Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company

6 p. c. First Mortgage Bonds
These Bonds are due July 1st, 1911 and interest is payable 3 p. c. January 1st and 3 p. c. July 1st.

Denominations of $100 and $500.
In addition to the entire assets of the Nova Scotia Telephone Company, the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company has absolute control of all the independent telephone companies operating in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island which are owned by its directors to have any value for revenue purposes.

The company owns valuable patent rights for utilizing telephone wires simultaneously for the purpose of telegraphing and telephoning without affecting the efficiency of either service.
The company holds a 99 year lease of the submarine copper wire cable connecting up the Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia Telephone systems.

A number of profitable leases of the Company's telephone lines for telegraph purposes have been made.
We have looked carefully into the merits of this issue and recommend these bonds as an absolute safe investment yielding a very attractive interest return considering the class of the security.

Price for and accrued interest
Yielding about 6 p. c.
Circular giving full particulars will be mailed upon request.

THE LAW REACHES HIM ON THE THRESHOLD OF HOUSE OF DEATH

An Eye for an Eye Was David Laskowitz's Precept, and He Pays Penalty

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Of course, the law is the law, whether it be that of the Talmud framed by the fathers of many ages ago, or the kind that comes from Albany; whether it be the ordinances Moses brought down from Sinai, or what His Honor would try to make you hear as the elevated trains clatter by the right court—it is all the law just the same and it must be abided by, as no one would have told you quicker than old David Laskowitz.

He knew, no better, for he had been reared in orthodox fashion since the time he was old enough to 'save his tuppence and to adorn his young shoulders with a talithah. And there was no compromise in the law that had been taught him with rods and ferules; the law of justice, the law of retribution, the law of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. 'Pof, you see, they know but one testament in the synagogues of the 'hill' sections of Newark, and that is where old David lived. Talk to them there will look at you strangely and tap their brows and shake their heads. So it was that when Samuel Wanger, who was only twenty-seven years old—young enough almost to be old David's grandson, died early yesterday, and there were those who blamed David for his death, the aged son of Abraham plucked at his beard and shrugged. Maybe he had been responsible and maybe not, but it was the law. Young Samuel had owed him money for rent and David had put him and his wife and babies in the street because they could not pay. True, it was only one of the squalid tenements in Prince Street, but then they bring money, and was not that money rightfully due to David.

GOES TO HOUSE OF DEATH

He was sorry, but life was not his to give or to take away. He laughed when he remembered they said he was worth $75,000 or $80,000—so many thousands he never would have missed Samuel's few pennies—but it was his money, was it not? Had he not worked and toiled and slaved for it? But there was no mirth in his laugh. He was sorry Samuel had died just then. He resolved yesterday to go over to Prince street to see what he could do. He lost no time in going and he had no trouble in finding what had been the home of young Wanger. He started in, and then he remembered, and retracing his steps, he went into a neighbor's house, where the body lay and the young widow and babies cried over it. He learned that David had died of heart disease, they said, the very night he and his family had been put into the streets, but that was all he learned. David was sorry he had gone, for there were many women there. They sat on small stools or on the floor and rocked themselves and wailed and moaned. He had been to shivas before, but none like this. Never had there been such sorrow outside the door. He knew better than any other in the world. And they glared at him, with their fierce, black eyes, as if he had done it. Truly, he was sorry he had come.

At last quietly, stealthily, he arose. He had kept near the door and there was a good chance to get out quietly. But he reckoned wrongly. They were watching him, all of them, watching him like the keen eyed, sharp clawed bird of the wilderness. Hardly had he gained his feet before the outbreak came. It was like a sand storm in the desert. He was blinded and he was deafened. He saw shapes come toward him like harpies. He heard words in the old Chaldaic he had not heard since he was a boy and his father had striven to teach him, with many a heavy blow.

