Premier's Neglect Of Farmers Interests In First District Exposed

"Farmer" Premier's Opposition to Exhibition Grants and General Neglect of His Duties as Minister of Agriculture Assailed By Conservative Speakers At Palmer Road Meeting.

At the joint political meeting at Palmer's Road on Monday night, Premier Lea was strongly denounced by Mr. Tanton, (Con.), candidate as always trying to discredit exhibitions and showing a lack of sympathy with the farmers of West Prince.

Mr. Peter Callaghan acted as chairman of the meeting, and kept excellent order, a few Liberal howlers who had been carefully planted in the audience failed to get in their work and after they had been quelled good order prevailed.

Mr. J. J. Chaisson, (Con.), the first speaker, dealt particularly with the road question, which under the Richards and Williams Government of Tignish and Elmsdale, is causing a good deal of concern to the electorate of the west. The roads under the management of these Liberal superintendents is anything to brag about. The road masters have not much say in the matter; Mr. Campbell had said at several meetings that the road question was an important one. It certainly is to the electors of the West as they do not think they have been given a square deal.

Mr. Chaisson's address was received with great applause. Mr. Aeneas Gallant, (Lib.), compared the per capita debt of this Province with that of British Columbia and said that the Liberal debt was only $67,000 more than the Conservatives.

Mr. Wilfred Tanton, (Con.), scored over his opponent, showing up Mr. Campbell's misrepresentation of the interest on the public debt. After much effort Mr. Campbell was forced to admit that the figures were given in conversation with the provincial auditor.

Mr. Gordon, Liberal representative in the Provincial Legislature during the last four years, was severely taken to task as was his friend, Premier Lea, for their lack of sympathy with the farmers of the Western part of the Island. Some heated remarks were given on both sides. Mr. Tanton stated that it was the Conservatives who had first given the grant to exhibitions in the west. Premier Lea, as Minister of Agriculture, did not consider it was worth while to give a grant to the West of the Province. Mr. Gordon in trying to defend his colleague, got deeper into the mire.

Mr. Tanton recalled a certain meeting of the West Prince Exhibition Association when Mr. Gordon made the statement, that he did not know there was such a thing as an exhibition. He was sure that 35 years ago, exhibitions were held, that the farmers dug down in their pockets for the money for the prizes, and the live stock was better in those days. The grant did not seem to be much good to the farmers.

When the Liberals came into power, they took off the grant, but were forced to put it back again.

Cheerful and Loyal Comrad ship Between King and Haydon

In the committee's report there were many references to Senator Haydon and the fact that the Senator was a close personal friend of his own, Mr. King said. He was, and he continued to be. If he were asked to describe the relationship he would do it in the words of Mr. Spender, referring to Sir Robert Hudson:

"It was one of cheerful and loyal comradeship between men who believed in the principles of the party and who believed that in serving that party they were serving the country."

He had been selected leader of the Liberal party in 1919 at a national convention, said Mr. King. At that time a national organization was established, with various officers. Senator Haydon consented to act as secretary of the national office.

Concerning by-elections that took place in 1929, Mr. King said he had "no knowledge of the organization of the campaign. I did not regard it as part of my duties. I could not be head of the party, if I had in addition, the obligations of organizing political campaigns."

"In the general elections of 1921 I had no knowledge of how the campaign was run except to go to speak where I was told to go by those in charge."

"I did not know who contributed to the funds of the party in that year or in the elections of 1925, 1926 or 1930. I took exactly the same position in 1930 as I took in 1921." It was not the duty of a leader of a party "to get out the literature or organize the political campaigns." That example had been set by the parties in Great Britain, said Mr. King. He asked if Mr. Gladstone had knowledge of the political organization of his party, or Asquith, Bonar Law or Lord Balfour.

Leader Badly Muddled

OTTAWA, July 31.—A lively clash in the House of Commons just before midnight between Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King and Premier R. B. Bennett featured the closing minutes of Mr. King's Speech on the Beauharnois projects. He was discussing campaign funds.

Mr. King could not speak of the Conservative party he said, but he could speak of the Liberal party in Great Britain, whose political organization was separate and distinct from the parliamentary party. The Opposition leader explained from the memoirs of Sir Robert Hudson, secretary of the organization, as edited by James A. Spender, former editor of the now defunct Westminster Gazette, how the whole work of the political campaign was kept apart from the functions of the Prime Minister. That, in Mr. King's view was the correct course; and that indicated the difference between himself and Mr. Bennett. The Prime Minister was sincere in his view, that, as head of the party, he should have knowledge of the party funds.

"When and where did he say that?" interjected Mr. Bennett. "If his remarks meant anything tonight," said Mr. King, "he blamed me."

"No" said the Premier. "Then let us understand each other. I take the view," said Mr. King, "that it is not the duty of the leader of the party to have knowledge of the party funds."

Receiver of Stolen Goods a Criminal

"I have always held that the receiver of stolen goods is a criminal" retorted Mr. Bennett. The Prime Minister evaded questions of importance with some smart remark, Mr. King rejoined. The country would not find in his answer what was his view with respect to campaign funds or to the organization for that purpose. It was not the duty of the leaders to have to do with those matters.

Mr. King proceeded with his speech. Later on, another incident enlivened the speech of the Opposition leader in which both he and the Prime Minister figured. Having quoted a statement made during the investigation in which R. O. Sweeney, president of Beauharnois, said that contributions were made to political funds, not for favors received but for those to come, Mr. King asked what the country must think if the Prime Minister knew the source of the Conservative party funds. How about the various tariff changes, he suggested—the aids to manufacturers, the automobile industry, the reductions in income tax and so on.

"I do not believe the Prime Minister . . ."

"It is a disgrace," interrupted Mr. Bennett. "What is a disgrace?" asked the Opposition leader.

"You have been making insinuations all evening," declared the Premier.

The only insinuation was if the Prime Minister had knowledge of every individual who had contributed to the campaign funds, said Mr. King. The country would be in a much happier frame of mind if Mr. Bennett did not know what contributions had been made by the textile manufacturers, the wealthy men and the various concerns whose industry had been subsidized by the policies of the Government. He was not reflecting on the integrity of
