Rules Governing Guardian "Famous Canadians" Contest

Everyone who is a paid in advance subscriber excepting employees of The Guardian and their families may take part. As many members of one family of a paid in advance subscriber may compete as desire and any subscriber may send in as many sets of answers as he or she wishes, but each set must be complete and will be judged individually.

The successful competitors whose subscriptions are paid farthest into 1932 will have the preference.

Clip the picture and coupon underneath it every day and write the answer on the blank line. Save all your clippings until the end of the contest and then send them to the "Famous Canadians" Contest Editor of The Guardian in one batch. Name and address should be included, clearly written or printed, and securely attached to your solutions. It will facilitate handling if you bind your solutions by sewing along the top, or using paper fasteners.

In sending more than one solution, each solution must be enclosed in a separate envelope.

Please attach sufficient postage as, otherwise, it may be necessary to refuse acceptance of the mail.

In case of a tie The Guardian reserves the right to publish one or more tie-breaking puzzles.

The judges' decision will be final in all matters, and The Guardian will not undertake to enter into correspondence with any individual regarding the decision of the judges.

A Northland Romance

At the last echo died away the audience rose as one man and a shower of nugsgets pelted on the stage. Here was something that touched their hearts; stirred in them strange memories of tenderness, brought before them half-forgotten scenes of fireside happiness.

The curtain fell. Men were clearing the floor for the dance, so I went downstairs, pressed my way to the door, and stood there staring and swaying, but whether with wine or weakness I knew not. In the vociferous and flamboyant voices of speliars, the jiggling tunes of the orchestras, the click of ivory balls, the popping of corks, the hoarse, animal laughter of men the shrill, inane giggle of women.

And as I stood there wretchedly a timid little hand touched my arm.

CHAPTER XI

She was changed, desperately pitifully changed. All the old sweetness was there, that pathetic sweetness which had made the miners call her the Madonna; but alas, forever gone from her was the fragrant flower of girlhood. Sorrow had kindled in her gray eyes a spiritual luster, a shining, tearless brightness. Ah me, sad, sad, indeed was the change in her!

Her lips moved: "How you have changed!"

"Yes, Berna, I have been ill. But you, you have changed."

"Yes," she said very slowly. "I have been—dead."

There was no faltering in her voice, never a throb of pathos. It was like the voice of one who had given, up all hope, the voice of one who had arisen from the grave.

"Come upstairs where we can talk," said she. So we sat down in one of the boxes, while a great freezing shadow seemed to fall and wrap us around. We were like two pale ghosts meeting in the misty gulfs beyond the grave.

"And why did you not come?" she asked.

"I would have sold my soul to come. I was ill, desperately ill, night to death. I was in the hospital. For two weeks I was delirious, raving of you, trying to get to you, making myself a hundred times worse because of you. But what could I do? I was out of my mind, weak as a child, fighting for my life. That was why I did not come."

When I began to speak she started. As I went on she drew a quick choking breath. Then she listened ever so intently, and when I had finished a great change came over her. When she spoke her voice was a whisper.

"And they lied to me. They told me you were too eager gold-getting to think of me; that you were in love with some other woman out there; that you cared no more for me. They lied to me. Well, it's too late now."

She laughed, and the once tuneful voice was harsh and grating. Still were her eyes blank with misery.

I longed to comfort her, to kiss that face so white and worn and weary, to bring tears to those hopeless eyes. There seemed to grow in me a greater hunger for the girl than ever before, a longing to bring joy to her again, to make her forget. What did it all matter? She was still my love. I yearned for her. We both had suffered, both been through the furnace. Surely from it would come the love that passeth understanding.

"Berna," I said, "it is not too late. We have both been miserably duped. Never mind. Berna, we will forget all. I love you. Let us forget and go away and be happy."

It seemed as if my every word was like a stab to her. The sweet face was tragically wretched.

"Oh, no," she answered, "it can never be. You think it can but it can't. You could not forget. I could not forget. We would both be always thinking; always, always, torturing each other. Our home would be a haunted one, a place of ghosts. Never again can there be joy between you and me. It's too late, too late!"

She was choking back the sobs now, but still the tears did not come.

"Berna," I said gently, "I think I could forget. Please give me a chance to prove it. I know it is not your fault. I know that spiritually you are the same pure girl you were before."

"No, I was not to blame. When you failed to come, I grew desperate. When I wrote you and still you failed to come I was almost distracted. Night and day he was persecuting me. The others gave me no peace. If ever a poor girl was hounded to dishonor I was. Yet I had made up my mind to die rather than yield. Oh, it's too horrible."

