Famous Reindeer Drive Nears End Herds Increased

THE PAS, Man. Aug 3—(CP)—A final round-up far up toward the Arctic Circle will be held this fall and the job of Andy Bahr and his gallant band of herders which drove 3,000 reindeer 2,000 miles across northern tundras will be finished.

Bahr and his Lapp helpers herded the animals from Alaska to the Mackenzie Delta to provide permanent meat supply for Eskimos in the delta region.

At the final round-up the reindeer will be driven into a huge corral and counted. It is expected this check will require a week or more.

Last summer's check showed the herd had increased from 2,000 to 3,800 in 16 months, and it is expected the next count will bring the total over 5,000.

Four Lapps will remain behind as herders, and they will instruct Eskimos in the work. They are aided by shepherd dogs. Actually the herders do not "drive" the reindeer but keep in front to prevent stampedes.

In summer months at times madmen the beasts and they rush about in a circle to create a current of air to drive off their tormentors.

Presentation And Address

On Thursday evening July 15th, the people of Long River met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Paynter and presented the youngest son and his bride with the following address, accompanied by a dinner set.

Following is the address:— Mr. and Mrs. Francis Paynter, Dear Francis and Mrs. Paynter,— Your friends and neighbors are gathered here this evening to extend to you and your bride our most hearty congratulations and very best wishes.

You, Francis, we have known since childhood and need no introduction here, but to you, Mrs. Paynter, a stranger in our midst, we would extend a most cordial welcome and trust that you may not long remain such, but will soon find yourself at home among us.

As a token of friendship and our very best wishes for your future happiness, we ask you to accept this small gift, hoping as each time you use them you may remember your friends in Long River. We trust you may long be spared to each other and when we come to celebrate your Silver Wedding Anniversary, may they say of you: "We still find in the old Paynter home on the hill the same great hospitality that has always been afforded us by your father and mother."

As you climb the hill together Over life's wedded sea, Travelling in all kinds of weather May you never disagree. But remember this dear Francis Just take it straight from me You will have little differences That you cannot now foresee May all your petty trials flee When the evening shadows fall Remembering a good wife Is the grandest gift of all. Signed on behalf of your friends in Long River, July 15, 1937.

UNUSUAL INSTRUMENTS

The weirdest of musical instruments is the Kissar used by Central African natives. It is manufactured from a human skull and the horns of a gazelle into a stringed instrument.

The oddest of musical instruments is the nyastaranga used by natives of India. The musician holds the sounding tube tightly against his throat. He hums the melody and the tone is thrown against a delicate membrane of an inner cup which reverberates in sympathy to the vibrations of the throat muscles and is then strengthened by the sounding tube.

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra packed a quarter of a million dollars worth of musical instruments in its special baggage car when the orchestra made its recent tour of the United States.

Last summer the extreme heat in the western provinces affected musical instruments. Horn valves contracted with sour notes resulting from the musician's best effort.

The accordion was first used by Damian in 1820 in Vienna. Harmonica bands have progressed to the point where intricate musical compositions are tossed off with ease.

Members of harmonica bands are not at all admired in musicians unions because the unions issued an edict calling the harmonica a toy.

Because of the distortion of facial muscles which accompanied the playing of the Greek double-reed pipe in ancient days, only slaves were called upon to use the instrument.

Wounded Veteran Devotes Pension To Public Cause

HOPEWELL CAPE, N. B. Aug 1—(CP)—Financed by monthly pension cheques received by a partially disabled war veteran during a two-year period, a community library here stands as a testimonial to the public spirit of John Allen Drummond.

The small shingled building in this peaceful town is situated in a grove of tall trees. Inscriptions on the structure read "Welcome" and "Silver Jubilee Lodge and Library, 1835." The building faces a grass square and flower beds, also maintained as a result of Drummond's initiative.

The library has almost 2,000 volumes donated by people in many parts of the province. The books are circulated through a wide area in Albert County, mostly at Drummond's expense. Helped by volunteer assistants, he is an unpaid librarian. Other work provides him with a modest livelihood.

Born near Canaan, N. B., Drummond went overseas with the 26th battalion. A serious wound necessitating a silver plate in the skull destroyed his memory. He had to learn most of the things he had known since a child.

Between long periods in hospital he travelled extensively seeking health. Arriving here four years ago he took a liking to the quiet town and decided to stay.

In front of the county court house he noticed a neglected square and two guns that had been captured during the war. One had been taken by Drummond's old battalion. In his spare time he repaired the guns, cleaned up the square and planted grass, seed and flowers.

Other residents became interested in the stranger's doings and occasionally helped him. An old building, paintless and in poor condition, stood near the square. He bought the building and an old vacant store on the installment plan by means of his monthly pension cheques. Then he started to construct the library.

Drummond used the flooring, ceiling and shelves from the store to renovate the other structure. He painted it inside and out. His own books went first into the library, and a call for donations was promptly answered. Thus in the summer of 1935, Hopewell Cape's first library was opened as a result of one man's work.

The proceeds of a collection taken at the opening ceremony were used to purchase a community lawn mower. Drummond is custodian of this, and a rental of five cents an hour to cover repair costs is asked of those using it.

Small wooden markers were set at intervals of 12 feet along two rows of flower beds in the square. Some bear the names of leading citizens and some of the names of children. The person named is responsible for that section of the bed. It was Drummond's idea.

