

A WOMAN'S BACK IS THE MAINSPRING OF HER PHYSICAL SYSTEM.

The Slightest Back-ache, if Neglected, is Liable to Cause Years of Terrible Suffering.

No woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well, and regular in their action. When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to have filtered out of the blood are left in the system.

The female constitution is naturally more subject to kidney disease than a man's; and what is more, a woman's work is never done—her whole life is one continuous strain.

How many women have you heard say: "My back aches!" Do you know that backache is one of the first signs of kidney trouble? It is, and should be attended to immediately. Other symptoms are frequent thirst, scanty, thick, cloudy or highly colored urine, burning sensation when urinating, frequent urination, puffing under the eyes, swelling of the feet and ankles, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

These symptoms if not taken in time and cured at once, will cause years of terrible kidney suffering. All these symptoms, and in fact, these diseases may be cured by the use of

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

They act directly on the kidneys, and make them strong and healthy.

Mrs. Mary Galley, Auburn, N.S., writes: "For over four months I was troubled with a lame back and was unable to turn in bed without help. I was induced by a friend to try Doan's Kidney Pills. After using two-thirds of a box my back was as well as ever."

Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price. The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE GUARDIAN'S SHORT STORY

AN UNUSUAL THING

By VIRGINIA LILLA WENTZ

Copyright, 1905, by Baby Douglas

The truth about the whole matter was that while Doris loved Jack she didn't want to marry him yet. Freedom spelled "fun"—travel, admirers—oh, in short, everything nice and exciting! She simply couldn't bear the thought of "settling down."

And Jack was so ardent, so boyishly impetuous, that she must perforce keep him at arm's length or all would be over. Therefore her promise to give him a straight answer "when he did some unusual thing" was merely a subterfuge to gain time, which she had employed at the beginning of the summer.

And now the summer and the last rose of it had flown. It was October. And Jack hadn't done anything unusual yet—nothing but be his nice, dear, wholesome self! The October days were full of elixir, and the tread of beauty was on the hills and the fields of grass and fodder, ripened by August suns and tanned by early September frosts to a mellow autumn bronze.

With the passing of summer almost all the boarders had left the pretty little Berkshire resort except Doris Dudley and her invalid mother, who were to remain there some weeks longer. It was Jack's custom, since he had been obliged to return to town, to run down on Saturdays and spend Sunday with them.

This particular Sunday morning Doris and he were crossing the sloping meadows, plowing through the tangle of withered sedge and brown grass, when Jack suddenly broke out bitterly: "I don't believe you care for me at all—or ever have!"

"Really?" said Doris indifferently. She rested her white sunshade far back over her shoulder and looked dreamily across the meadows to the purple hills beyond, but there were dimples in her cheeks and a multitude of little curls blowing in her eyes.

"Why are you so provoking, dear? You've all but given your promise, and yet you keep putting me off and leading me along as if I were a pet animal with no will of its own. Well, I'm a fool!" he repeated, fiercely suppressing the expletive.

"Goodness, no, Jack!" drawled the mischievous Doris. "Not so bad as that!"

Jack cooled a bit and renewed his pleadings. "But do be reasonable, Doris. If you don't intend to throw me over, tell me when you'll give me a positive answer, and!"

"When you do some unusual thing, you know," interjected she sweetly, blowing the curls out of her eyes.

Jack, who had been carrying his hat, slapped it on his head with an exclamation of disgust. He was certainly vexed and took very long strides.

"Hello, Jack!" called Doris daintily after him as he far outdistanced her. "That's not the way I'm going. I'm going down by the bridge. Want to come?" It chanced that he did.

Now, the path to the bridge was rather a pretty path, running through a small wood, which in summer time was full of shade and woodbine and foxgloves and ferns. These had vanished, but the glory of the wood, the stream, remained.

Spanning the stream was the bridge. It was tiny and not particularly serviceable, with gingerbreadly trellicwork at the side for the tickling of unartistic tastes.

"Let's rest here," suggested Doris, sitting down comfortably on the flimsy side rail of the bridge. With one hand she held a bunch of ruffled skirts, and with her other she balanced herself on the handle of her sunshade.

"Isn't the puppy haze on these hills beautiful?" remarked she poetically. "It was only some belated cricket, forgotten by July, that chirped an appreciative reply to this poetic observation. As to Jack, he was silent for a few moments; then with coarse, masculine directness he went straight to the spot.