MOURNERS ANATHEMIZE HIM

What the words were he did not know. They were curses-of that much he was sure; anathema maranatha on him and his, on all that was and all that should be his. Might the souls of his children's children be blighted! Might pestilence and penury be the portion of him and his for all time! Might his sins descend—not to the third or the fourth generation—but until his seed had been blotted from the earth, and the bones of him had bleached and rotted in the sun. Anathema maranatha—that was the last word.

He wrapped his tunic about his head and fled, affrighted, but they followed him. His terror grew with their rage. Once he stumbled on the step and nearly fell, but he was up again and on. He felt something in his head swelling and it was hard to breathe, and yet there was something—that God of Justice of his perhaps—that still bore him up. He made a gesture as if for mercy. It might have been, but one cannot tell, for he had reached the foot of the steps when he turned and looked back. Then he wrapped his tunic about his head again and sighed, and sank slowly, very slowly, to the stones of the sidewalk. They were upon him, and furiously they tore away the old garment that covered his face. For a moment they looked at him. Then, one by one, they turned and went back to their own dead. There was no further need for vengeance.

1000 REWARD $100
The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, taken internally, acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the cause of the disease, and curing the patient, without any pain or injury to the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

EARTH CONTENT
When our two souls stand up erect and strong, Face to face, silent, drawing nigh and nigher. Until the lengthening wings break into fire. At either curved point—what bitter wrong Can the earth do to us, that we should not long Be here contented? Think in mounting higher. The angels would press on us and aspire To drop some golden orb of perfect song.

Into our deep, dear silence. Let us stay Rather on earth, Beloved—where the unlit Contrarious moods of men recoil away. And isolate pure spirits, and permit A place to stand and love in for a day. With darkness and the death-hour rounding it.

MAN CAN SEE THROUGH THE SIDE OF HIS HEAD.

Extraordinary statements are made by a London civil engineer respecting the human aura, and he declares that under certain circumstances it is possible to see to a certain extent through the side of his head or even behind him.

G. P. Lewis, a civil engineer in the city, partly as a hobby and partly for business reasons, has for some years been experimenting in radio-activity.

"Between two and three years ago," he said, "I went to Leland,

Your Business Depends on Your Advertising

Your advertising is your card of introduction—the only means you have to place your business before the public. And its the way you appeal to the public that brings the business. Now, if your advertising is the haphazard undignified kind it will not attract attention or create confidence.

Proper advertising and modern methods are the secrets of success. You know your business and we are ready to co-operate with you to strengthen your advertising. The charge will not allow you to think of wasting your time with a branch that requires endless study.

near St. Ives, in Cornwall, where it was believed there were considerable deposits of radio-active substances. Lewis said that, carrying his experiments further, and covering his eyes with his right arm, he saw, through the fleshy part of it, his left hand surrounded by the "golden glow." He also investigated what, for want of a better word or phrase, he called "brain-matter-vision."

"It is alleged," he said, "and I believe correctly, that the absolutely blind have something, not touch, or hearing, or smell, which enables them to see, ever so slightly. In the condition I was in, after the tests in the dark room, I could see in a way through the side or back of the head."

Lewis considers this material much more wonderful than radium, and believes that it can be used for a great variety of scientific and industrial purposes.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11, 1903. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Sirs,—I came across a bottle of your MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to let me use it for a very bad sprain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very mildly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know of one of your agents that is closest to Baltimore so that I may obtain some of it. More Money for the Small Dealers

The big man isn't big in spite of the telephone—it's because of it, to a certain extent.

If you're satisfied with the profits your great-grandfather made, if you just want to eke out a bare existence from your business, if more business don't look good to you—well, a phone will be just in the way—a bothersome ornament.

But, mark it down plain, if you want more business, a larger and better class of customers, straight tips on all the markets, the most profitable of inside information and the respect of your customers and envy of your competitors—in short if you want success—you'll see what we can do for you, and you won't waste time over it either.

The phone will bring you business—it will prove its worth in better returns, in actual additional cash in your till.

Let Contract Dept. prove these facts to you.
