Comb Sage Tea In Hair To Darken It

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmothers' recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage. Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

To Bring 170,000 Tons of Coal From Wales

MONTREAL, April 7.—Announcement has been made today that the Canadian Welsh Anthracite Coal Company had contracted to bring here this season a total of 170,000 tons of coal from Wales, an increase of 70,000 tons over last year shipments. This will constitute a new record in shipments to Canada via the St. Lawrence route. Most of the coal, it was said, will be distributed between Montreal and Toronto.

THE MARKETS

(Canadian Press)
Dominion Live Stock
MONTREAL, Que., April 7.—There were 105 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 463 hogs and 1,939 calves for sale on the two markets this morning. Apart from a few common dairy type cows most of the cattle were left over from yesterday and included a number of milkers and springers. Prices were unchanged. Calves were plentiful and prices ranged from $5.75 to $6.75 for straight lots with the bulk going at $6.25 to $6.50 or better. There was a good demand for the few hogs offered and prices varied widely. Sales of good weight hogs were made at from $13.75 to $14.25 and poorer quality and lights brought $13.35 and $13.50, most of the hogs were sold in small lots to local butchers. WILD HORSES

By Henry Herbert Knibbs

CHAPTER VIII

"I'm afoot and you're mounted on a fast one," said Buck to the horse thief. "But I've got a Colt that can outrun anything that wears legs. Yes, you're looking at him, right now. How do you like his eye?" (From "Buck Yardlaw's Ride.")

The smoke of their fire drifted across the meadow from the edge of the timber. Mingled with the smoke came the subtle fragrance of coffee, and the more pronounced aroma of meat, cooking. Johnny had hobbled Fronto, and had a small fire of his own going, both for warmth, and light, which would discover any one coming within a too familiar proximity to the captive stallion. While he did not anticipate any trouble, he was not taking any chances. He had dragged several fallen limbs to the fire, enough fuel to last through the night. Lopez, old Anastacio, Rico, and the young Felipe were waiting, comfortably encamped beneath the sheltering branches of a low spruce. And Johnny was only too well aware of what they waited for—the possibility of the stallion breaking loose, through some slip or miscalculation; and if he failed to manage to saddle and mount him, in the morning, there was always the sprightly possibility of getting pitched and left holding on to the world while the wild horse spread its wings and floated off into space, or into the ready loomings of Lopez and his kindred. Johnny knew that his only chance was to keep the stallion down and tied, and without food or water for the next eight or ten hours. This would weaken him and tame him to some extent. Nevertheless, Johnny realized that he would have to ride, and ride hard, any time he mounted the gray. Johnny dried his saddle-blanket by the fire and then put it round his shoulders. Light from the other fire flickered up the trunks of the pines and spruce across the meadow. He could hear the Mexicans chattering, and occasionally caught the drift of their talk, which was about the gray stallion, and himself. Once he was amused to hear Rico tell Lopez that he (Johnny) was a horse thief. Rico was vehement and talked loud. The first few hours of his vigil were not so bad. Toward midnight, however, Johnny fought a heavy desire to sleep. He toasted some and moved around, toasted some jerky and ate it, smoked, and tried as he often done of late, to recall Grace Percival's face clearly. But always the features would blur in his vision, and while he knew exactly how she looked, he could not visualize her. This puzzled him. He could visualize Mrs. Johnson, or Julia Baker, or any of the Soledad folk. "Mebby I think I know what she looks like, but don't," he soliloquized. "I've seen many a mirage, and I always knew 'em for what they were. And I've rode over to where they ought to be, and they weren't there. But she's there, waiting. And I'm here, waiting. And Lopez over there—"

Before the Ball

A warm bath with a liberal lather of Baby's Own Soap, leaves one refreshed, ready for the dance, and with the clinging aroma of the Roses of France which inspire its fragrance. You cannot get a purer or more delicately perfumed soap at any price—yet Baby's Own sells in individual cartons, 10c. a cake.

"Best for you and Baby too" 10-25

Johnny poked the fire and threw on a piece of pine branch. The flame danced up. The men over in Lopez's camp had ceased talking. A soft, drawing voice announced that it was Wetherill. Johnny was up and blinking into the darkness. A horse's head poked into the circle of light. "That you, Trent?" said the voice. Then the rider became visible—the lean, slow-speaking Texan, up from the supervisor's office at Solano, and evidently on his way to the San Carlos reservation; ranger Wetherill and Johnny doggedly in his easy way, never surprised at anything, and seldom by anything; a man who, in gathering information, used his ears rather than his voice. Johnny and the ranger had met aforesaid as competitors in a pistol match, at a local barbecue. The Texan had won, by a narrow margin that he could not take the prize—nor would Johnny Trent. So they compromised by presenting it to a third competitor who had done some excellent work with a borrowed gun. Moreover, the third man was married and they felt sorry for him, so they said. Consequently Wetherill and Johnny doggedly on the stamping-ground of single blessedness and mutual respect.

The ranger walked round the captive stallion, glanced across the meadow toward the camp-fire under the trees. Having heard in Solano that both Lopez and Trent were out for the wild horse, he stepped over to his own pack-animal and threw off the hitch. He spread his bed-roll near the fire, hobbled both horses, and returning with his saddle, made himself comfortable. "How did you happen to get your twine on him?" he queried, and Johnny appreciated the compliment implied by Silent Wetherill's question. "You said it! It just happened. I was lacy, just like in our shooting-match last year." And Johnny told him briefly, with interspaces of silence, comprehensively expressive: as in the conclusion of his sketch—"And then Frank Lopez tried to run a whizzer on me, but I said 'No,' Frank and his bunch are over there..." Johnny gestured.