"But what in thunder can a chap like me do, Doris, that would be unusual? I'm a decent enough sort, I reckon—good family, wholesome instincts and all that, with enough money to live on and a reasonable amount of industry—but as for doing anything 'unusual,' pshaw!" he broke off irascibly.

Doris hummed an air from "Little Johnnie Jones" and gathered her skirt frills a bit closer. Apparently she wasn't giving his recital the closest attention.

Jack flicked a beetle from the railing and changed his tactics. "Isn't it enough for your purpose, little girl, to be sure that I love you?" he asked.

Doris shot a lightning glance at her big lover from under her dark lashes. "Still," she said musingly, "I should like you to do some unusual thing."

Jack passed one hand over his swarthy brow and took a hurried review of his resources. "Possibly," observed he oddly at length, "I might write a book."

Doris giggled. "Yes, and dedicate it to me," suggested she. "In what form—"To my Wife?" asked Jack hotly.

"Look!" said she quickly, nodding her head toward the opposite bank of the stream. Jack looked. He saw a slight, sinuous movement among the high grasses of the margin, and then something slid suddenly into the water.

"Pooh," said he, leaning against the rail of the bridge to look over "a water rat."

Doris swung a dainty russet shoe a bit beyond the edges of her ruffles. "No," she said, sorrowfully contemplating the tip of the shoe and reverting to the penultimate subject, "I'm afraid you'll never write a book, Jack."

Jack was still leaning over the flimsy side rail looking down at the stream. "I've hit it!" cried he, with enthusiasm.

"The water rat?" queried Doris. "Oh, the poor little creature!" "The water rat, nothing! I've hit upon an unusual experiment."

Doris turned upon him sympathetically, her eyes like stars. "Honest Injun, Jack?"

"Honest Injun," said he, wheeling about and sitting likewise on the bridge rail. A sardonic smile lurked in the corners of his genial mouth. "Only," he added, "I'm not going to do 'the unusual thing' alone. I wouldn't for worlds wear a laurel wreath alone."

He slipped an arm through hers. "You know, I've sworn long ago that all my honors should be shared with you."

"But what's the unusual experiment?" questioned Doris doubtfully. "Why, we're going to fall into the water," announced he pleasantly.

"Don't be an idiot!" expostulated she. "An idiot? Exactly. Isn't it 'unusual' for a sensible, level-headed fellow like me to be an idiot?" he elucidated. "Now the thing I am about to do will be undoubtedly idiotic, therefore 'unusual,' he proceeded to argue. "And seeing that it wouldn't do for me to distinguish myself alone—he interwined his legs with some of the ornamental trellicwork and leaned pretty far back—"either we'll do an unusual thing, now and together, or you!"

There was an impressive pause, while the cricket chirped and Doris endeavored vainly to wriggle her arm out of his.

Cured of Drunkenness

How a Montreal lady cured her husband of drunkenness with a secret home remedy.

"I want to tell you that the late Samaria Prescription has cured my husband of his drinking habit, and before I had used the full treatment he was permanently cured. I give him the remedy in his tea, and as it had no taste or smell, he never knew he was taking it. I want others to know; so you can use this late, but please not say mine yet. I may say that my husband's health is better in every way than for years."

Healthy Blood Best Germicide

YOU CAN PREVENT AS WELL AS CURE DISEASE BY KEEPING THE BLOOD PURE AND RICH WITH Dr Chase's Nerve Food.

"Healthy blood is the most powerful germicide extant," said Sir William Collins recently, in a lecture on "The Man vs. The Microbe."

This well-known authority proceeds to show how much more successfully disease can be combated by keeping the blood pure and rich than by inoculating into it the other germs of disease.

And this is what we have been claiming for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and what we have been backing up by the testimony of worthy people in all parts of the country.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food prevents disease as well as cures because it contains in condensed form the very ingredients which go to form new, rich blood and nerve force.

Especially at this time of year when the system has become run down and the blood weakened the majority of people find it necessary to use some treatment in order to enrich and purify the blood and increase the vigor of the body.

Neglect to assist Nature at this trying time means that you leave yourself liable to attack by all sorts of disease germs. It also means that, instead of accomplishing your work with pleasure and success, you are miserable and by your irritability and unhappiness to all associated with you.

Some of the most common indications of a run-down system are headaches, sleeplessness, indigestion and a general lack of energy and vitality.

No treatment we know of so thoroughly overcomes these symptoms as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you can prove its remarkable blood-forming, tissue-building qualities by noting your increase on weight while using it.

If you would feel strong and well and avoid all the ills and weakness so common at this season, enrich your blood and revitalize your nerves by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Toronto.