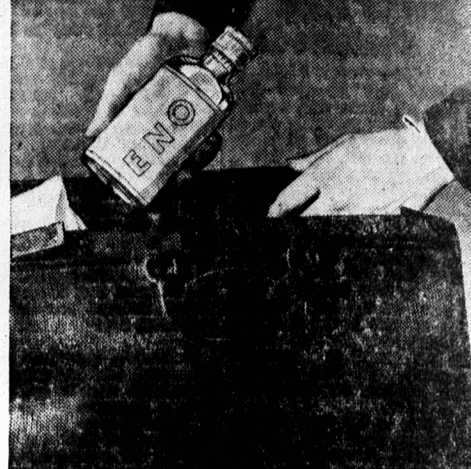

He also planted trees near the court house. Originally from the Royal Oak Gardens in England, they were secured by Drummond through "The Man of the Trees" organization in Toronto.

The Hopewell Cape Boys' Club was another Drummond idea. He instilled in the local boys a love of beauty and community pride.

The last activity is pruning a thicket of evergreens near the square. The plan is to make a grass plot and put up swings for children.

Eastern News

Haymaking is now the order of the day in the East-Point district, and seldom has there ever been a more bountiful crop. Grain and root crops are promising well also.

One of the largest auction sales in recent years took place on the farm of the late Harry McDonald, on the 14th inst. Live stock, moveables, and machinery brought good prices, the farm was not sold. It is worthy of note, that this is the second sale on that property within fifteen years, the former sale on account of the ill-health of the owner, and the latter on the very regrettable death of Mr. McDonald who was, perhaps, the most enterprising citizen in the community.

The lobster season, for the present at least, is over; the catch was small, the price excellent. Cod-fishing, so far has been disappointing.

The Flu epidemic began in March and is still taking its toll, scarcely is there a home, that has not been visited, and Doctor's and nurses' services have been and are still in demand.

The Potato

The potato is a wholesome food not only for adults but also for children. It should not, of course, be made the chief part of the diet, for it consists largely of starch. It contains too, an excellent quality of protein greatly superior to the protein of cereals of a well-cooked potato is much more easily digestible than cereal starch of any kind. Cooked potato starch digests in one-sixth of the time required for the digestion of the same amount of oatmeal starch.

In order to maintain one's health such as colds, pneumonia and influenza, one's blood must be kept alkaline. Use of potatoes as food helps materially in this direction.

Milk and potatoes make a fine food combination. Even buttermilk is an excellent addition to the potato. The fine complexion, robustness and great longevity of the Irish are attributed to the wide use of buttermilk and potatoes. Mashed potato flavoured with Savita, an extract of yeast with a delightful mushroom flavour, suggestive of chicken soup, is greatly enjoyed by both adults and children. Potato soup with the milk of rich in vitamins B and aids greatly in body building.

Hitch-Hike Risks Related By Hiker

WINNIPEG, Aug 3—(CP)—Hitch hiking is just as risky for the hiker as for the motorist who picks him up, John Harris, 26-year-old Saskatchewan "road knight," said on a visit here. His travels have taken him to many parts of the world.

"Stepping into some cars is like taking your life in your hands," he said. "Usually when my temporary host is too reckless, I offer to relieve him at the wheel—it's easier on the nerves. That's why I carry a driver's and chauffeur's license. "One pair that picked me up were 'hop-heads' and I was awfully glad to get out of that car. They were weaving all over the road.

"Salesmen and business women are a hiker's best friends," he said. "Nurses, too, are generous in picking up strangers on the road. Usually travelling alone, they like company.

About seven cars in 10 will stop and give one a lift—except in the Prairie provinces where about seven of 10 will pass by. Harris' two worst experiences were at Algiers, French North Africa, and in Tokyo. He jumped ship in Tokyo and was held at the immigration station for four months before being deported to the United States.

Largest Lawn Bowling Meet

VANCOUVER, Aug. 3—When the touring South African lawn bowling team arrives here in August it will visit the home of perhaps the largest annual lawn bowling competition in North America.

The record books of the British Columbia Lawn Bowling Association reveals that 2,013,724 bowls were delivered in the six days of their 15th tournament, July 15-17. Approximately 350 players entered the 11 events, five of which were in rinks, three in doubles, and the remainder in singles, bringing the total entries in all events to 1,722.

Ying for long distance attendance records were D. S. Hughes, a Sydney, New South Wales, and Jimmy Robertson, of Aberdeen, Scotland, each participating in a tournament nearly 6,000 miles from his home.

Forty-four bowlers travelled 150 miles each from California, on a rink came from California, and a lone entrant Matt Allen, came 1,500 miles from Winnipeg to enter the five events.

A feature was the efficiency of playing arrangements. Although one event was interrupted by rain the contest was completed on schedule at one p. m. the final day.

Fourteen greens in widely separated parts of the city were used for play, but throughout the tournament there was never a delay due to the late arrival of a party. Games began at eight-thirty or nine a. m. and often continued until after midnight.

It was cultivated by the Incas, peoples of pre-Columbian America and in the 16th century reached Spain by way of Peru. Later Virginians carried the plant to Ireland, thence to Lancashire, England. Subsequently it spread to temperate and subtropical countries and ranks to cereal grains as a food plant for man and cattle.
