Much sympathy is expressed in the village of Cornwall for the family of James Kellow. Mrs. Kellow had been unwell for some time, with what developed into Bright's disease, and last week seemed to be sinking. Her son George took sick about two weeks ago, with typhoid fever from the effects of which he died on Friday morning and Saturday was interred at Cornwall Cemetery. On Saturday his mother became unconscious, and remained in that State till Sunday morning at three o'clock, when she too passed away.

Mrs. (Rev.) I. M. Mellish, her daughter Mrs. J. R. McCormack, and grand children Misses Victoria and Frances McCormack left Saturday for their home in Salem, Mass., after spending the past two months with their friends and relatives on the Island. Both ladies expressed themselves as having spent a delightful summer, and are charmed with the autumnal beauty of the island as well as its cool bracing air through the warmer months. As a musician Mrs. McCormack has displayed unusual skill and talent both in instrumental and vocal culture and before returning home she gave a song recital at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Peardon, of Union Road, where she made her home during her visit. All who were present at the recital enjoyed a rare musical treat which will not soon be forgotten.

THE death took place Saturday of Mrs. Simon Fraser a well known and respected resident of the City. In 1838 Mrs. Fraser formerly Jessie Cameron of Scotsburn N. S. came to this Province with her husband Simon Fraser, a native of Rocklin. Mr. Fraser was for many years the esteemed proprietor of the Rocklin House—now the Revere Hotel, on Kent Street. After his death about six years ago, Mrs. Fraser took up her residence on Fitzroy Street where with her daughter Miss Annie, organist of Zion Church, she has since resided. The other surviving members of her family are William now of Boston, and Mrs. McJanis of this City. Mrs. Fraser was a truly Christian lady loved and respected by all with whom she came in contact. Her death, after but a short illness which was not thought to be serious, comes as a severe shock to her family and friends, who will mourn for many a day the many kindnesses of a devoted mother and a sincere sympathizer. To the bereaved family the Guardian extends its sincere sympathy.

mits for the passage of the Dardanelles automatically without arousing the attention of the powers. It is certain that Russia has something beyond this in mind, because the result would be out of proportion to her elaborate efforts to bring pressure to bear on Turkey with the assistance of Bulgaria, and the recent autumn rehearsal for a Macedonian rising was the right season to spring her plan.

THE latter was probably wrong in going so far as to say that the Turkish concession to Russia would be announced in a circular to the powers. Such an announcement would be tantamount to the Abrogation of the Treaty of Berlin, and would create a serious crisis, which Great Britain especially would regard as of the gravest concern. The whole naval situation in the Mediterranean, aside from the diplomatic consequences, would be altered by such a concession of the Porte. It is known, moreover, that Turkey has permitted two Russian warships to pass the Dardanelles within a few days.