"Never mind, dear, don't tell me about it."

"When I awoke to life, sick, sick for many days, I wanted to die, but I could not. I was so weak, so ill, so indifferent to everything that it did not seem to matter. That was where I made my mistake. I should have killed myself. Oh, there's something in us all that makes us cling to life in spite of shame. But I would never let him come near me again. And though, when he went away, I've gone into this life, there's never been anyone else. I've danced with them, laughed with them, but that's all. You believe me?"

"Yes, dear."

"Thank God for that! And now we must say good-by. I would not spoil your life. You know how proud I am, how sensitive. I would not give you such a I. Once I would have given myself to you gladly, but now—please go away. Leave me, please."

"Leave you—to what?"

"To death, ruin—I don't know what. If I'm strong enough, I will die. If I am weak I will sink in the mire."

"Berna, will you marry me?"

"No! No! No!"

"Berna, I will never leave you. Here I tell you frankly, plainly, I don't know whether or not you still love me—you haven't said a word to show it—but I know I love you, and I will love you as long as life lasts. I will never leave you. Listen to me, dear; let us go away, far, far away. You will forget. I will forget. Come with me, O my love! Have pity on me, Berna, have pity. Marry me. Be my wife."

She merely shook her head, sitting there cold as a stone.

"Then," I said, "if you call yourself dishonored, I too will become dishonored. We will go down together, you and I. Oh, I would rather sink with you, than rise with the angels. You have chosen—well, I, too, have chosen. You will see me steep myself in shame, then when I am a hundred shades blacker than you can ever hope to be, my angel, you will stop and pity me. We'll go down together, dear. Hand in hand hellward we'll go down, go down."

She was looking at me in a fright- ened way. A madness seemed to have gotten into me.

"Berna, you're on the dance halls. You're at the mercy of the vilest wretch that's got an ounce of gold in his filthy poke. They can buy you as they buy white flesh anywhere on earth. Berna, I can buy you. Come, dance with me, drink with me. We'll live. We'll eat, drink and be merry. On with the dance! Oh, for the joy of life! Since you'll not be my love, Berna, come!"

I paused. With head lying on the cushioned edge of the box she was crying.

"Will you come?" I asked again. She did not move.

"Then," said I, "there are others, and I have money, lots of it. I can buy them. I am going down into the vortex. Look on and watch me." I left her crying.

HAZELBROOK

Mrs. Harley White, Toronto, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ings, Mt. Herbert.

Mrs. Henry Jones, who spent the past few weeks in Annandale, has returned to her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Wood, Royalty, motored to Hazelbrook this week.

Mr. H. Carver made a business trip to Fort Augustus this week.

Mr. Percy Pippy, who has the contract of building the ice house for the Hazelbrook creamery, has about completed the job.

Mr. Bruce Noy, Hunter River, made a business trip here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Mutch have returned home from a pleasant visit to Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Myers are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a baby boy.

What might have proved a serious accident occurred on the Hazelbrook road this week when a Ford car driven by a young gentleman turned over twice, demolishing the glass of the car. The driver escaped with only a few scratches and the car was able to be returned to the city on its own power.

Messrs. Lenwood McNeill, Warren Acorn, Isaac Mitchell and Daniel Myers, motored to Morell this week.

The bean supper and bazaar in aid of the Ladies' Aid of the Mt. Herbert Church, which was held on Wednesday evening, proved a wonderful success, both socially and financially.

Mrs. H. A. Jenkins left on Saturday morning for Montreal, where she will again enter the Royal Victoria Hospital for treatment. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.—H.

HAMILTON IS HAPPY OVER NEW TARIFF

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 25.—Benefits will accrue to many Hamilton industries through the 50 per cent. schedule adopted in Britain, prominent manufacturers stated today. Among the products affected are vacuum cleaners, radios, textiles, soaps, tires and tubes and metal furniture.

"We will benefit greatly," W. G. Vogt, general manager of the Hoover company, stated "Our plant was established to take care of the Canadian and overseas trade and 65 per cent. of our output has been shipped to England."

M. B. Bolton, president of the Chipman-Holton company, pointed out that the new tariff would leave the home market for the British manufacturer and tend to stop him from competing here with Canadian textile industries.

The Canadian Westinghouse company is busier than for several months, and expect enlargement

"Husband off to work, children off to school, how do you do it?"

"Oh, that's easy if you serve Shredded Wheat. I just take the biscuits from the package and serve them with cream, or with hot milk on cold winter days. My family never tire of it, and of course that pleases me, because Shredded Wheat is a great body-builder. The necessary vitamins and minerals are there, and so is the bran which is so important to good health."
