BRADALBANE'S BRAVE SONS.—Bradalbane, always a patriotic community is still living up to its reputation. Since the signing of the armistice ten boys have been welcomed back to civilian life and presented with suitable gifts by the Empire Club. This is only a small proportion of the names on the honor roll which includes fifty two persons, eleven of whom are sleeping in "Flanders Field" the latter are J. W. MacDonald, Fredrick Hall, John MacPhee, Angus Matheson, John R. Matheson, Alex. McKenzie, John MacIntosh, Daniel Nicholson, Walter Warren, Pope Warren, Frederick McLure. The club was honored in being able to welcome Pte. Murdoch Matheson, whose two brothers have given their lives in our defence. Two sons in another family Ptes. Walter and Pope Warren gave their lives in the great conflict. One of the first to answer the call of duty was Gunner Ben MacDonald, who immediately on the declaration of war got into khaki and before he arrived in England his brother John W. a member of the original P.P.C.L.I.'s had paid the supreme sacrifice. Pte. Daniel MacIntosh who is now in the Convalescent Home in Charlottetown recovering from wounds enlisted with the 105th Battalion, in company with his brother John MacIntosh who gave up his life in France. Another of those wounded at the front is Pte. William McLure, whose brother Fredrick McLure died while on military service. Receptions were also given to Ptes. John R. MacLeod, Daniel Todd, John F. MacLeod, who bear the marks of their encounter with the Bosche, and also seaman Robert Quakes, who has been engaged in the dangerous duty of mine sweeping. We are proud of the spirit that prompted Pte. Spurgeon McLean to forsake the safety of Uncle Sam's domain and return to Canada to go overseas with those who considered Canada worth fighting for, his brother George having been wounded, while helping to vanquish the Hun. Others were Pte. Ewen McDonald, who was invalided home from England and Donald McLure a member of a Depot Battalion.

STONES FOR HEALING

If the present Sultan of Turkey is kicked out of Constantinople into Asia Minor, as seems probable, one wonders whether he will be allowed to take with him the wonderful "stones of healing," which have been in the possession of his ancestors for centuries.

There are about a dozen of these stones all told, and so highly are they esteemed that they are kept in a locked casket, enclosed with a massive steel safe, access to which is forbidden to all save the reigning Sultan and his Grand Vizier.

Lady Blunt, who was accorded the privilege by the late Sultan of using two of them for the relief of her husband, who was lying dangerously ill at Constantinople many years ago found them exceedingly effective.

The patient was at the point of death, and three doctors who were in attendance advised an immediate operation. Lady Blunt used the stones as directed, placing them on the bare skin above the affected organs.

They stuck tight there of their own accord, and the patient experienced immediate relief. In a few hours he had completely recovered.

"These wonderful stones," says Lady Blunt in her recently published volume of reminiscences, "are found at rare intervals in the veins of a donkey's neck; perhaps only one stone in a million donkeys."

REASON WAS CLEAR

From The Boston Transcript A small English boy was asked: "How is it your father always wins money when he plays cards, but invariably loses when he backs horses?"

Very promptly came the reply: "Please, sir, father can't shuffle the horses."

Minimum charge, twenty-five cents.
