The Prince Edward Island Hospital And Increasing Expenses

Our life collectors are now getting their districts in hand ready to begin promptly, on October 1st, the Annual Collection. All contributions be they large or small, will be thankfully received and published as heretofore.

One of the outstanding reasons why the annual collection for your Hospital needs to be materially larger this year than in recent past few years is because of the large increase in the cost of supplies, which the Hospital has to buy. This year as every household knows, the cost of meats, butter, eggs, milk, bread and fruit are all very much higher than they have been in recent years. Fortunately, the farmers and fishermen reap the benefit. They have had it pretty tough in recent years, and now will be able, and the Hospital feels sure will be willing, to help out more abundantly as prices get better for them but worse for the Hospital. The prices of general groceries, canned goods, medical supplies, etc. have all advanced. The annual collection has been the same as with meats and other farm products. The Hospital carries on in its best of health and does its very best for everybody. Increasing expenditures must be met by increasing revenues. The annual collection affords the opportunity for everybody to share in the effort of helping the Hospital meet the increasing costs.

MEADOW BANK W. I.
The members of the Meadow Bank W. I. held their September meeting at the home of Mrs. Gordon McLean. Meeting opened with singing the Yellow Rose of Texas, followed by Creed in unison. Twelve members answered roll call. The president reported on the school it being completed and it was moved that all bills be paid, concerning this endeavor. It was moved and seconded that the blinds be sold and new ones bought.

Correspondence was then read and discussed which consisted of delegates to send to the T. B. League annual meeting. Mr. Fred Gordon and Mrs. Gordon were appointed delegates to attend same.

The school children were asked to canvass the district for contribution for the Salvation Army. Three members were asked to collect for the Chinese War Relief Fund.

Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Victor McPhail, Lunch committee Jean Boyle and Mrs. L. H. Drake. Roll call by Pauline McLean. All are to remain on the program committee for next meeting.

Street, on Saturday, September 25th.

Thrills And Action Aplenty In New Deluxe Production

Audiences who have become annoyed with the sameness of the run-of-the-mill western pictures have a treat in store for them when they see Republic's big new Roy Rogers deluxe production, "Song of Texas" which opens today at the Capitol Theatre.

Roy's singing to the accompanying background of the Sons of the Pioneers is always enthusiastically received, but this picture had more.

The old cliff-hanging, western formula was scrapped and a modern believable story with a prominent feminine character was introduced. The addition of an important role meant the casting of an actress who could handle the job. Republic filled the bill with talented, beautiful Sheila Ryan supported ably in a comedy capacity by Arline Judge.

The story build around a modern rodeo which has thrills, aplenty, action and outstanding production value. Associate Producer Harry Grey and Director Joe Kane have captured the spirit of the rodeo in "Song of Texas" and made a picture that is pure entertainment.

Roy Rogers and Sheila Ryan in the leading roles are well backed by Barton MacLane and William H. O'Brien as the heroes, Harry Shannon as Miss Ryan's father, an ex-odeo star, Arline Judge in the comic role of Sheila's girl friend, The Sons of the Pioneers stumpy harmony that coupled with Roy Rogers' singing, makes "Song of Texas" well rounded capsule of entertainment and amusement.

"Fine. But first let's find some nice quiet and very unsmarmy little joint where I can get you alone for a moment," Frances smiled. "You mean the cafe talk, baby?" They found a little place that was like a hundred others — all cheap modernistic chromium and red imitation leather booths. Frances remained standing. "I think I'll wait here," she said. "I'll tell them to be at your place in time for the broadcast."

CHAPTER XXXV
Emily was just finishing her glass of Dubonnet when she saw Frances across the room. Their eyes met simultaneously. They smiled. And as Frances hurried toward her Emily was given a small shock to see how very much Frances had aged. Her slimmest had turned to a drawn thinness. There were pouches beneath her eyes, and her hair was streaked with gray.

Frances pecked Emily's cheek and smiled upon her with a "Well, hello, darling! All the things I have to tell you," and she could see that she was precisely the same as the young person she had always been. Emily studied Frances, who must now be fifty or perhaps fifty-one or so. It was not a pleasant realization. Still, since it did not bother Frances, Emily saw no reason to brood about it. She probably had been in the same boat for forty, and in some groups was lavished on herself, she could be sure of that. Frances was all of her age.

Somehow in the words that she was throwing about, Frances dropped a word which she said "like a bomb" but as she said it she laughed lightly, and Emily saw that Frances did not really see herself as she, too, could be self-deluded, and she remembered an old truism — no one ever accurately sees herself in a mirror. She wondered if she could be as foolish as Frances.

"Your first day in town," Emily chided "You're the albatross of your youth. You who were going to visit us every two or three months."

The school children meant to then one thing or another. "She drank rather deeply," First Mac had to go to Mexico. Then when that failed up to California.

"How is Mac? Is he in town?" "I'm not sure just where Mac is. Did he get married? I think," Frances felt Emily's eyes and nodded. "Yes, pet I'm getting a divorce."

As Frances talked on-of the clothes she had to buy, the charming young man she had just met — Emily remembered the Frances of 1927, the Frances who was going to have babies and the warm security of domesticity. Emily wondered if she could be as foolish as Frances. She thought of the peculiarly poisonous success for a woman. Certainly no woman who had attained any part of it would be able to adjust to marriage.

WEDDING CELEBRATION — A social evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wood on Sept. 17th, on the occasion of their 30th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Wood were agreeably surprised on returning from Summerside to find their friends waiting to greet them. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Walter Wood, the guests of honor were escorted to two gaily decorated chairs by LAC Woodruff and Miss Ellen Inga. Miss Laura Doreen Wood presented the bride with a beautiful bouquet of roses. As a remembrance of the happy occasion an address was read by Earl Inga and a presentation of a Pearl necklace and pearl earrings made by Mrs. Lloyd Ford. An added attraction was the modelling of the bride's hair by Mrs. R. J. Macdonald. The evening was spent in music and song, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Raynor capably providing the music. After which a buffet lunch was served.

New Allied Invasion is Shaping up off Greece

LONDON, Sept. 21 — (AP) — German positions as Crete, was disclosed in an Allied communique from the Cairo command, which said also of air attacks spread from Crete to Venice. A little later which Allied forces were officially declared to have landed.

This was begun the development of the extreme right wing of the immense Allied invasion line now being drawn up from the Aegean Sea in the southeast to the Ligurian Sea facing Genoa and the French Riviera on the west. The occupation of Kos airfield by British airmen and the fact that they already are operating from there, directly menacing such an continent.
