Larger donations in every line of goods donated plus articles going at higher prices realized a record amount that will be turned over to help swell the Crippled Children's Fund.

NEW COMFORT FEATURES C. N. R. PASSENGER EQUIPMENT

MONTREAL, December 5.—A new automatic heating and air conditioning control system which maintains an even temperature inside the car no matter what sudden changes there may be in the weather is one of many new features planned to add to the comforts of railway travellers in Canada. This innovation will be included in the construction of thirty new streamlined first class coaches which will go into Canadian National Railways' service soon. The cars are being built by the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Montreal, and are scheduled to roll off the assembly line early next year.

From the time the porter or the conductor flicks the switch to set it in operation, the system maintains the inside of the car to within one degree of the desired temperature, even though outside it may vary 50 degrees within a few hours. Unlike those previously in use, the device functions without any adjustment by the train crew. Whether it be 50 below in winter or 100 above in summer, the heating and air conditioning system will automatically adjust itself to keep the inside temperature of the car comfortable.

A recent development, it is called "cycle modulation" control. Perhaps an even more important feature about the invention is its "zone control", permitting individual setting of temperature in rooms for the comfort of their occupants through the use of thermostats. This latter innovation will be included in the latest type "roomette" sleepers planned by the C.N.R.

Other features of the new C.N.R. coaches will be their spaciousness. They will be longer and wider but will have fewer seats; a glass partition dividing the car into two sections, one seating 32 non-smokers and the other 28 smokers. Wide double-plate, armoured glass windows; removable tables available for the first time in this type of car; a men's lounge room and a ladies' lounge of new design; and the latest "sleepy hollow" seats are other innovations. The cars will have indirect lighting and the interior decoration will be in light color shades to give a highly pleasing, restful effect.

BLUE DONKEY O. K. AS JACK TRIES TO EXPRESS HIMSELF

LONDON, Nov. 19 — (CP) — If your young son or daughter wants to draw a blue donkey or a six-legged horse, don't try to put him right.

That's the advice of the Ministry of Education in a 56-page pamphlet on "Art Education" (H.M. Stationery Office, 2s. 6d.).

"Infants draw and construct from what is in their minds; they do not copy directly," says the booklet, illustrated with color plates of art work by students five to 21 years old.

"Any attempt to make them draw directly from nature or to copy stylized interpretations of nature merely confuse them and produces results wholly insincere."

"The blue donkey and the six-legged horse are features of a perfectly natural phase of expression and no attempt should be made to force the child to realistic reproduction which can only curb or destroy his spontaneity."

From five to seven, children should be left without interference beyond stimulus and guidance in use of tools and materials, says the booklet.

From seven to 11 they should still be left free to express themselves as they like, but given opportunity to "explore some of the paths travelled by primitive men and women—to experience through experiment the early stages of the traditional crafts, such as weaving, pottery, basketry, the making of simple forms of dwelling or means of transport."

After 11 years of age, art and craft courses should provide outlets for creative ability. More ambitious work can be undertaken and children can be taught to develop discrimination in design and craftsmanship and receive training in observation.

With Canada's Naturalists

By The Canadian Press

TORONTO, Nov. 30 — (CP)—East and west, Deer, Duck, Trout and Eagle lakes sprinkle the Canadian scene generously. Greater rarity and originality distinguish many other place names from nature across the Dominion.

Moose Jaw, Sask., is borrowed from Moose Jaw Creek, so named in 1869, and celebrates, according to an Indian story, the skill of an early settler who repaired his prairie wagon wheel with the jaw bone of a moose.

Antigonish, town and county of Nova Scotia, is a Micmac Indian word meaning "broken branches". Beech trees were plentiful in the region and hungry bears smashed the branches in a big way while after the nuts.

A stream in Alberta, one in Manitoba and two lakes in Quebec are all named Pemina, an Indian word meaning the fruit of the cranberry bush. A red berry growing profusely in the district gave the city of Saskatoon its name.

Toronto, Iroquois Indian word, has been variously interpreted; all the way from "a place of meeting" to "trees growing in the water."

Caculus, summer resort on the St. Lawrence, combines two Algonquin words to identify the home of the porcupine. Kamloops, B. C., is also a place name of Indian origin. At this point the North and South Thompson rivers unite and the name means "meeting of the waters."

"Only very few of the pupils in any secondary school are likely to make their livings as artists," says the pamphlet, "but all may take pleasure in visual beauty and should receive every incentive to do so."

Craft work, drawing and painting are of great importance for boys and girls "since they provide a unique outlet for creative and imaginative abilities as well as a useful training in observation."

CANBERRA — (CP) — "Old" whisky is at least five years old, and "Very Old" whisky is at least 10, the Australian customs department has decided with a rule governing the wording on whisky labels.
