Islanders Spent Exciting Week on Destroyer Which Took Part in Invasion Patrol Operations

Canada's shores had a friendly and welcome look about them the other day to officers and ratings of the Royal Canadian Navy destroyer, H.M.C.S. GATINEAU. They could look back on exciting weeks during which they took part in invasion patrol operations, joined in attack on two submarines, engaged and probably destroyed a German E-boat and shot down flying bombs. Here are 12 ratings from the Maritimes who served in the GATINEAU during her recent missions. They are: left to right, front row: Sgt. Harold Ritchie, RCNVR, WO, D. G. O'Leary, P. E. I.; C. E. A. Raymond Hickey, RCNVR, MONTREAL; Chief Steward Neil MacIsaac, R.C.N.V.R., Charlottetown, P. E. I. (Back row): A. B. William Nicholas, RCNVR, SYDNEY, N. S.; Bruce MacDonald, R. C. N. V. R., Summerside, P. E. I.; A. B. John Deane, RCNVR, SAINT JOHN, N. B.; Edg. Sims, E. Pollock, RCNVR, DARTMOUTH; N. S.; A. B. Raymond Ellis, RCNVR, both of Saint John, N. B.

The GATINEAU, dubbed one of the "sea-going express" ships in the Canadian Service - because since then 80 per cent of her time at sea - has been assigned new duties after months of anti-submarine and patrol operations in the English Channel during the assault on France. Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, revealed yesterday.

GATINEAU's experiences include the probable destruction of an enemy E-boat in the English Channel, assistance in successful attacks on two U-boats and battles with robot bombs which the enemy began hurling overhead toward London and the south coast of England while the destroyer was on invasion patrol duty.

In disclosing that the GATINEAU had completed her invasion assignment, the Minister's statement noted that during the destroyer's recent operations five members of her complement had received operational citations.

GATINEAU is the former H.M.S. EXPRESS with a long record of sea action in this war. She was taken over by the Canadian Navy and recommissioned a year ago and was engaged for several months on mid-ocean convoy escort work prior to her assignment to U-boat patrol and invasion operations in British waters.

During the past six months the "sea-going express" has been at sea no less than 148 days and has taken part in so many convoy assignments, anti-U-boat sweeps and forays with the enemy that the captain has lost count.

FOUGHT ROBOT BOMBS

GATINEAU's guns were among the first to be trained on the now famous robot bombs. "They were a puzzling sight at first," Lieut. Maurice Chadwick, RCN, Executive Officer of GATINEAU, said, "they whizz by so fast you can hardly keep your eye on them. We saw a lot of them when we were on duty in the Channel. They fly at amazing speed and it's hard to get a bead on them."

"We think we got a couple," said Boatswain A.S.C.O. Lloyd "Hood" Gibson of Stratford, Ont. "We trained our guns on one that was flying about 100 yards off our bow and after our fire it whizzed down into the sea and exploded."

Giving his version of the experiences of the ship with robot bombs, Lieut. Cdr. Gross said, "We definitely got one of the bombs. It came on a long glide straight on, but was not going to hit us. The bomb was coming at the easiest angle for us to fire at and I tried to keep the ship pointed in a direct line with it. The bomb travelled along a gliding course until they have reached the distance for which they have been set, and then they take a deep lunge toward their target. That is why I am certain we got this one. In the faint dawn we could see our Orlikon tracers going up and bouncing off the bomb, but one of them must have found its mark in the delicate mechanism. For the bomb twisted sideways and went straight down into the sea about 500 yards away from the ship. We could feel the concussion on our faces as it exploded."

Lieut. Cdr. Gross said that it was like the room of the "GATINEAU" had seen the first of the bombs in use during their operations in the channel a few days after D-Day.
