

IN MEMORIAM

MR. JOSEPH M. MCNEILL

The death occurred at West Cape April 12th, of Mr. Joseph McNeill, a prominent farmer of this section of the province. The deceased had attained the ripe age of 87 years and 7 months. On October 18th, 1893 he sustained a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered; on March 5th, of the present year he suffered another attack of the same nature which affected him until he gradually weakened until the above mentioned date he passed away to the Beyond.

Mr. McNeill was born in 1842, the date of his early life as a flour miller. Sixty years ago he removed to West Cape where he was for several years employed in the mills owned by the late Mr. David McWilliams. At the end of this period he decided to devote his attention to farming and purchased a farm in West Cape.

His wife who was previous to her marriage, Miss Sarah McWilliams, preceded him by eleven years. They remain to mourn their loss their son, Allie and his daughter-in-law who live on the homestead, and were cared for him during his last illness. He also a sister, Mrs. John McNeill, (Flora) New Carlisle, P. Q., and several nieces and nephews. The following brothers and sisters predeceased him: John, New York, U. S. A., Daniel, Wellington, P. E. I., Mrs. Mary McDonald, Summerside, and Mrs. Margaret McNeill, Springfield, P. E. Island.

He was frequently visited during his illness by his pastor, Rev. Louis Callaghan, who administered to him the last consoling rites of the Catholic Church. Thus fortified, strengthened and resigned to die he severed all earthly associations and went to receive his reward. The late Mr. MacDonald possessed many of friendships finest traits, and gifted by nature with a friendly personality, he made a wide circle of friends who found it a pleasure to visit his hospitable home. There his friends and relatives from all parts of the Island enjoyed many pleasant hours and there the stranger was made to feel the warmth of a sincere welcome. He took a deep interest in all that pertained to the welfare of the community, the school, and the church, and was ever ready to contribute to any worthy cause. While all shall miss George in the activities of the outside world it is in his own home, especially, where the vacant chair cannot be filled, will his death be felt most keenly.

JOHN GEORGE MACDONALD

Again the parish of Little Pond has been called upon to bear the loss of another of its highly respected and most esteemed parishioners—John George MacDonald, who passed away at his residence Saturday, March 29th.

The deceased was born in Little River fifty-three years ago, and was one of the few who never left his home where, by his industry and perseverance he built up one of the finest homesteads in this locality.

Some months ago, owing to ill health, he retired from active work and his friends hoped that after taking a rest cure they would see him well and strong again, and all that skillful nursing and devoted care of his wife, mother, and family could do was done to bring him back to health, but God willed otherwise, and almost before those near and dear to him realized it his soul went forth to God.

He was frequently visited during his illness by his pastor, Rev. Louis Callaghan, who administered to him the last consoling rites of the Catholic Church. Thus fortified, strengthened and resigned to die he severed all earthly associations and went to receive his reward.

The late Mr. MacDonald possessed many of friendships finest traits, and gifted by nature with a friendly personality, he made a wide circle of friends who found it a pleasure to visit his hospitable home. There his friends and relatives from all parts of the Island enjoyed many pleasant hours and there the stranger was made to feel the warmth of a sincere welcome. He took a deep interest in all that pertained to the welfare of the community, the school, and the church, and was ever ready to contribute to any worthy cause.

While all shall miss George in the activities of the outside world it is in his own home, especially, where the vacant chair cannot be filled, will his death be felt most keenly.

for it was there that his thoughtful and respectful attitude to his mother, his affection and kindness to his sister, and his loyalty and tenderness to his wife and family won for him that bond of love which united them all in a happy home.

Despite the bad condition of the roads, friends from far and near came to see his mortal remains and to pay a last tribute of respect by following his remains to Little Pond Church, where Requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. Dr. Callaghan, after which he was tenderly laid to rest by his brother members of the Souris Council Knights of Columbus, of which there was quite a representation of members, among whom was Rev. A. L. Sinnott, Rollo Bay.

The pall bearers were James A. E. MacDonald, Edward MacDonald, Henry MacDonald, J. D. Steele, Temple Whalen, and Leo Fay.

He leaves to mourn a sorrowing mother, his wife (nee Lucetta Steele) and ten children all at home; also one sister Mrs. Alex. A. MacDonald, Little Pond, to all of whom the heartfelt sympathy of the community goes out in their hour of sorrow. May his soul rest in peace.

