APOLOGY

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify that I, Margaret McInnis, wife of Patrick McInnis, Elliotvale, P. E. I. did start a false report about John Lafferty and I do hereby apologize for same, in regard to scandal and impure actions with a certain party. I did it with the intention of blackening his good name and to ruin the good reputation and character of the said John Lafferty, his father and other members of his family for which I had no reason to do, and I deeply apologize for doing such a low, mean and contemptible action and I earnestly trust and pray that the same will have no lasting reflection on the good name of John Lafferty, his father or any other member of said family and I agree to pay the cost of this advertisement and the trouble I have caused the said family.

A SUITOR TOO MANY
By MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 31
ANOTHER JEALOUS HUSBAND

May Varney was in the dressing-room at the Darlington home when Dorothy arrived.

"You look like the Queen of Sheba," May remarked, eyeing the gold lace gown enviously. "And there's no doubt that you've got a millionaire beau."

"Why?" laughed Dorothy. "May pointed to the orchids. 'That's the new variety that Sherman is exploiting. They say he's imported them from South Africa and that he's asking outrageous prices.'"

"Really?" murmured Dorothy. "Who is he?" demanded May. "Who is who?"

"The new suitor?" "I haven't the slightest idea," laughed Dorothy, and left Mrs. Varney in a vast state of bewilderment. Lila hurried up to her, as she entered the ballroom, and squeezed her hand reassuringly.

"Dot, you're a wonder! You got me off in fine shape. Herbert hasn't asked another question about where we spent the afternoon. He's very formal and dignified, but he'll get over that, after a while."

"I'm sorry to steal your flowers," Dorothy whispered. "May's just been telling me that they are very rare and expensive."

Lila sighed. "Poor Jack! Isn't that just like him! He's giving what money he has to reimburse the government for that insurance, and now he buys rare orchids!"

"I think it's rather sporting," murmured Dorothy. "By the way, there was a note with the flowers. 'Didn't I see it?' Lila made a wry grimace."

"I put it away with your letters in my studio. You can get it tomorrow."

Lila shook her head. "Like fun I can! Herbert laid down the law on the way up here in the car. He said I was to make no more luncheon engagements this week. I am to lunch with him every single day."

"What about Captain Farquhar?" "That's just the point. Dot, will you be an angel and telephone him for me tomorrow. Tell him that I can't meet him for lunch?"

supper she sat beside May Varney. Herbert joined them and at once demanded jealously: "Where is Lila?"

"Probably flirting desperately with some good-looking man," responded May Varney flippantly. Another woman, who enjoyed teasing Herbert, said: "The last time I saw her she was with that fascinating Spaniard, and you can't blame her for lingering. He's simply divine!" She cast up her eyes dramatically and sighed.

"Poof!" scoffed May. "I have no use for foreigners. I detest the whole tribe!" Herbert, who had been looking around worriedly, of half a mind to go look for Lila, turned slowly to stare at May Varney.

"You dislike foreigners?" "May became suddenly conscious of a French heel squarely on her toe."

"Ouch!" she said, and glanced about her indignantly. Her eyes met Dorothy's pleading ones. She had a sudden swift remembrance of a certain afternoon when Dorothy had taken tea with her and had made a confession, over which they had both laughed. She remembered saying: "So I'm cast hereafter for the role of the broken-hearted victim of a foreign romance? Well, I adore novelty!"

Herbert had repeated his question slowly: "You really dislike foreigners, Mrs. Varney?" May's face underwent a change. She lifted eyes of haunting sadness to Herbert and drew him nearer to her.

"Can you ask that—after my bitter, bitter experience?" "I'm sorry—" began Herbert uncomfortably, realizing that his suspicion and jealousy had led him to tread on delicate ground.

The voice of May's husband cut him short. "What's this, May? What do you mean 'bitter experience'?" May was temporarily at a loss for words. There was Herbert, watching her closely; there was also Jack Varney, staring open-mouthed.

"I—we—my family once had a French chauffeur. He—he stole all the silver and threatened to murder us in our beds. If we—had him arrested."

Her fingers reached out surreptitiously to pinch Herbert's arm, as a signal that this story was manufactured solely for her husband's benefit.

Unfortunately, Varney saw her action. His face darkened. "What the deuce is this all about?"

It was Dorothy who created a diversion: "FOR SALE 50 acres best situated land in Province all cleared and under crop. Interested parties should see present crop Potatoes, Turnips, Oats. "Here comes Lila!" she announced cheerfully. "And she's not with the Spaniard." May flashed Dorothy a glance that said, as plain as any words: "The next time I put myself in jeopardy trying to help you out!"

Nevertheless, she was sport enough, later on, to whisper to Herbert: "You understand, don't you? My poor, poor heart."

Shortly afterward, Varney insisted that they go home. As they were leaving, Dorothy heard him saying wrathfully: "Your poor, poor heart, indeed! What's that got to do with this French chauffeur? May, I'm going to get to the bottom of this!" (To Be Continued.)

KELLIHER-HUGHES WEDDING MONDAY IN NEWTON CHURCH. Miss Alice Gertrude Hughes became the bride of Francis Joseph Kelliher last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock when the double ring service performed by the Rev. Fr. P. Driscoll united them in marriage.

The ceremony took place in St. Phillips church, Newton, before a large gathering of relatives and friends who were present from Melrose, Watertown, Newton, Norwood, Fall River, Jamaica Plain, and East Walpole. The floral decorations were of palms, spring flowers and roses and the Lohengrin wedding march was played by Mrs. Flood.

The bride was attended by Miss Minnie F. Eppich of Norwood and the best man was James H. Kelliher, a brother of the groom. The bride was attired in a gown of light blue georgette and wore a gray picture hat to match. Her bouquet was of bride's roses. Miss Eppich wore yellow flowered chiffon with a black picture hat to match and carried Ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid received a string of pearls as a gift from the bride, while the best man's gift from the groom was gold cuff links. The bride received a diamond studded pendant from the groom and her gift to him was a ring.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Statler Hotel for relatives and the more intimate friends. The bride is the daughter of the late William H. and Catherine (McGuirk) Hughes, formerly of Charlottetown, and is a graduate of the Newton Schools. At the time of her marriage she was employed at the New England Spun Silk Company as an operator.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kelliher of 25 Saunders Road, Norwood. He is a graduate of the Norwood School and is employed as pressman by the Berwick-Smith Company. He served with the United States Army during the World War and is a member of the Norwood Lodge of Elks, the American Legion and the M. C. O. F.

After a wedding trip to New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Kelliher will be home to their friends after August 1st, at 7 Rock St., Norwood. (Copied from Boston papers.)

Livestock Market MONTREAL, Aug. 8. — There were 209 cattle including 200 left over, 42 calves, 28 sheep and lambs and 114 hogs on sale today. The cattle trade was very slow with prospects of several lots being held over the week end. Some bulls were being weighed up at $5.00 to $5.35. Butchers cattle were not moving. There were only two small lots of veal calves and prices looked
