He found sleighs were slow, cars got stuck and other vehicles sometimes went through the ice. So he built himself an "aero snowmobile" with scrap wood, an automobile engine, sleigh runners and an airplane propeller. He's shown at the wheel with some pals in the 80-miles-an-hour whirlwind.

Queen Inspects Gifts from U. S.

The scene of the above photograph is Dartmouth House, headquarters of the English-speaking U in London, (where the Queen and Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, acting chairman of the Union, are inspecting gifts from the United States. Her Majesty is obviously interested in a child's coat which before being sent to London was modelled in a fash on show in New York. The clothing shown here was all received from the United States in connection with the Union's war relife work.
