WINNIPEG, Feb 23—Wheat prices relinquished early fractional gains on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today as support petered out but though final quotations were off ⅜-¼ cent, the closing tone was firm.

May wheat closed at 67 with July at 68¼ cents. Export business was at a minimum but according to shippers a fairly substantial amount of wheat changed hands at the seaboard.

Trading volume through the pit was small and operations did not impress at any time, most of the transactions being of a local nature.

Feature of overseas news was the report Russia had failed to export any wheat this week.

Movement of Australian wheat totalled about 2,600,000 bushels about 5,500,000 bushels under shipments during the corresponding week last year. Argentine clearances during the past week were just over 4,000,000 bushels, being little different from last week's exports or those of the corresponding week a year ago.

Chicago prices closed firm, but dropped fractions from the high points. Liverpool wheat was unchanged to ⅛d lower.

Cash and coarse grains trading was dull and uninteresting.

Degrees Of Errors Of Vision

As has been said, most persons have some degree of error of vision. It may be so slight as to be ignored, or so excessive that the individual is forced to seek aid in order to see at all. Between these two extremes are countless persons whose eyes need attention. It is to this class that our articles are especially directed.

Temperance Notes

(A column of undoubted fact and worthy opinion re the Temperance Situation.

Under the auspices of the Sons of Temperance.)

HOW PROHIBITION CAME

The enemies of Prohibition,—the booze-makers, booze-sellers, booze-drinkers,—have tried to discredit it by contending that it was not a deliberate expression of the public intelligence. Both in Canada and in the United States, it was argued, Prohibition was due to the emotional war temper. Again it was stated that it was the work of fanatics. Every body familiar with the history of Prohibition knows only too well that it was the outcome of a long process of social education and a multitude of experiments seeking to deal effectively with a tremendous social evil. Glenn Frank president of Wisconsin University, at a recent convocation gave the following explanation to the student:

"I hope you will never fall victim to the delusion that Prohibition was fathered only by fanatics. The fact of prohibition was made possible by a rising tide of resistless anger against the dastardly practices of an organized liquor business that debauched personal character, bribed and blighted public life, and impudently shook its fist in the face of government.

"I well remember how, two years before we entered the World War, the organized liquor business of the United States sought to blight by black-list half a hundred American industries which, on the cold ground of efficiency, had forbidden their employees to drink liquor while on duty. I knew at first hand a hundred sordid stories of city councils that were bought and state legislatures that were bribed by a liquor leadership that put profits above decency.

"You who are now registerered in the University of Wisconsin have no memory of all this shabby business. Fortunately—or unfortunately for your thought on this issue—you were born too late. Some of us do remember. And it is this memory that leads me to say that socially sound liquor legislation must prevent the return of the sins of the saloon era."

President Frank is neither a social fanatic nor a temperance crank but an outstanding figure in the educational world. It would be well if the general public as well as the students listened intently to his message.

Prohibition has gone save in our little province. But the liquor problem is still with us, unsolved, as serious and perplexing as ever, perhaps a little more so. When the liquor traffic is under the ban and seeking privileges it professes a sort of conversion and reform. It is ready to promise all kinds of improvement. It pretends to be interested in "true temperance." It acknowledges past sins and pleads a chance to make amendment. So it did years ago in Canada when seeking government control. So it has done recently in the United States seeking repeal of the prohibition amendment. But when the ban is removed, it returns like the sow to its wallowing again. Never satisfied with the concessions granted by weak-kneed and soulless governments, it is always crying "More, More!" It is not enough to have the government liquor shops, it wants beer sold by the glass, and it seeks to have the hotels opened up for the sale of liquor. Debauchery, degradation, corruption,—the whole sordid mess, that this trade always creates,—will soon bring the public face to face once more with the problem of elimination of the drink evil. Regulation offers no remedy. We have only seen the beginnings of the experiment in Prohibition.

MINING

(Canadian Press)

TORONTO, Feb 23—Mining shares registered a lower price level at the close today, due partly to profit-taking on the recent rise and partly to general weakness exhibited by the New York market in the late afternoon. The big gold producers took losses up to $1 and small recessions were recorded in the base metal and silver groups. Medium-priced gold shares were up in the morning session but they back-tracked in the afternoon on profit-selling.

Volume was down considerably from that of previous sessions this week, though part of the drop may be traced to the actions of a couple of penny shares that were flying high a few days ago. The Toronto stock exchange announced today that Wain-Wright Oils limited, which was removed from the board two weeks ago would be re-instated, this time in the listed section of the mining board and it will be called for trading on March.

THE BACK STRETCH

saddle, the irate owner galloped to North Cape and arrived there in time to sight the ship rounding the Cape. He did not hesitate for a second, but plunged his charger into the briny and on arriving at the ship ran up the ropes to the deck leaving the horse to make his way back to land. He confronted the astonished master with the words "Your authority on this ship is over. I am now master and will sail her to England!" And sail her he did.