EASTER CONCERT AT GLENWOOD UNITED CHURCH

On the evening of Sunday, April 20th, there was presented at the United Church at Glenwood a well-arranged Easter programme for which much credit is due to all who contributed to its success. Particular mention should be made of Mrs. E. L. McDougall who was the accompanist on this occasion and who also trained the children for their parts and Mrs. Wm. E. McDougall who assisted in making the necessary arrangements.

The programme opened with a chorus, Risen Victorious—by the choir, followed by responsive scripture reading, after which prayer was offered by the pastor, Rev. W. S. Loring. Mr. Alvin McIsaac sang a solo, Morning Divine, of which the chorus was rendered by the choir. Then came a duet and chorus, Bells of Triumph, by Mrs. D. A. McPherson and Mrs. Clarence McWilliams. A recitation, the Syrian Mother, was given by Norma Boulter, followed by an anthem, Portals of Glory, consisting of a quartette rendered by Messrs Burton Boats, E. L. McDougall, and Webster Boulter, Mrs. Clarence McWilliams, and Mrs. Elbert Betts, a solo by Mrs. E. L. McDougall and Mrs. Clarence McWilliams and a chorus by the choir. The next number was an exercise in which several children recited an appropriate stanzas and then placed on a white cross over-arched with green their offerings which were enclosed in envelopes having on them letters which formed the title words "Gifts for Him". This was carried out by Muriel Betts, Erma McIsaac, Violet Currie, Norma Boulter, Della Boulter, Olive Gorrill, Margaret McDougall, Doris Boulter, Myrtle Betts, Jean Boulter, and Phyllis McWilliams. There followed a chorus of mixed voices when "There was a Cross" was sung by the choir. In the next exercise the spirit of faith was represented by Hazel Currie, while several children repeated suitable scripture verses and outlined with purple violets a silver shield arranged against a background of evergreens which typified "The Shield of Faith". In this exercise were Pearl, Vivien and Eleanor Gorrill and Vera Currie. Olga, Orville and Glennys Betts, Leland Gilchrist, Keith McDougall, Lorne Boulter, Florence McWilliams and Vera Oulton. Deadwood Dick Dies At 85 With His Boots Off

Wild West Hero of Countless Exploits Joins Fabled Company of Pioneers.

DEADWOOD, S. D., May 8.—Deadwood Dick Clark joined Wild Bill Hickok, Calamity Jane, Poker Alice and the rest of the fabled galaxy of the West's most famous pioneers today.

He died with his boots off, and that he regretted. Death of cancer in a hospital room here was a far cry from Richard Clark's tumultuous 85 years, most of which he battled through as a pony express rider, stage coach guard and Indian fighter.

Clark, who spent his youth dodging bullets along the Deadwood trail and thereby became a hero of a whole generation of dime novel readers, was survived by a daughter in Wyoming and a son in the interior of South Dakota.

Last of Company

All of his old pals, the swash-buckling gentry who used horses instead of automobiles and pistols instead of fountain pens to accomplish their business, died off one by one

Boats. The next number was an exercise in which seven older girls formed a semi-circle around three tiny tots, Elaine Gorrill, Letitia and Bernice Betts who held the ends of several long lavender ribbons to the other ends of which were attached the words, Hope, Joy, Faith, Love, Peace, Mercy, and Life. Each girl recited a stanza telling how these blessings are found "At Calvary's Cross." The older girls in this exercise were Margaret McDougall, Doris Boulter, Erma McIsaac, Violet Currie, Muriel Betts, Norma Boulter, Olive Gorrill. This exercise was followed by a trio by Mrs. D. A. McPherson and Mr. and Mrs. E. L. McDougall.

Recitation "Little Flowers" by Phyllis McWilliams, a chorus, Far Away by the choir. A short address by the Rev. Mr. Loring was followed by a chorus, "Low in the Grave He Lay," this was the closing number of the program which was much enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. c.

until Deadwood Dick of all that colorful parade was the only remaining member.

He clung to his long, flowing curls, his high boots and heavily beaded and fringed buckskin suit. His trusty 45 always swung at his hip, even though his duties in later years consisted of making automobiles comfortable at the tourist camp of which he was assistant manager.

