High on an Alpine peak Swiss mountain climber shows one way to escape bombs and blitzes of Europe. This peaceful scene is near St. Moritz, famed tourist playground of Switzerland.

Apparently scared stiff by their close call, this group of survivors from the Bismarck show no expression as they await their fate after landing in England. A Canada-bound transport liner dodged the Bismarck after being warned by an accompanying destroyer to increase its speed.

This wounded survivor of the Bismarck, German cruiser sunk by British salvos and torpedoes, apparently festers his trousers as the largest ship of the enemy navy was "cleared out". He was one of the 100 or so survivors picked up out of a crew of 2,300.

When the troops arrived at Noranda, Que., during the recruiting drive through the north country, seven-year-old Jerry Herstead was waiting for them, very anxious to join the army. He seized a helmet and rifle from one of the men and is shown giving a demonstration of how he would meet the enemy if only given a chance.

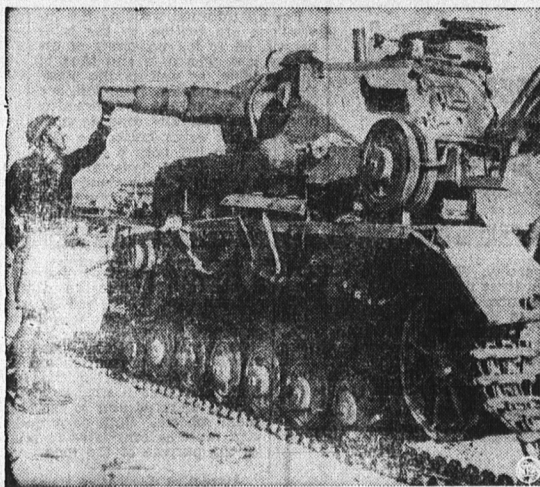

FINISH THE JOB

Negroes can see better than white men at night, two scientists have learned from vision tests with selective service draftees at Fort Bragg, N.C. This may revolutionize the Negro's role in the U.S. armed forces. Dr. H. de Sylva of Yale university's Driver Research centre described the discovery as "the most startling find since we entered the field of night vision." He and Dr. W. M. Mills, vision expert of the National Research Council, will present their findings to Col. David Grant, chief medical officer of the army air corps. Dr. de Sylva did not offer any explanation as to the apparent superiority of the night vision of Negroes. If the tests are found to be conclusive, Negroes may be given such jobs as driving truck convoys during blackouts and spotting ships and aircraft at night.

As flames gutted the Jersey City, N.J., waterfront, costing $25,000,000 worth of damage, firefighters on water as well as land helped confine the conflagration. Above at left, fireboats pour tons of water on the blaze which was still burning 24 hours later. A top remains of building stands skeleton of a large electric sign.

BRITISH BOOTY—Big booty for the British is this German tank with its heavy cannon. British shells stopped it in foray against Axis troops near Egypt-Libya frontier.

SKY-WRITERS—Writing a pattern of death in the skies is this battle-hardened British anti-aircraft crew, part of the garrison at Tobruk, besieged for weeks by Axis ground and air forces.

Proving photogenic as New York's little mayor, tall Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, does a La Guardia with fireman's helmet while visiting Washington station with British fire fighters.

DARK FUTURE—Like participants in a grim game of blind-man's bluff, blindfolded Italian prisoners captured near Tobruk are brought to the beleaguered fortress for questioning.

"DECORATED"—This grinning Britisher awarded himself a decoration—the Iron Cross he wears. Late owner won't need it.

AID FROM THE ENEMY—Italian ammunition boxes filled with stones make a "for" for this British anti-aircraft crew. They're a desert outpost of Tobruk defenses.

We won't let Britain down!
