HOGGING CORN SAVES FEED

In a series of four tests at the Brandon Experimental Farm of the Dominion Department of Agriculture the practice of "hogging" corn, i.e. turning hogs into a field of mature corn to feed, show that material economies in meal feed are possible and that the returns from hogs so fed are substantially greater than the cost of growing the corn. The type of hog developed is entirely satisfactory; the practice of "hogging" saves considerable labour in feeding; and it supplies considerable grain for growing hogs at a time when farm grains are most scarce. An ample supply of fresh water must be available on the hogging lot, and tankage supplied by a self-feeder is desirable.

TO AVOID BLOATING

Bloating is an ever present danger with dairy cows on pasture, particularly where the legume is alfalfa. Means for lessening this danger, advised by animal husbandry experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, include: Never turn a cow out on alfalfa pasture on an empty stomach; give a small feed of dry hay before turning out; have a supply of water available in or near the pasture at all times; don't turn the cows out onto a freshly irrigated pasture, or a pasture reeking wet from rain, heavy dew or coated with frost. Much of the danger may also be avoided by mixing grass with alfalfa in seeding down the pastures. The cows prefer grass to legumes such as alfalfa or sweet clover and will take the edge of their appetites before feeding on them.

Catskill Waits "Legs" Diamond Trial Next Week

STATE HOPES TO SEND RACKETEER CHIEF TO PRISON FOR LIFE

CATSKILL, N. Y. June 2—This community, where Rip Van Winkle had his prolonged nap of storied fame, is preparing for one of the biggest events in its history, the trial of Jack (Legs) Diamond, New York racketeer, on charges upon which the state hopes to send him to prison for life.

For weeks the citizens have been given a foretaste of what it is to be in the limelight, jostled by a small army of newspaper photographers, reporters and state troopers.

Diamond, who is recovering from gunshot wounds suffered in the most recent attempt on his life, was to be released from Albany City hospital in time for the trial, which is scheduled for June 8. He will face the court with two of his ablest lieutenants, Harry Klein, who is known to the underworld by the unflattering sobriquet of "Skunky," and Paul Quatrochi, reputed to be overseer of the flourishing beer business directed by his chief.

Face Attack Charge

Diamond and Quatrochi will face a series of charges growing out of an attack on Grover Parks, a truckman, who was held up, tied to a tree and tortured by having matches applied to his bare feet. The purpose of the attack, the State contends, was to learn the identity of a man for whom Parks was delivering a load of cider. Quatrochi also will be charged with invading a local lodge room and demanding that he be given the beer privileges. Both Parks and James Duncan, who was with him at the time of the assault have been closely guarded by state troopers to prevent intimidation by gangsters.

Deputy Attorney General John T. Cahill, who has headed the state's investigation, will conduct the prosecution of the trial assisted by deputy attorneys general Harry Epstein and August Merrill, who also were active in running down evidence of gangster activities, which are said to have transformed the drowsy Catskill county tryside into a veritable racketeers' Paradise.

Possible Venue Change

Former Judge Daniel H. Prior of Albany, Diamond's legal advisor, has accused the investigators of creating a furor in the hope they might send Diamond and the other defendants to jail. His statement was taken as an indication he will apply for a change of venue.

Tinea trichophyton gives half of Canada "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

On locker-room, gymnasium and bath-house floors, on the wet edges of swimming pools and showers—even on hotel bath-mats—lurks tinea trichophyton, the ringworm parasite that causes "Athlete's Foot!"

And from such places it is carried into countless Canadian homes every day. Be on your guard against this stealthy infection! It may first show itself as a rash or tiny itching blisters between your smaller toes—or it may take the form of skin cracks, or moist, white scabbiness, or unnatural dryness with little scales—in any of these cases it is most probably "Athlete's Foot."

Absorbine Jr. Kills This Germ

Exhaustive laboratory tests prove that Absorbine Jr. penetrates deeply into flesh like tissues and that it quickly kills tinea trichophyton, the ringworm germ, wherever it penetrates.

Protect yourself; protect your family. At the first hint of infection do use your feet morning and night