Edward Wheeler, who used the pen-name of Ned Buntline, wrote of Deadwood Dick's exploits, both real and imaginary, in a series of 64 paper backed thrillers.

Buntline said that Deadwood Dick was a road agent before he reformed, a kind of Robin Hood of the Far West who spent his waking hours robbing stage coaches and rescuing fair maidens. Several of the latter, said the thrillers, married him out of gratitude, one at a time, of course, after the famed Deadwood had saved them from various and sundry villains.

Had Only One Wife.

Deadwood Dick enjoyed the stories as much as any one else, but the cold fact is that he had only one wife, to whom he was devoted until she died a few years ago. And, as for his being a stage-coach robber, Deadwood Dick merely pointed to the smooth butt of his big 45. There was not a notch in it. He never killed a white man, and as for Indians, he considered them too insignificant to count.

He achieved his greatest fame as guard of the Cheyenne-Deadwood stage. During all the years he sat atop the big coach beside the driver while it jounced through the Black Hills, not one ounce of gold was lost or one passenger wounded, despite the desperate road agents and the semi-civilized Indians who infested the country.

Bishop Murray Is Consecrated

ARCHBISHOP CASEY AIDS AT CEREMONIES HELD IN ST. ANNE'S, MONTREAL

MONTREAL, May 8.—For the first time in the history of the Roman Catholic Church in Quebec a native-born son of French parentage was raised to the episcopate today when Right Rev. Gerald Murray was consecrated as Bishop of Victoria, B. C. The ceremony, which was one of great brilliance, commenced at 9:30 o'clock this morning in historic St. Anne's Church and concluded tonight when the newly consecrated Bishop preached in St. Patrick's, in which parish he was born 45 years ago.

The Apostolic delegate to Canada, Most Rev. Andrea Cassulo, D. D., officiated at the consecration ceremonies this morning, assisted by Most Rev. Timothy Casey, D. D., Archbishop of Vancouver, B. C., and Right Rev. Alphonse Deschamps, D. D., auxiliary Bishop of Montreal. Leading officers of the Church from points throughout the Dominion were present at the consecration.

A touching incident occurred just after the consecration ritual had been completed, when the new Bishop left his throne, and, led between the archbishops, walked through the aisles to bless the congregation. The first to receive the blessing and kiss the Bishop's ring were his aged mother and father and a brother and sister.

The special preacher at the consecration was Archbishop Neil McNeil, D. D., of Toronto. Among those who represented the laity were Mayor Camille, Houde, of Montreal, and Hon. C. J. Doherty, former Minister of Justice. At the service in St. Patrick's tonight the new Bishop was welcomed by the parish priest, Father Gerald McShane, S. S., and an address bearing the homage of the laity was read by Hon. Mr. Doherty.

Among out-of-town members of the Catholic clergy were Archbishop Thomas O'Donnell, D. D., of Halifax; Bishop Morrison, D. D., of Antigonish, and Bishop Renouf, D. D., of St. Georges, Nfld.

Oriental Cruelty Related In Court

PIR OF PAGARO FACES CHARGE OF MURDERING WOMAN IN FORTRESS

MARACHI, India, May 8.—An amazing tale of Oriental cruelty and vengeance was narrated by witnesses at the trial of the Pir of Pagaro, one of the most influential religious leaders in the Upper Sind, today. The Pir, arrested in his fortress some weeks ago, was charged with the murder of a woman named Mar-iam.

A woman named Emma, who testified she was one of the Pir's harem, said he thrashed her with an iron-tipped thong until she fainted. When she revived he ordered her to cut mango trees and when she protested she said the ruler threatened to burn her alive.

It was during this fit of rage, Emma testified, that the Pir told her he had murdered Mar-iam and two other women, named Omhmed and Nawazali. He threatened her with the same fate, she said.

The son of the murdered woman, Ibrahim, was called to the stand. He said the Pir had ordered his eyebrows shaved and his eyelashes cut and after blackening his face, chained him in a cage in the Pir's residence for nearly four years. The punishment, Ibrahim said, was a result of his accidentally breaking an oil cup on an engine on which he was working.

Other charges growing out of the raid and arrest of the Pir include illicit gun-running and inciting to revolt.
