Evangelization Of Canadian Life Is Topic

Rev. Dr. Legate Tells How It Can Be Brought About In Inspiring Sermon.

In connection with the special services being held this week for the evangelization of Canadian life, Rev. Dr. R. Moorhead Legate preached an appropriate and highly appreciated sermon in St. James Church yesterday forenoon. Taking as his text, St. Matthew VI:10: "Thy Kingdom Come," Dr. Legate said:

In our daily life, in the doing of our various tasks, things go better and things are done better if we have a certain plan in our mind and a definite end in view. Such a way of doing things encourages concentration and earnestness and gives us the feeling that our work is worth while. And that is exactly the idea that lies in the heart of our text, "Thy Kingdom Come."

The way of life which our Lord Jesus Christ brought into the world was no misty, uncertain theory about things, but it was, on the contrary, a great exact, clear, intelligible purpose with a clear-cut goal in front of it, and that goal was the bringing of every human life into the enjoyment of God's will, into the enjoyment of the love of God, and into willing service for the promotion of the glory of God. In other words, Jesus Christ came to found a kingdom, not a little kingdom of inconsiderable extent, and of narrow influence, and of slender resources, but a kingdom which should embrace all humanity, which should be in complete control of every human thought and purpose, and which should be rich in every beautiful possession which the heart of mankind at its best longs to own.

Jesus Christ came to found a kingdom in which righteousness would take the place of sin, in which peace would take the place of violence and of war, in which happiness would take the place of distress and sorrow. And such is the Kingdom of God. As we drive through this beautiful Island of ours in these autumnal days when, to me at least, the glory and beauty of nature's landscape reaches its highest pitch; as we see the leafage wide splashed with colors that no artist could reproduce, as we catch that liquid touch in the autumn sunlight that no other season seems to be able to create, as we watch the added shades of blue that autumn gives to the sea, and the complexion of the sky that seems to be washed cleaner by the autumn rains; when we see all this, can we help saying to ourselves, "What beautiful designs have been conceived in the heart of God, and wrought by His hands!" And as we pursue the thought, and contrast with the exquisite beauty of nature, the actual conditions of human life and human society; when we see the sin, the suffering, the selfishness around us; when we think of the destruction of men, women and children that is going on in Spain and China; when we take note of broken hearts, and unemployment and the many forms of human need that are incessantly crying out for relief, can we help saying: "Surely this is not what God meant the world to be! If He has made nature so beautiful must it not also be part of His design that human nature and human conditions should be just as beautiful! And in saying that, we have hit the nail exactly on the head. That is God's design, and that is why Jesus Christ came to establish the Kingdom of God upon earth. And this is the mightiest and grandest undertaking that has ever been planned and attempted—that God should obtain the full homage and the absolute service of all mankind. That men and women everywhere should be brought into their right relations with Him, and with one another.

It is not yet an actuality. It is far from being an actuality. But it will be an actuality, we have His word for that. His purposes cannot fail. The cross of His Son, Jesus Christ, that perfect demonstration of divine love, cannot be defeated. That beautiful doctrine of faith and hope and love which Jesus came preaching in this world of oppression and impurity, of malice and sin, was not love's labor lost. We can build securely on the conviction so elegantly expressed by Tennyson: "I can but trust that good shall fall, at last, far off, at last to all, and every winter change to spring." Jesus would never have taught us to pray this petition of the Lord's prayer if there had been a doubt of the possibility of it being answered. When the faithful heart heart prays "Thy Kingdom Come" it asks for something that God wills. And the very repetition of the prayer is the very repetition of

R. C. M. P. Seek Man In Robbery And Assault

Royal Canadian Mounted Police today are seeking an unidentified man who robbed and criminally attacked Miss Margaret Smith, 70 year old New Glasgow woman at her home on Thursday night last.

Miss Smith, who lives alone on the old homestead two miles from the Hunter River-Rustico paved highway, locked both doors of her residence before retiring, police said. About 11:30 she was awakened by an intruder in her room. When she asked what he wanted the man seized her by the throat. $20.00 in Miss Smith's purse was taken by the robber, police said. Entrance to the house was made through a window which had been left unfastened.

When the man left Miss Smith waited a few minutes before running to the nearest neighbor and summoning aid. Police were notified and an immediate search started. The authorities were hampered in their search by the lack of definite clues. Fingerprints were being sought in an endeavour to solve the case. A general description of the man was given them by Miss Smith, police said.