Wetherill pulled off his boots. "I'd just naturally hate to see you lose him now." The ranger kicked off his overalls. "This old tarp is wide enough to sleep two." He yawned, crawled in, wound his watch, and placed it with his six-shooter in his hat. "I saw a hoss, just like him, once down along the Rio Grande, and a Mexican wanted him a whole lot. I rode that hoss quite a spell afterwards, but he always was a little gun-shy." Johnny grinned and pulled off his boots. The tiny fire flickered and died down. It was so still that Johnny could hear the ranger's watch tick. Johnny stretched, pulled the edge of the tarp over his ear—and then he was gazing at a slant of sunlight on the meadow grass. He had slept four hours.

MORE HUMOURS OF HISTORY

A. D. 1092. The £10,000 mortgage money for Normandy was wrung from the hapless English by William and his minister Flambard. Churches and abbeys were ruthlessly plundered not only of money, but of gold and silver plate. The Barons and their vassals were treated with the same severity. Flambard's success as a tax collector has not been surpassed even in these days.

Mary and Her Lamb

COLOR CUT-OUTS

MEET LITTLE MARY

Mary had a little lamb; His fleece was white as snow. And everywhere that Mary went That lamb was sure to go."

Of course you know all about Mary and her famous lamb, but did you ever see her before? Well, here she is. And tomorrow there will be a picture of her lamb, and then another dress for Mary, and—but just watch the paper every day this week and you'll find you're going to have a fine set of paper dolls with which you can act out this favorite rhyme.

Color Mary's dress light blue with hose to match. Then use your brown crayon to color her hair and her slippers. Put a little touch of pink in each cheek. Then mount Mary on the cover of a magazine (or other lightweight cardboard), cut her out, and save her to play with her lamb tomorrow. (Copyright, 1925, Associated Editors, Inc.)

BABY'S COLDS

At the very first sign of croup, sore throat, or any other cold trouble, apply Vicks VapoRub over the throat and chest. There is nothing to swallow—you just rub it on, relieved in 15 minutes. Children's delicate digestions are easily disturbed by too much "dosing." Still, the little ones' cold troubles cannot be neglected.

Young Married Women Need Mother's Advice

MRS. PEARL STEELE, HOLDEN, MISSOURI

A GREAT many women after childbirth get up too soon and, too weak to care for the child and perform their household duties, often bring on serious derangements.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid tonic to take at this time; it is an excellent restorative, contains no harmful drugs, and can be taken in safety by nursing mothers. Thousands of mothers advise their daughters to take this grand old root and herb medicine for such conditions because of their own favorable experience with it.

Following We Publish an Interesting Letter from Mrs. Steele of Warrensburg Which Should Interest Every Mother in the Land:

Warrensburg, Mo.—"When my second child was born I got up too soon as my mother wasn't able to do for me. I could not stand on my feet without being dizzy and my back would ache so badly that I would have to lie down at times through the day. My mother had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and had a bottle of it at the time, so she begged me to take it, which I did, and I could not tell you how much better I felt after taking it. Then a year later my husband got back from overseas and we went to keeping house by ourselves and I got all run down again. I couldn't work long at a time but would have to sit down and rest. My husband kept begging me to take the Vegetable Compound again, so I have done so. I recommend it when I can as I know it is good for women's troubles and I thought you might like to know what it has done for me."—Mrs. PEARL M. STEELE, 203 Main Street, Warrensburg, Mo.

Ontario Woman's Interesting Case

Mount Forest, Ontario.—"I am proud today to think I have a fine big baby boy, as healthy as a trout, and I never felt better myself. Before I took my medicine I felt weak and miserable, and had pains all through me. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to get stronger and those pains all left me. I am glad I found out about this medicine. I think there is none other equal to it for women who have troubles of this kind. I cannot praise the Vegetable Compound too highly for the good it has done me. Whenever I know of a woman suffering I am glad to tell her of it."—Mrs. W. M. LINDSAY, E. B. No. 1, Mount Forest, Ontario.

Help! Help!

S. O. S. SAVE OUR SOULS NOTICE

The Miners of Pictou County are fighting for the Benefit of the General Public of this Province as well as for a decent living for themselves and families. For the last 3 years the miners have worked less than half time and have not appealed for any relief and at last they have decided that only a complete fair and above board investigation can solve our troubles. This has been plainly shown by our Executive Officers and yet it is denied us both by Company and by Government. That the general public realize our plight and also that our cause is just needs no words from us for the country wide appeal now being made and the generous response to it proves our assertion.

Therefore, we, the members of this district appeal to the people of this county to rally to our cause and give us all the support that you can. Subscriptions, large or small, will be acknowledged through the press. All goods should be forwarded to the central office, U. M. W. sub district No. 5, Ford Street, Stellarton. Any person having goods should notify the general chairman of committee, Rufus Carr, Box 562, Stellarton, and men will call for goods.

All Cash and Cash Donations should be sent to the Mayor of Stellarton, the Treasurer or Relief Committee, Mr. Sam Ackles, Box 202, Stellarton. 917-4-6M31