Speaking of Prince Edward Islanders abroad, we know of none that can approach in enthusiasm our friend Bob Hutchinson, worthy porter of the Hotel Brunswick. Bob never loses an opportunity of talking horse or extolling to strangers the greatness of his native heath. About two years ago Bob was the owner of a wonderful dog and a great many offers were made for him. His intelligence was marvelous. Finally a big lumber magnate bought him for a hundred dollars. Shortly afterwards an American came along with a dog which he told wonderful tales about.

A gentleman sitting near Bob said, "Bob had a great dog, think he was probably a better dog than your dog." This interested the Yankee and he wanted to know what Bob's dog could do. "Well" Bob said, "the last dog I had was a smart dog, but he was not in it with the bull dog I had some years ago. He was the smartest dog I ever saw. One day he was on the street and a cart ran over his leg crushing it so we had to amputate it above the elbow. I was feeling very badly because he was a great dog to play the piano. However, a friend of mine came along and invented a wooden leg which fitted perfectly and Paddy ran around the streets just as active as any other dog, but it interefered with his playing, particularly on nights when people would come in and want to hear the old sacred hymns.

"Paddy" would sit up at the piano and we would call for Rock of Ages or one of the other old familiars and he would play away, but he made quite a bit of discord with the wooden leg and that spoiled our Sunday concerts. "It was a great pity," said Bob, wiping a tear from his eye. The Yankee left for his room glaring rather malignantly at the reciter.

"Rocky" told us a good story about the old wild west days when "Knapsack" McCarthy and "General" John E. Turner were starting out to make their names as harness drivers. They landed in a Missouri town just before a big race meet and asked Colonel William Thomas for a job. He assigned them to two horses and Knapsack started to work on his, but as soon as he stepped into the stall the horse made a rush at him. Knap picked up a stake to defend himself when Thomas sauntered along, hauled out a seven shot derringer and ordered him to stop beating the horse. Knap turned on Thomas with the stake and threatened to beat his head off. That made a hit with the Missourian, so he said, "You are the man for me, you're hired to stay."

The next afternoon Knap was driving a horse for Thomas in a race. The horse was blind in one eye and pulled in on the turns, hauling some spokes out of his neighbors wheel. Knap won the heat but on protest from the other driver was declared distanced. The next thing the spectators saw was Colonel Thomas, who stood six feet six inches tall and wore a big sombrero, standing on the steps of the little judges stand, his long leather boots with spurs visible below, his head and shoulders appearing well above the judges on the stand with his seven shot derringer pointed in turn from one to another with the question asked, "Does my hoss start in the next heat?" "Your hoss certainly starts, Colonel," was the unanimous answer. "Knap" won the race.

It afterwards transpired that two nice, quiet, well dressed young men who had been sojourning at the track for a few days and seemed to take a lively interest in the Colonel's horses were nephews of Colonel Thomas on their "holidays" from bank robbing, etc., Frank and Jesse James!

There passed away at Cleveland, Ohio, on February 9th, one of the finest men connected with the harness horse sport in the U. S. A., Harvey Ernest, who will be remembered particularly by his wonderful campaign years ago with Ima Jay 2.04 1-4. She was a very consistent trotter being undefeated in 1916, scoring eleven victories and two years later achieved signal honors in annexing the notable Transylvania Stake at Lexington. Her seven heat record made then still stands unequalled.

Perhaps an even great bid to fame was his winning of the $35,000 Readville Handicap in 1909 with Baron Alcyone, a rank outsider. He was a man who valued his word to the limit and any promise he made was carried out in every detail.

How they step in Florida! We note where Ben White recently took the wraps off one of his two-year-olds, Mary Taylor, and stepped a mile in 2.20, the first half in 1.14 1-2, the closing half in 1.05 3-4, and the final quarter in 30 1-2 seconds! She is a sister of Calumet Chuck (2) 2.04, who won the Kentucky Futurity at Lexington two years ago.

Last week we mentioned how one single progenitor will save a family from extinction, citing Peter the Great, who has put the Pilot Medium on the map. Another example we might quote of a rather unfashionable strain as present day breeding goes is Abbedale 2.01 1-2, a son of The Abbe 2.04, dam Daisy Dale D., 2.16 1-4 by Arch Dale. His get won more races and in addition they accounted for the unprecedented total of 130 heats in 2.10 or better on half mile rings in 1933, nearly twice the number credited to the get of any other pacing sire.

Three of them, Abbedeen 2.05, Chief Abbedale (3) 2.01 1-4, and His Majesty (3) 2.00 1-2 won thirty-two races. It seems to the writer that they are the coming strain of pacers and will make more racing history the next few years than any other breed of harness horses. Watch out for the Abbedales.

The following arrangement furnishes the names of the thirty-three pacers credited with heats in 2.05 or better on half mile tracks and also gives the fastest heat of each of these performers. Cut this out for your scrap book.

He was said to possess a magnetic eye which worked a charm on the opponent of his protege but it had no effect on Jack Dempsey who easily defeated Carpentier in their famous battle of the century.

The owl on entering the hen house and finding no room on the perch and evidently strongly objecting to any over crowding, killed the hen and then took her place on the roost.
