Light Is Shed In New Ways Artificially ELEGANCE AND BEAUTY IN CRYSTAL ADD TO ROOM'S APPEARANCE THE FOREST O towering elm, mysterious pine, Your pensive brows to the torrent incline. In your high and lofty reverie, Do you live in the days when the warrior, Of warriors' song 'neath heaven's blue Were the only voices the echo knew? Or perchance in the dawn of a rising day, 'Neath your shielding boughs in ambush lay. 'Neath the placid height of a starlit sky, Do you dream of the glorious days gone by. When our fathers braved the rapid flow Or the barbaric wilds of an hostile foe. By drawn arms' untiring toil They chartered rivers, tilled the soil. Cities arose on the purple plain, Pride of our Country's vast domain. O stately pines, what tales you could tell. But you guard, like the oak, your secrets well. You only sigh to the evening breeze As she sways the arms of the leafy trees. Oh, break your silence, tell of the deeds Of heroic men who sowed the seeds, Of valor and courage, of toil and right, For us to reap for our Country's might. —(By Mrs. J. Raney Gallant, Charlottetown) ROSE PETAL CHAINS Why not utilize the rose petals for Christmas presents? Fill some porcelain jars with them and the spices will aid in capturing the rose fragrance and keeping it for years. Wonderful chains can be made from them which are a continued delight. Put the leaves through the food chopper each day for seven days and stir between times. Keep them in an old iron kettle which is somewhat rusty, as the action of the iron rust and some quality in the rose petals work together, to make the finished product beautiful. At the end of seven days, with the aid of a little water for moistening the macerated petals may be carefully formed into any desired shape, or size and placed in rows on pins to dry and harden and also to make the necessary openings for the string. The rare scent of the rose garden always clings to them and they may be used to impart it to the dainty lingerie when not being worn. MODESTY Nothing can atone for the want of modesty, without which beauty is ungraceful and wit detestable.—Steele. Those who follow the banners of Reason are like the well-disciplined battalions, which, wearing a more sober uniform and making a less dazzling show than the light troops commanded by Imagination, enjoy more safety, and even more honor in the conflicts of human life.—Scott. the glowing satins of the moment the sheen of gorgeous velvets and the perfection of Madame's complete toilet require something more than a mere metal hanging whose fac simile can be encountered in every second shop window. Individuality and artistry are keys for the home as well as pertaining to milady's wardrobe. Mysterious Christmas trees of glowing, shimmering crystal cast a fairy-like splendour on modern walls and urns of alabaster bearing crystal handles stand on wall brackets and throw an indirect light upon the scene. Lovely ostrich plumes are symbolised with crystal beads massed in glorious array and cast their light from within. Turquoise blue, ruby red amethyst and other precious stones are simulated in glowing crystal tones and offset with myriads of shining crystal beads or motifs of rock crystal.
